Racketeers Feared

Alaskan Oil Rush Has Overtones of 1898

ANCHORAGE (CP) — The Alaskan oil rush begins officially today, with the state government auctioning mineral rights to companies from all over the world.

Proceeds are expected to reach $1,000,000,000.

But state officials are not altogether happy about this sudden influx of big money, fearing a repetition of the wild and woolly scenes of the 1898 gold rush.

They said undesirable effects are already being felt in the cities of Anchorage and Fairbanks, which worked hard for years to lose the Dangerous Dan McGrew image of those hectic prospecting days.

Authorities are concerned that much of the land is being sought by financial interests whose associations are unsavory and whose identity is clouded in mystery.

"These interests make no secret of the fact that they intend to cater to pipeline crews who come to town once in three months for a wild spree," Anchorage Police Chief Milton E. Dankworth said.

There has been an increase in "vicious vandalism" and crime as "irresponsible people" flood into the towns, he said.

Police are ill-equipped to handle a sudden rise in population and only 150 state troopers patrol 586,000 square miles of country.

"We'd be foolish to think big time rackets won't happen here," Dankworth said. "They (racketeers) are going to push for gambling and highlife activities just like it was during the gold rush."

State officials also fear problems from inflation and housing shortages.

Representatives of the world's major oil companies jammed Anchorage for the biggest such lease sale in history.

By nightfall the high bidders will be known and a chartered jet will be flying to New York with cheques from the winning oil companies. Most of the companies will draw cheques on New York banks.

The oilmen assemble in a 600-seat municipal auditorium at 7 a.m Alaska daylight time (Noon EDT) to hand in their sealed bids. The bidding closes an hour later, and state officials said it may be seven hours before the tabulation is completed.

Gov. Keith Miller said the state has set "floor bids" on each of the 179 tracts up for lease. "Floor bids" are confidential figures on how much the state considers each lease to be worth. Alaska won't sell the leases for less, Miller said.

Gerda Hits Nova Scotia

HALIFAX (CP) — Hurricane Gerda, spent after lashing the Atlantic coast with rain and winds of up to 140 miles an hour, moved across parts of Quebec today, leaving the Maritimes with a major clean-up job and an undetermined amount of damage.

Nova Scotia's south shore bore the brunt of the storm. Winds gusting to 80 miles an hour affected shipping and airline schedules, tore down telephone and power lines and toppled trees.

The CNR ferry Confederation, which sails between Borden, P.E.I., and Cape Tormentine, N.B., docked at Tormentine after heavy seas kept her from entering port for two hours. She carried 25 passengers and 15 vehicles.

The CNR ferry Bluenose which operates between Bar Harbor, Me., and Yarmouth, N.S., remained in port but was expected to resume service sometime today.

Other ferries were operating normally.

Fishing vessels of several nationalities tied up at St. John's, Nfld., but at Halifax port officials said only a few ships entered port to wait out the storm.

At least five incoming commercial flights and about the same number of outbound planes were delayed or diverted at Halifax International Airport, an airlines official said.

Power failures plunged wide sections of the province into darkness.

A. R. Harrington, president and general manager of the Nova Scotia Light and Power Co. Ltd. said late Tuesday that considerable damage was done to power lines in the Yarmouth area. There were also disruptions in parts of the Annapolis Valley and Halifax.

There were no immediate reports on how the province's $6,000,000, apple crop fared.

In New Brunswick, Grand Manan Island, off the southwestern coast of the province, was the first area hit by the storm. Winds of more than 80 knots left a trail of damage.

Power commission officials in Saint John reported "trouble all over the place" as the storm moved into the New Brunswick mainland.

Bilingualism Not Yet Practical in Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — Bilingualism is alive in Toronto, but not doing too well.

With a metropolitan population of nearly 2,000,000 and a French-speaking core of only 50,000, Toronto had little reaction to the new Official Languages Act which came into force across Canada Sunday.

The act enforces bilingualism in government departments and agencies and in Crown corporations where there is a "significant demand" for service in both languages.

not ready for bilingualism.

"No, I don't speak French, sir—this is the government of Canada."

That was the way a supervisor at the federal government office in Toronto handled an inquiry from a French-speaking reporter Monday—the day after the new act came into force.

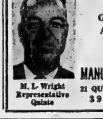
Other calls showed more confusion. Many government departments—when an interpreter could be found—admitted they did not know what action they should be taking.

One conclusion could be drawn from the calls: It will be a long time before the provisions of the act are fully implemented.

The reporter telephoned the secretary of state's department, whose responsibility it is to implement the act. Speaking in French, he asked whether an immigrant from France had any citizenship privileges.

The operator could not understand him.

She transferred him to another official who spoke broken French. He directed him to Canada Immigration.



The immigration clerk could not speak French.

He directed the operator to put the call through to another local which was busy. She asked the reporter to dial another number, but the conversation bogged down until finally a French speaker was found who told the reporter to call citizenship again.

The government departments, however, are not out of order yet in not being prepared for bilingualism.

The new law states that every federal government department or agency, Judicial body or Crown corporation must ensure that in Ottawa or at its head office, and at each of its principal offices in "bilingual districts," it can offer all available services and communicate with the public in both official languages.

No bilingual districts have been declared yet.

BY THE ONTARIO MOTOR LEAGUE

QUESTION: When does the Stratford Festival close this fall?

ANSWER: The closing date of the Stratford Festival is Mid-October.

Automobile Accidents

In the event of an accident be sure to get the license number of the other car, the name, address and telephone number of his driver. It is also a good idea to take names of witnesses as their statements are helpful in determining the facts. Call the police and wait for an on-the-scene investigation, so a report will be filed.

Notify your insurance company as soon as possible after the accident by telephone and letter.

To have repairs made and collect from the insurance company, get an itemized estimate of the damages and the cost of repairs from a garage you choose. Show them to the claims adjuster assigned by the company.

If he agrees with the cost, the car owner can start repairs knowing his claim will be paid. Having repairs done before agreement with the insurance company is reached can be risky, as payment for all or part of the damage may be denied.

QUESTION: At the end of September we would like to drive from Edmonton to Vancouver, B.C. on the New Yellowhead Pass highway. How does this compare with the Trans Canada Highway?

ANSWER: The Yellowhead Pass makes its way through the Rockies a couple of hundred miles north of the Rogers Pass which is the route of the Trans - Canada Highway takes through the mountains. You more or less on a line from Calgary through Banff to Vancouver.

The Yellowhead Pass cuts through the mountains via Jasper, more or less on a line between Edmonton and Vancouver, B.C.

If you want an idea of how scenery is along this new highway, ask someone who has taken a CN trans-continental train west. The Yellowhead follows the path of the CN tracks through the Rockies. But the scenery isn't the only selling point for the Yellowhead. In the first place it's highest elevation is just over 3,000 feet while the Rogers Pass is a mile high at one point and well over 4,000 feet at others. The Yellowhead allows motorists seeking a three week all-Canadian tour to make a circle of the best of BC and Alberta. You can go to the coast via Edmonton and Jasper or the Yellowhead highway and return via Banff and Calgary on the Trans-Canada Highway.

While the Yellowhead is Canada's newest Major highway it's probably the oldest route through the Rockies. History, or legend, says the pass was named after a fair-headed Indian who made a habit of storing his furs in the shadows of the mountains. When the pale-face came looking for a route through the mountains he discovered the cache and named it after the yellow haired Indian.

Dayan Warns Egypt Can Expect Heavier Strikes Than Tuesday's Raid

From AP-Reuters

Israeli Defence Minister Moshe Dayan warned Egypt Tuesday night to expect "even heavier strikes" than the raid across the Gulf of Suez earlier in the day in which Israel reported killing 100 to 150 Egyptians.

Dayan said the amphibious raid by Israeli infantry and tank forces was "one of the most daring" since the six-day war of June, 1967. He said the Israeli troops displayed "an operational ability almost unprecedented in military history."

Israel said the commando force crossed the Gulf of Suez about 3 a.m. and landed near El Hassayer, about 28 miles south of the Suez canal.

The force moved southward for 30 miles and met little or no resistance as it "attacked guard posts, army camps, radar stations, military vehicles and military encampments," an Israeli spokesman said. Then the commandos and their vehicles were picked up and returned across the gulf to Sinai Desert posts which Israel seized from Egypt in 1967.

Israeli officers said the ground troops were backed up by warplanes that struck scores of military targets and delivered a "devastating attack" on a big anti-aircraft missile battery at El Hassayer.

Israel said one Israeli plane was shot down over the gulf, its pilot is missing and only one Israeli soldier was injured.

Egypt claimed its forces downed three Israeli planes, sank two torpedo boats and inflicted heavy casualties. The Israelis were "forced to turn tail" after suffering heavy losses of men and equipment, Cairo radio said.

Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir said in a broadcast that the raid was "meant to strike at the bases and concentrations of the Egyptian Army which have served as a base for commando units laying mines and launching attacks against Israeli planes."

Observers had expected a heavy strike against Egypt for some time in retaliation for recent heavy Egyptian firing across the Suez canal.

A senior member of the Israeli general staff told a news conference that 7,000 to 8,000 Egyptian troops were in the El Hassayer area. He did not reveal the size of the Israeli attack force.

The officer said many Egyptian soldiers fled rather than fight, but he had no estimate of the number of Egyptians wounded.

Asked whether the Israeli Air Force had used any of the Phantom F-4 fighter-bombers it recently acquired from the United States, he replied: "All kinds of planes were used." But Lt.-Gen. Mordechai Hod, the chief of air force operations, said later that all types of aircraft "except for the Phantoms" were used.

Egypt's ambassador to Britain, Ahmen Hassan el Feki, had charged that the raid was an act of escalation which directly resulted from the delivery of the Phantoms. The United States has sold Israel 50 of the planes, and the first shipment arrived Saturday.

Peace Appears in Offing In Montreal School Dispute

MONTREAL (CP) — The St. Leonard school-language crisis continued to simmer today, although one problem facing English-speaking parents—Classroom space for their children—appeared to be solved.

The Protestant School Board of Greater Montreal decided Tuesday to make classrooms available to the 400 Roman Catholic Grade 1 and 2 youngsters who no longer have English-language classes in their own schools.

Meanwhile, Raymond Lemieux, leader of the Ligue pour l'Integration Scolaire which is fighting for the elimination of English in Quebec schools, said he plans to carry out a march in St. Leonard tonight despite police refusal to issue a permit.

A meeting of the league last week degenerated into a pitched battle between supporters of French-only instruction and English-speaking residents.

Under the plan offered by the Protestant school board, the St. Leonard Parents Association, which represents Immigrants and English-speaking residents of the north-end suburb, would pay $25 for each child enrolled in the English classes.

An education department official, who wished to remain unidentified, said the offer "comes down from the heavens and solves our problems without involving principles."

Robert Beale, president of the parents association, said the 400 youngsters involved should register for classes today.

Mr. Beale also urged parents of English-speaking children in Grades 2 to 7 to end their boycott of regular schools which opened Monday.

About 1,200 of St. Leonard's 2,500 English-speaking and Italian immigrant elementary school children took part in the boycott.

Bilingual Grade 2 classes were abolished this fall and under the board's policy, bilingual Grades 3 to 7 will disappear on a year-by-year basis.

Last year's basement classes have been called illegal by Education Minister

Union of Choice Idea Given CUPE Support

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Union of Public Employees agreed Tuesday that a Canadian worker should be able to choose the union he wants.

And in so doing, the group supported an independent union organized here recently by Bruno Zanini who had feuded with an international group.

Delegates to CUPE's national convention, after heated debate, pledged support to "the clear and—democratically expressed desire of the Canadian workers to be represented by the union of their choice."

However, the 660 delegates refused to condemn the international union for "resorting to strong arm coercive tactics to destroy the Canadian Concrete Formers Union."

They deleted this phrase from a resolution put forward by Donald Roach, president of CUPE Local 767.

They said Mr. Zanini's concrete formers "freely decided to form themselves into a Canadian union" which was legal in Ontario although not acceptable to international union officials in the United States.

Mr. Zanini's union was formed in June after the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers' International Union instructed the Toronto local to turn its members over to Local 183 of the Laborers' International Union of North America.

Then, two weeks ago, the Toronto Building Trades Council called a general strike in the apartment building field to force the liquidation of Mr. Zanini's union.

CUPE's members are mostly workers for the various hydro companies, school boards, municipal governments or hospitals.

In another session Tuesday, delegates instructed CUPE's executive to seek a merger with the all-Canadian union, the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers.

On Monday, the delegates asked Mr. Little to talk merger with the Public Service Alliance of Canada, which represents 120,000 federal government employees.

Canadian Icebreaker Frees Manhatten From Six Foot Field

WINTER HARBOR, N.W.T. (CP) — An expedition to find a commercial route through the Northwest Passage suffered its first apparent setback Tuesday when the super oil tanker Manhattan was caught in six-foot thick ice about 30 miles west of Winter Harbour, N.W.T., in Viscount Melville Sound.

Winter Harbour is about 200 miles west of the Magnetic North Pole.

Less than an hour later, the Canadian icebreaker John A. Macdonald steamed alongside the big tanker, easing the ice pressure on it and allowing it to break free.

"Many thanks for a job well done," radioed Manhattan to Captain Paul Fournier of the Macdonald.

The Manhattan's misfortune was attributed to the United States Coast Guard icebreaker Northwind. The Northwind, with one of its six engines out of commission and the ship operating with an estimated half of its 10,000 horsepower, became icebound shortly after midnight Monday.

The Macdonald then broke away from the Manhattan and freed the Northwind. Some four hours later the Northwind announced it again was beset by ice. Despite strenuous efforts by the Macdonald the Northwind was unable to get moving and the decision was made to leave it and continue the Humble Oil Ltd. expedition with the Manhattan and the Macdonald.

The feeling was that the Northwind would get moving again on its own when the pressure eased or it would get assistance from another Canadian icebreaker, probably the D'Iberville.

During the Macdonald's second attempt to free Northwind the Manhattan had stopped in heavy ice conditions.

When it attempted to get under way when rejoined by the Macdonald it was unable to move. It then messaged Macdonald that it appeared to be blocked by ice and requested aid to get moving.

Admiral Tony Storrs, director of marine operations on the expedition, said the Manhattan probably would not have become blocked in the sound if it had not stopped dead for the Northwind rescue attempt. Until then, the big tanker was slicing through ice anywhere from four to eight feet deep with no trouble.

But the Manhattan's failure to get up enough power from a standing start to back the ice could only be a disappointment to the expedition planners despite the mitigating circumstances. Millions of dollars have been poured into the venture designed to prove that tankers of up to 250,000 tons can move oil from Alaska to the eastern U.S. through the Northwest Passage.

Until the Northwind ran into grief, the Manhattan expedition ran like clockwork. Ice conditions were not as demanding as had been hoped but the Manhattan had ceased every available test with flying colors.

Fund Beauty Contest Has Its Own Appeal

By BARRY GRILLS
Staff Reporter

Plans are moving full swing for the United Community Services beauty contest to decide Miss United Appeal of 1969.

The contest is slated for Sept. 18 at Zwick's Island bandshell. It will be part of a week of activities sponsored by the United Community Services as a campaign prelude.

All contestants — the UCS desires 15 — will be sponsored by local industry and will represent that industry in the contest.

The winner, Miss United Appeal of 1969, will participate in the United Appeal canvassing activities in the week following the contest.

Miss United Appeal will receive a cash prize of $100, and a complimentary weekend at the Inn on the Park, in Toronto.

Other prizes include a wrist watch, two round trip tickets via CNR from Belleville to Toronto and an assortment of jewellery from Avon Jewellers Ltd.

In addition to being judged on good looks, each contestant will be required to deliver a one-minute speech on the United Appeal and the judges will take these speeches into consideration in determining the winner.

The contest will be preceded by a motorcade conveying the contestants from the West Moira Street fire hall to Zwick's Island.

At the bandshell, Phil Flagler of radio station CJBQ will act as master of ceremonies for the contest and a panel of five judges will pick Miss United Appeal.

Judges for the event are Mrs. Robin Jeffery, Mrs. Jean Smith, Harry Fast, H. M. Morton and W. A. Thompson.

Jimmy Corradi, local pianist, will plan music for the occasion, and Mrs. Jean Smith, campaign chairman, will present roses and a tiara to the first Miss United Appeal in Belleville.

The first two girls to enter the contest were Miss Peggy Kraft, 21, of Bell Canada and Miss Gail Tweedy, 19, of Avon Jewellers Ltd.

Miss Kraft, a blue-eyed five-foot-six brunette, has lived in Belleville four years and been employed two years as a Bell operator.

The United Community Services beauty competition will be her first, but she has had some modelling experience.

Miss Kraft volunteered for the contest when she heard of its existence, attracted by the prizes and an opportunity to represent her employers.

"I was a bit hesitant at first, but I went ahead with it," she said.

And the beauty contest is just a culmination of activities related to her job that she enjoys.

"I like my job. It's nice for a single girl and you're free. And now I've got an opportunity to be in the contest."

Miss Kraft, an avid horseback rider and swimmer, has some philosophical ideas about beauty contests as well.

"It's a feminine thing. Women are supposed to be beautiful. They're more beautiful than men, anyway."

Miss Tweedy has been an employee at Avon for 16 months as receptionist and stenographer.

She is a brunette and has brown eyes.

She has resided in the Belleville area all of her life and attended Quinte Secondary School.

"I think it's going to be exciting and fun," she said. "I'm waiting for it to happen. I'm really excited."

Travel is in the future for Gail and she also enjoys western music and going out and enjoying herself.

The contest epitomizes some feelings by Gail that men monopolize too much of the world's activities.

"The trouble with men is they don't want women to do anything. A beauty contest is supposed to represent beauty and that's a woman's job."

A Smile From Gail Tweedy

Mott Dinner Next Step In Mobilizing Resources

By Lenny Williamson, Staff Reporter

Three hundred community leaders from four counties will come together September 17 to learn first hand of the Flint, Michigan, community school concept.

Dr. Peter L. Clancy, director of the Mott Program of the Flint Board of Education will address a banquet at Centennial Secondary School on the concept.

The Quinte District Community Council, under the leadership of Alderman Donald Williams, is bringing the Flint program to the attention of educational, municipal, labor, ministerial and law enforcement agencies in the counties of Prince Edward, Northumberland, Lennox and Addington and Hastings.

The banquet is a follow-up to the trip to Flint made last spring by local people to view the accomplishments of that city's program, which co-ordinates service agencies for the development of human resources.

Now, the leader of the Flint program is visiting this district to suggest ways in which local resources can be mobilized to community service. It works on this basis.

The community school concept in Flint is supported by funds from the Mott Foundation and has been in operation for 30 years.

It offers a community education system by encouraging people of all classes in help themselves to a better life and by making schools, government and businesses more responsive to human wants and needs.

Schools are the centre of the program in Flint. They are used as opportunity centres for young and old, operating virtually around-the-clock and around-the-year.

Schools make excellent community centres because they are located to serve their neighborhoods, have facilities, adaptable to community uses, are owned by the public and are non - political.

As well as adult education and re-training, the people of Flint are offered after-hours educational, recreational and social enrichment through courses, discussion groups, seminars and social and sports activities.

Although schools here are now extensively used for night school and meetings of community groups such as Scouts, the Quinte District Community Council is seeking support for a broader-based co-ordinated program.

Involvement of industry, the churches and owners of vacant lots, that could be turned into temporary recreational areas, is sought.

"In the past, people have tended to feel they could look after their own recreational needs," says inspector Ralph Blatchford of Belleville police department, who heads up publicity for the banquet.

"But what about those who cannot? And what about the diminishing space available in a growing population for recreational needs such as ball fields and tennis courts?" he queries.

The Mott program also fosters the co - ordination of existing community services ministering to the aged, infirm, mentally and physically handicapped and the delinquent.

In this area, the Quinte District Community Council sees opportunities for expansion in Belleville and surrounding communities. Among suggestions to be discussed is a plan for involving youth in activities with the residents of Hastings Manor.

Although the legislative basis for community development in the United States differs from that in Ontario, and financing systems are dissimilar, those who made the trip in Flint last spring feel the Quinte district can borrow many U.S. ideas.

Those invited to the Sept. 17 banquet will learn the details from the director of the program in Flint, and hear his views on the adaptation of the program to Quinte district conditions.

Dr. Clancy is responsible to the Mott Foundation and the Flint board of education for the operation and expansion of the program.

He works with the various divisions of the Mott Program, which include adult education, community school and recreation programs in curriculum enrichment; the Big Brothers movement, the Mott Camp for boys, children's health and dental centres, and adult reading program and the vocational guidance for state prison convicts and ex-convicts living in the district.

Dr. Clancy received a bachelor's and master's degree from the University of Michigan and a second MA from Eastern Michigan University. He holds a six-year community school director's certificate and a doctorate from Michigan State University.

He has taught both junior and senior high school and college classes.

No Short Cut for City's Female Barber Into A Profession Dominated by Men

By LINDA GELDART
(Staff Repreter)

It takes a certain degree of courage to contemplate stepping into a male-dominated profession — but, even more courage to stay there.

Mrs. June Clark, Belleville's only female barber, wouldn't go so far as term it courage, because she enjoys what she does, and says pointedly, "I wouldn't think of doing anything else".

She has been barbering professionally for about five years now, and when she looks back to recall how it all started, claims "it was just one of those things I sort of fell into".

This tonsorial artistry goes back to the time when Mrs. Clark can remember her father bringing out the clippers to trim her own curly locks.

"That's where my interest began, I guess," she admits, "and my observation and the will to learn, things just naturally progressed from there."

After applying for her barber's licence, she had to face the actual test itself.

"I was kind of nervous," Mrs. Clark recalled, "because for one thing I was being tested by one of the toughest examiners in Canada — or so I was told."

"That fact alone would have been enough to worry anyone, so disregarding the exam completely," she adds.

But, he passed the test, managing to answer the some 150 questions and complete a hair cut, shampoo, shave and facial.

It wasn't all that simple, though.

"I met with terrific opposition from the male barbers in the city, simply because I happened to be a woman", remarked Mrs. Clark.

"As I heard one barber say — this is a man's profession, and when women start invading the barber shop, it is high time something were done about it".

Mrs. Clark grew determined and stubborn, as women have been known to be at times and the fact that she has several "regular" customers testifies to her success.

"The men who do not want a woman to cut their hair simply don't come into the shop. Sometimes you have to be able to 'keep your cool' if a customer decides to give you a hard time, — you have to be a master of tact".

Mrs. Clark has built-up a loyal army of customers — some of which she attributes to the fact that "men are neater than women".

The kind of barber you are determines the type of customers you get, that is whether you specialize in long hair, or short hair.

"I do every kind of hair," admits Mrs. Clark. "Quite a few teenagers, and business men."

Perhaps one of the brightest spots for her in the time she got the chance to cut Bobby Hull's hair.

"He had seen that he had heard I was the best barber in Belleville. After I finished, he said he would definitely be coming back."

What are the necessary qualifications for a female barber?

"You have to like men better than women," laughingly retorts Mrs. Clark.

"Of course you have to keep your cool, with tact first always. More important you must be able to talk to men about what they are interested in — fishing, hunting and the like."

"I was brought up with four brothers, so maybe I'm just a tomboy at heart. My dream is to have my own shop, with only female barbers."

"But", she sighs, "I find women a little afraid to step into a man's world."

Women Are Neater Than Men

With a tonsorial flourish, Mrs. June Clark, one of the few female barbers in Canada, and the only one in Belleville, is all concentration as she finishes trimming another customer's hair. She enjoys what she does, and admits although the going sometimes gets tough, she would rather fight than switch.

Time Is Ripe

Once Tomato Blows Its Top Canners Are in Trouble

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — The time is ripe for the canning industry in this area.

And even a tomato can blow its top, according to William Greer, Wellington canner. Prince Edward County's tomato crop this year can be noted for its smoothness, he says.

"Last year a dry July followed by a wet August spelled cracked tops in the tomatoes," said the canner.

While Mr. Greer does not anticipate a record tomato crop this season he does feel that the yield will be average and of high quality. His company expect a pack of 30,000 to 35,000 cases of whole tomatoes this season compared to their 1968 pack of 25,000 cases.

Hiring tomato pickers this summer has proved a problem in the county but there is no shortage of peelers in the Greer factory. For this William Greer is grateful. "When you put up a whole pack like we do you are at the mercy of the peelers," he remarked.

The factory operator added that factories with juice lines could "in a pinch" use surplus tomatoes for juice—thus reducing losses. The canner who is strictly packing relies upon peelers to handle the fruit. Greer started its tomato pack during the third week of August and William Greer predicts a fast wind up late this month.

J. Donald Baxter, president of Bloomfield's Baxter Canners also said that this year's tomato crop is of excellent quality.

"We thought last year's was good but this is even better," commented Mr. Baxter.

The Baxter factory is not running at full capacity yet as the tomatoes did not ripen as quickly as expected.

"It will be a good crop this year," said Mr. Baxter enthusiastically, "but it won't be any better than last year's yield."

He remarked that there has been difficulty this season in securing pickers and peelers for the tomato crop.

"This year we had to go into the Deseronto area to get workers," stated Mr. Baxter. A daily advertisement for workers is now being carried by Belleville radio in hopes of getting additional help.

Mr. Baxter can't predict the size of his pack this year as yet but expects his factory to run until the end of this month.

"We have our fingers crossed against frost," said the Bloomfield canner whose factory handles whole pack tomatoes and a juice line.

TV Show Has Timely Shift

HONOLULU (AP) — "I've been prospecting a long time, and finally I've hit pay dirt. This was a different, more confident Jack Lord, enjoying the euphoria of a success.

Last summer the actor seemed uptight. He was working at a furious pace on a new television series, Hawaii Five-O, and the tension was apparent. CBS's most expensive program — at $250,000 per segment—was resting on his shoulders.

The situation worsened when the series failed to generate a respectable rating in the Thursday-at-8 time slot.

Hawaii Five-O was 65th place in the ratings out of 78 shows, and TV insiders had written it off as another costly flop.

"Then on Christmas night Mike Dann (CBS program boss) gave us the best present we could possibly have received," recalled Lord. "He switched the time period to Wednesday at 10. On the at night we were 45th out of 78 shows, and we've been constantly building so that the last rating had us No. 9."

Why did the later time slot make such a difference? Apparently because the series appealed to a more mature audience. Also, the later hour permitted Hawaii Five-O to deal more frankly with matters that wouldn't have been deemed suitable for young viewers.

Now the show is sold out for sponsorship through the 1969-70 season. Said Lord: "If we can make it through two seasons, we ought to be able to last for years. That would suit me fine. I would rather do good TV than bad movies. And considering the stuff that is coming out of Hollywood and Europe these days, I'm glad I'm not doing movies. I'm no prude, 'cuz if you've got to include lacrivious and erotic material in films to succeed nowadays, then I'd rather not be in films."

Lord may be the hardest working actor in television. He's up at 4 a.m. to study his lines, then he jogs a mile along the Kahala beach in front of his condominium apartment, reports to the set at 6:30 a.m. He works a minimum 12 hour day six days a week and one week clocked 84 hours.

Such a schedule will make him a tired but rich actor.

"After five years I'll be able to do what I want," he said.

Rex Harrison Plans Return to Stage

LONDON (CP) — Rex Harrison, making his first stage appearance in nine years, is to star in a new comedy by Canadian playwright George Ridout.

The play, The Lionel Touch, goes into rehearsal next week and is scheduled to open in London the first week of November after a tour of English provincial cities.

It will be Harrison's first West End appearance since he played Professor Higgins in the musical My Fair Lady, and his appearance is a remarkable coup for Hulme, 38-year-old dramatist from Orillia, Ont., who has scored successes in Europe but has yet to find recognition in Canada.

The Lionel Touch is about a painter struggling against bureaucracy, a colorful, raffish character based on a real-life friend of Hulme's who died 18 months ago.

Harrison took only 10 minutes to decide he wanted to do the play after his London agent sent him the script.

Harrison asked Hulme to visit him in his Italian villa at Portofino to discuss the role.

"I was there for about a week," Hulme said in an interview Tuesday.

Nixon Rejection Of Past

NEW YORK (AP) — One may not agree with the conclusions drawn by Theodore H. White in The Making of the President: 1968, but they gave the CBS program Tuesday night a point of view and jumping-off place in an effort to give some shape and form to a jumble of events.

White, writer and political analyst, opened the program by expressing belief that somewhere among the "lunatic events" of the election year—riots, resistance, assassination and an unpopular distant war—"the old politics died." In electing Richard M. Nixon by a narrow popular vote, he maintained, the American electorate "violently reject the past, yet it gave no clear mandate for the future."

Based on White's book of the same name, the television program suffered primarily because there was just too much material to cram into 90 minutes.

While, in White's view, "television colored and shaped every move" of the campaigning, there was not enough revealing, fresh film and tape to illustrate the program's well-written text.

The program was at its best when it used bits of interviews, informal shots, to summarize trends, moods or attitudes. It had a tendency to linger on the more familiar scenes—the shocked partisans when Robert F. Kennedy was shot, the battles of police and young demonstrators at Chicago, the platform speeches.

Many aspects of the campaign defied the camera, particularly the explanations of political tactics. Thus White's smooth script, narrated by Joseph Campanella and occasionally by White himself was most helpful.

TRADE SCHOOL

Not Getting Into College Isn't The End Of The World

In fact, it might be the beginning of your world. A bright new and very rewarding world. The world of computer programming.

Think about it for a minute. Here's a field as big and new and exciting as space exploration. Begging for talented people. And willing to pay them and pay them well.

No, you don't have to go to college to become a computer programmer. But you do have to go to school. A school that has the computers and the people who can teach you how to use them.

And that's ECPI. Electronic Computer Programming Institute, an international educational system with more than 100 training centres and literally thousands of successful graduates.

We've got new IBM equipment and a staff that can teach you everything you have to know. And we can teach you quickly. In days, evening — even Saturdays.

It you're over 17 and a high school graduate or its equivalent take the first step to your new world. Send us the coupon and we'll set up an aptitude test that will tell us — and you — if you've got what it takes. What do you have to lose?

KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

What Happens in the Mind Often Involves the Body

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have been getting gold treatments for the past two years. Have had arthritis for 18 years. Yet I notice that emotional strain seems to mean it worse.

For example, when separated from my husband for long periods (he travels a lot in his business) I get more aches and pains. Is it possible that arthritis can be affected by the emotions? — Mrs. Y.

COMMENT: As the saying goes: "And then some!" The mind is tied in with the body; the body with the mind. Psychosomatics isn't just a fancy term. What happens in the psyche (mind) often involves what happens in the soma (body).

Many rheumatic patients like yourself have told me how anxiety and other emotions make them feel miserable. Then, for days and weeks their symptoms become more bearable and their mobility like is so during a period of calm and contentment. It seems to have no relation to the medicine they are taking. Likewise, with people who suffer from other ailments.

* * *

Many's the ulcer patient who has been overwhelmed by a serious misfortune because he felt just gone through a period of emotional stress: lost his business, for example.

Likewise, the coronary patient may get more frequent attacks of angina pectoris when he is upset and worried.

The diabetic will come in saying that he is spilling more sugar than usual. His usual insulin dosage doesn't seem to control the disease as well as usual. Ask him about what's been happening lately and he will confess that he has been under emotional strain.

So you see, Mrs. Y., it may really be true that your emotions affect your arthritis.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Is it true that a myocardial infarction may not show on an electrocardiogram for months? — Mrs. No.

COMMENT: Not usually true. Occasionally it may not show on the ECG until 7 to 10 days after the attack. But the full-blown heart attack is nearly always confirmed by electrocardiogram within a few days. If there is any question, then the doctor makes his diagnosis on laboratory enzyme tests, on physical examination, and on the history of the attack.

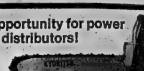
* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Our child with bronchial asthma has been exposed to her cat for a year without having an attack. Sensitivity tests are negative to the cat. She loves this pet. But neighbors say we should get rid of it. Do you agree? — Mrs. F.

COMMENT: Keep it. Unless of course, your doctor finds some definite reason later for the painful separation.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Is vitamin C helpful for chronic backache? — Mrs. C.



COMMENT: I don't see why — or how.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: What causes feet to "fall asleep" and legs to have a strange, almost painful sensation? I have taken nicotinic acid, hormones and quinine without any improvement. — Mrs. O.

COMMENT: As you know I can't diagnose from way back here, but two conditions come to mind: "Peripheral neuritis" and interference with the circulation. Have you had a blood sugar tolerance? Are you anemic? How are your leg arteries and veins? If symptoms continue, have your doctor do a checkup on you.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — A rally that began Tuesday carried over into mid-morning trading today as the Toronto stock market advanced moderately in light volume.

On index, industrials were up .72 to 175.21, western oils 1.71 to 246.66 and base metals 1.00 to 108.85. Golds lost 2.50 to 190.98.

Volume by 11 a.m. was 540,000 shares compared with 585,000 at the same time Tuesday. Gains outnumbered losses 138 to 98.

In oils, Home A rose 1¼ to 70¾, Ranger ⅝ to 17¼; Home B ¼ to 63 and Petrol eight cents to $2.18. The companies have land holdings in the North Slope area of Alaska where oil leases go on sale today.

Falconbridge was up 1 to 133¼, Mane, Mill and Smelter workers at Falconbridge have been on strike since Aug. 21.

Inco gained ¾ to 38¾. Inco's Ontario operations have been shut down since July 10 when steelworkers walked off their jobs.

Steleo picked up ⅞ to 23 and Algoma Steel slipped ¼ to 16¼. Steelworkers at both companies are on strike.

A moderate mid-day rally Tuesday overcame a sharp opening loss and ended a three-day decline.

On index, industrials were up .45 to 174.49 at the close after being down .88 in the first 1¼ hours of trading. Base metals gained .59 to 107.85 while golds slipped .28 to 193.48.

Western oils rose 4.27 to 244.95, apparently in anticipation of land sales by the North Slope area of Alaska today.

In oils, Home B was up 1¾ to 62¾, Home A 1¼ to 69¾, Pacific Pete 1 to 34, Canadian Superior 1 to 37½, Asamera 1¼ to 27¼ and Hudson's Bay Oil 1 to 39.

Trading was ahead of Monday's pace but remained light. Volume was 2,012,000 shares compared with 1,755,000 Monday. Losses outnumbered gains 251 to 248; 244 issues were unchanged.

OSP Industries lost ¼ to 13¾ and Seaway picked up ¼ to 9¼. OSP said it has cancelled its plans to acquire Seaway through a share exchange. Seaway said it is dropping plans to acquire the Vic Tanny operations in Canada.

Dome Pete rose 1¼ to 88¾. Dome Pete is operator for Panarctic Oils which said it is abandoning its Drake Point exploratory well on Melville Island in the Canadian Arctic because of the danger of fire. The well has been blowing gas out of control for about a week.

Hudson Bay Mining rose 1¼ to 81 after raising its domestic price for copper to 57 cents a pound from 53 cents following similar moves by Canadian and American producers.

Crush slipped ¼ to 11½ despite reporting nine-month earnings of 24 cents a share compared with 20 cents in the similar 1968 period.

British American Bank Note did not trade but closed at 76 bid and 82 asked. Shareholders approved a 3-for-1 split and an increase in authorized capital.

Weekly Livestock Review

Trade was active and prices steady on all classes of livestock on offer Tuesday. Good steers and heifers sold steady. Good cows were steady. Sale of good calves were active and medium calves were stronger. Springers sold actively. Weaned pigs and shoats were steady.

No Premium Cutback: MacNaughton

TORONTO (CP) — Provincial Treasurer Charles MacNaughton said Tuesday night Ontario does not plan any reduction in its medical care insurance premiums.

He told the Toronto Junior Board of Trade the government expects heavy opposition pressure for such a reduction when the legislature reconvenes this month.

"I am aware that one provincial election this year has been won on such a platform," he said, referring to the New Democratic Party victory in Manitoba in June.

"Expediently, politically and immediately, the reduction of premiums would be the most attractive alternative to the Ontario government and the people.

"A more comprehensive view, however, suggests that premium reduction would be a trip down the garden path that would lead in a thorny patch of tax increases."

The Liberals and NDP have criticized the government's decision to charge the same premiums for the provincial version of the federal health scheme—Ontario Health Services Insurance Plan—as it now charges for the Ontario Medical Services Insurance Plan.

The plan goes into effect Oct. 1.

David McDonald, Liberal candidate in the Middlesex South provincial byelection Sept. 18, said in a statement Tuesday that Health Minister Thomas Wells is misleading the constituency's voters into believing the government will use federal medical care funds to hold down provincial premiums.

Mr. McDonald said the government already had been committed to holding the premium line in OMSIP, and would have had to use provincial money for this purpose had the province decided not to join the federal plan.

Writing Is A Painful Craft

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Several readers — who also, apparently, fancy themselves as writers — have objected to a recent column in which I remarked that, in 15 years, not a single manuscript submitted to me has shown any genuine merit.

"How can you tell from reading one manuscript," ask these readers, "whether the writer has any real talent or not?"

Sometimes it does not require a whole manuscript; a paragraph will do. Let me give you an example, in the way of a new novel which will not be published until fall. Here is the first paragraph as it appears in galley proof:

"The Northeast Trades, following in the wake of the morning sun, passed over the magic city of Honolulu as though loath to spend themselves on the barren inlets far to the west. They came whistling down from the jagged fortress of Pali, past deeply dissected ravines heavy with the early morning scent of azalea and frangipani. The sun peeped over the purple ridges and sent long shadows down into the streets of the fabulous city."

This might read like mighty fine description to the casual reader, but to the trained eye this opening paragraph reveals deep defects in style, approach and observation.

"In the wake of the morning sun" is the impossibly stale phrase. The "magic city" of Honolulu is bad writing—a writer's task is to make us feel the magic, not to name it. The same criticism applies to "fabulous city." Later in the paragraph. This is Hollywood-style writing.

"Loath" is a weak and archaic word to use in this context. "Deeply dissected ravines" is hasty, careless and unimaginative. Analyze and "frangipani" convey no scent to the person who does not already know what they smell like.

"The sun peeped over the purple ridges," is the sort of stenographic cliche with which Zane Grey peppered his action tales of the West; it does not belong in a serious novel. "Long shadows" is superfluous if the sun is over ridges and ravines.

All this may seem pretty critical, but a paragraph must be as closely knit and impeccably stitched as a sweater sleeve. Trifling errors in a single paragraph add up to huge botching in the finished product. The author's eye must be fresh and his hand sure, to make the difference between mediocrity and excellence.

I have no need to read the rest of this novel to know that whatever the author's other merits may be, he is not a trained, professional observer with the precious gift of authenticity. Writing is a painful craft not a fuzzy aspiration.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For September 11

Your birthday today: Your life now is apt to take an entirely different direction in which much that is now going on will be dropped. The urgent requirement is to disentangle yourself from any routine or recurrent obligation which would hinder a sudden move or reorganization. Today's natives have vivid imaginations, and many have used it well in writing novels.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Be more sociable each day and evening. Make the rounds, catch up on the news, find some new friends among the old. Enjoy yourself, without excess of food or drink.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): You now face the challenge of avoiding family squabbles just at a time when you need all your time and wits about you for public relations. Your ideas should be attractive to important people today. The soft sell wins.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): It is easier to deal with strangers than the people you know so well. Stand clear and give your differences time to cool off a bit.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Get down to hard facts today and get your relations with associates and partners onto a sound basis. Healthy self interest will lead you well through a variety of normal routines.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Minor problems must be ignored while your time and attention is fastened on major projects. The day is very promising. Your friends have even bigger ideas than you. A neglected matter turns out to be fortunate after all.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): You are about to begin using more of your time on new activity. Clear out the loose ends from the past, pay off your old debts, get the latest information into your files.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): "Follow up" is the key phrase for the day. Check on any pending ventures which are being neglected. Assume that any information may be incomplete. Your mate has a problem to pursue alone — stay out of the way.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Conference agreements are promising if you do not push too hard or too soon. Work through you connections, elder friends. You may find others expressing views contrary to yours.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Painstaking, old fashioned work methods now pay off even if they do slow you up quite a bit. Indulge yourself in some childhood luxury again.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Now you are sustained in your views and enterprises by expert advice. Make long range agreements, map out travel schedules, deal with in laws.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Planning for future purchases is strongly favored, but this is not the day to make them. Your friends are full of ideas which do not suit your best welfare.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Decide what you can do with at it diligently. Do the most difficult things first, get them out of the way.

United Front Before Entry

BONN (Reuters) — France and West Germany agreed Tuesday that European Common Market countries should form a common front before starting negotiations with Britain and other applicants for membership in the six-nation community.

The agreement emerged after a two-day Franco-German conference here headed by President Georges Pompidou of France and Chancellor Kurt Georg Kiesinger of West Germany.

State Secretary Guenter Diehl, the chief West German government spokesman, told reporters after the conference that both countries regarded the decision to set up a six-nation common front as necessary before any negotiations might begin with Britain or other applicants.

Pompidou was reported opposed to setting a firm date for entry negotiations, but a French government spokesman, Leo Hamon, said France is not opposed to any enlargement of the economic community once a forthcoming summit conference of heads of government of the six has concluded.

Guerrillas Warn Israelis

AMMAN, Jordan (Reuters) — A leading Palestinian commando organization declared Tuesday it plans all-out war against Jewish interests around the world, and warned travellers not to use Israeli planes and ships.

A spokesman for the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, the most left-wing of major commando groups, told a news conference here it "will not be responsible for the lives of tourists and foreigners who use Israeli means of communication, regardless of their nationality."

The Front said a wave of bomb attacks by teen-age guerrillas on Israeli offices in Western Europe Monday was the last Front operation in which attempts to avoid foreign casualties will be made.

The spokesman also said Israeli embassies in Bonn and The Hague were bomb-attacked Monday because they helped organize the sale of U.S. Phantom jets to Israel, and because Israeli pilots were trained to fly the Phantoms in West Germany and The Netherlands.

The Front chose four teen-agers to carry out the lightning raids to prove to the world "that Israeli and imperialist allegations that the rising generation (of Palestine refugees) have forgotten their country were simply lies."

Lebanese newspapers published pictures of the four "tiger cub" guerrillas who they said carried out the raids with low-powered bombs, intended to wound but not to kill.

The youths were all Palestinian students between 13 and 16 years old.

Disorder Policy Outlined

TORONTO (CP) — Escott Reid, principal of Glendon College, says that except in the "very gravest emergency" he would not take action against a disorderly student demonstration without the approval of students and faculty representatives.

"I believe that for me this is the least risky of many courses," he says in a signed article in The Globe and Mail.

The council, which deals with discipline, is an elected body of seven students and five faculty members.

Mr. Reid, principal of Glendon since its opening three years ago as a separate campus of York University, says that if he disagreed with the council's recommendation he would ask it to reconsider. If a majority of the student members and a majority of the faculty members reaffirmed their recommendation he would accept it.

Federal cabinet ministers Hon. Arthur Laing, Hon. E. J. Benson and Hon. Bryce Mackasey, team up to cut ribbon at yesterday's official opening at the new Regional Headquarters of the Unemployment Insurance Commission. In the background are Lee Grills, Hastings M.P., and Les Stevens UIC regional director.

UIC 'Step Into Future'

The transfer of the Ontario Regional Headquarters of the Unemployment Insurance Commission from Toronto to Belleville was yesterday termed "another step into the future" for the UIC.

This was the term used by Hon. Bryce Mackasey, federal minister of labor, as he officially opened the regional UIC office on Dundas Street, East, which has provided approximately 200 jobs for this city.

He said the transfer was in line with government policy expressed a short time ago by Prime Minister Trudeau, when he took a strong and determined stand for greater efficiency, increased productivity and better service by government agencies.

The minister of labor was one of three federal cabinet ministers who attended yesterday's official opening of the new UIC building.

Others in attendance were finance minister Hon. Edgar Benson, and Hon. Arthur Laing, minister of public works, under whose department the new building was constructed.

Mr. Laing said he was not officially included on the program but came along "because I wanted to see what the unemployment commission was getting for less than $4 per square foot."

Following the ribbon cutting ceremony the official party and invited guests were taken on a conducted tour of the new building. Attractive young female office employees acted as tour guides.

Others taking part in the official opening program included J. Les Stevens, Ontario Regional Director at the Belleville office; Chief UIC Commissioner Jacques Desroches of Ottawa and Mayor J. Russell Scott of Belleville.

Jack Kinsella, Director of Information Services, acted as master of ceremonies.

Seven Planes Down

From AP-Reuters

TEL AVIV (CP) — Israel said at least seven Egyptian warplanes were shot down today as Arab pilots flew three missions against Israeli forces in the Sinai Desert.

Cairo radio said fighter-bombers from the United Arab Republic blasted Israeli positions on the Israeli-occupied side of the Suez canal and claimed four Israeli aircraft were shot down.

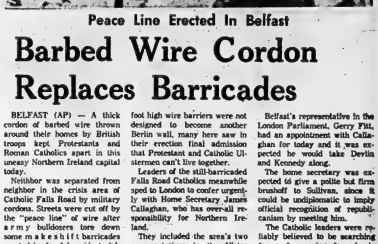
An Israeli military spokesman said two and possibly three Egyptian planes were down in the first raid and five in the second. There was no immediate word from Tel Aviv on the third raid announced by Cairo.

Egyptian jets and fighter-bombers today swept across the Suez canal and attacked Israeli positions deep in Sinai, an Egyptian military spokesman said.

The spokesman said the jets bombed "enemy positions and means of air defence" in middle of Sinai and north of it.

Purpose of the raid, he explained, was to "repel the enemy's repeated air strikes on our guard points."

The spokesman said at 10:15 a.m. Israeli jets "attempted to raid our guard points at Zafrana, Ras Shukeir on the Suez gulf, but were engaged by our anti-aircraft guns and intercepted by Egyptian jets forcing them to flee."



The Israeli spokesman gave this account of the Egyptian raids:

Egyptian aircraft first cross the Suez canal at 8:30 a.m. and wounded three Israeli soldiers in the northern part of the Sinai Desert. Then Egyptian planes were shot down during this raid, one by anti-aircraft fire and one by Israeli planes, while a third Egyptian plane "probably" was downed by ground fire.

At noon, Egyptian planes again crossed the canal and the Gulf of Suez to strike at Israeli forces at Ras el Misalla, 10 miles south of Port Suez, and at an unidentified area along the canal.

The Israeli Air Force met the raiders, and two MiG-21s and two Sukhoy fighter-bombers went down in the dogfights. A U.S. Hawk ground-to-air missile

Peace Line Erected In Belfast

Barbed Wire Cordon Replaces Barricades

BELFAST (AP) — A thick cordon of barbed wire thrown around their homes by British troops kept Protestants and Roman Catholics apart in this uneasy Northern Ireland capital today.

Neithbor was separated from neighbor in the crisis area of Catholic Falls Road by military cordons. Streets were cut off by the "peace line" of wire after army bulldozers tore down some makeshift barricades erected by fearful residents following last month's sectarian warfare.

Although Gen. Sir Alan Freeland, commanding officer of the nearly 7,000 British troops in Northern Ireland, said the six-foot high wire barriers were not designed to become another Berlin wall, many here saw in their erection final admission that Protestant and Catholic Ulstermen can't live together.

Leaders of the still-barricaded Falls Road Catholics meanwhile sped to London to confer urgently with Home Secretary James Callaghan, who has over-all responsibility for Northern Ireland.

They included the area's two representatives in the Ulster Parliament, Paddy Devlin and Paddy Kennedy, and a committed Republican, Jim Sullivan, so-called premier of Free Belfast, as the Falls Road Catholic area is known.

Belfast's representative in the London Parliament, Gerry Fitt, had an appointment with Callaghan for today and it was expected he would take Devlin and Kennedy along.

The home secretary was expected to give a polite but firm brushoff to Sullivan, since it could be undiplomatic to imply official recognition of republicanism by meeting him.

The Catholic leaders were reliably believed to be searching for a face-saving formula in view of their past protestations that "we shall fight" to preserve Free Belfast. The mood behind the barriers has changed from that rallying cry to the question of "what can we do?"

Police Force Left 'As Sitting Ducks'

EDMONTON (CP) — Regina Police Chief Arthur Cookson said Wednesday the federal government apparently intends to abolish the death penalty for murderers of prison guards and police officers.

The death penalty for other slayings was abolished for a five-year trial period in 1967.

Chief Cookson said in a report to the Canadian Association of Police Chiefs convention here that his law amendments committee at the convention will object to the death sentence being commuted in the case of Leonard Otto Borg, convicted killer of an RCMP corporal at Grande Prairie in 1967.

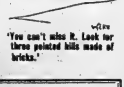
Borg was convicted of capital murder, but his sentence was commuted after the amendments passed.

Chief Cookson said the decision to commute the death penalty has "in effect, left the police as sitting ducks for anyone who might want to get rid of them."

"Borg himself couldn't have expected better when he said, 'if they commute me, they'll be making a mockery of their own bill that was passed'."

A Senate bill to restrict fingerprinting and photographic identification until a person has been convicted of an indictable offence also would be protested.

Police now do this when a person is charged under the Criminal Code.



The bill, given first reading by the Senate in July, would make conviction impossible where latent fingerprints are the only conclusive evidence, Chief Cookson said.

Earlier, RCMP Deputy Commissioner W. H. Kelly of Ottawa said in an interview following a closed session of the meeting that organized crime has made attempts to invest money in legitimate business in Canada.

"Money is the name of the game," he said. Where the potential existed, organized crime would move in.

Gambling has been replaced in Canada by loan sharking and, he said, it is only a matter of time before organized crime moves into the market for so-called soft drugs such as marijuana, barbiturates and LSD.

The delegates were told by Chief James P. Mackey of Toronto that the Cosa Nostra has fingers in small communities as well as in metropolitan centres.

'You can't miss it. Look for three pointed hills made of bricks.'

Seven Seeking Franchise

MONTREAL (CP) — The National Hockey League announced today it will expand by two teams for the 1970-71 season with Vancouver the prime candidate for one new spot, providing its applicant complies by Dec. 1 with the provisions laid down by the league.

The joint announcement was made in New York by William Jennings, chairman of the NHL board of governors, and William Wirtz, chairman of the league's expansion committee, with league president Clarence Campbell and David Molson, president of Montreal Canadiens, presiding in Montreal.

Campbell said that the league already has received informal applications for the two new franchises from six cities in addition to Vancouver. All are in the United States.

These are Atlanta, Baltimore, Buffalo, Cleveland, Kansas City and Washington. Campbell said that the league considers Baltimore and Washington as two separate territories and that applications will be accepted from either city.

Under the new expansion plan, each of the two teams entering the league will pay $6,-000,000 in the currency of the country in which the club is located.

When the league last ex-

News Briefs

LONDON (AP) — Britain today announced it earned £43,000,000 ($124,800,00) more than it spent abroad during the first half of 1969 — the first half-year surplus since 1962. The balance-of-payments figures released by the treasury thus signalled the likely end of the country's chronic economic ailments.

Tanker Manhattan Crunches Through Arctic Ice

Ice Tanker Seeks Route

WINTER HARBOR, N.W.T. (CP) — The United States super-tanker Manhattan plowed her way through heavy ice Wednesday in Viscount Melville Sound on her historic voyage through the Northwest Passage.

At noon Wednesday, the Humble Oil Ltd. ship was roughly 50 miles from the entrance of Prince of Wales Strait and planned to enter McClure Strait later in the day to test ice conditions.

At that time it had not been decided whether to proceed to the ship's destination in Alaska through McClure Strait or turn back to make the passage through the Prince of Wales Strait.

McClure Strait is north of Banks Island, while Prince of Wales Strait is southeast of the island. Prince of Wales Strait is ice-free.

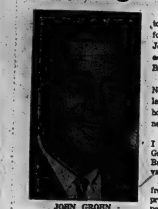
The Manhattan is hoping to gather enough scientific data on this voyage to determine the size, strength and power needed to design 250,000-ton tankers to bring oil from Alaska to Eastern United States markets through the Northwest Passage.

Twice during the early hours of Wednesday the Manhattan got stuck in the ice-covered Viscount Melville Sound. Ice thickness varied up to about eight feet.

Both times the accompanying Canadian icebreaker John A. Macdonald eased the ice pressure to set the tanker free.

Capt. Paul Fournier of the Macdonald said the Manhattan probably could have freed herself either by waiting for pressure to ease or by ramming the ice.

The Manhattan is due at Sachs Harbour on Banks Island Sunday.



Use Dogs In Search

BALA, Ont. (CP) — Two police dogs searched in a steady rain today for clues to the kidnapping of Mary Nelles, 36-year-old daughter of a Toronto millionaire who was taken Sunday and released Tuesday after a $200,000 ransom was paid.

The dogs are being used to find the scent of Mrs. Nelles at places where she may have stopped from time to time while the kidnappers were driving her around.

Only three roadblocks, all on main exits and entrances to the Muskoka area, remained in force today. But more than 70 officers checked cottages, motels, restaurants and stores in the Muskoka district, looking for anyone who might have seen the kidnappers.

City Treasurer Resigns Post

JOHN GROHN

Treasurer and tax collector for the city of Belleville for the past three years, Mr. John Grohn has resigned to accept a similar position at Brantford.

The resignation is effective Nov. 17, but Mr. Gorh will leave Oct. 27 for a month's holidays before taking up his new post.

"The opportunity arose and I decided to accept," Mr. Grohn said today. "I felt the Brantford position was an advancement."

Mr. Grohn came to this city from Calgary, Alberta, and previously held a tax office position at Red Deer.

A Happening Is Happening

Committees members organizing the youth happening during Belleville Week have decided to operate the event on the basis of a number of proposals.

The proposals were brought up during a regular meeting held last night.

The proposals are:

A budget hike of $1,800 from $1,000, making the total budget $2,800. This would enable the happening to be a nine-hour occasion, featuring eight or nine groups, both local and out-of-town.

It is also proposed that the happening be a concert as opposed to a dance.

A second proposal would hike the budget to $1,600 and offer a lower admission and five hours of entertainment.

A third suggestion would maintain the $1,000 budget and offer five hours of more localized entertainment.

A proposal to hire Detroit disc jockey Tommy Shannon for $800 was dropped at the meeting.

What A Shower

Loyalist students discovered yesterday that showers can be hazardous — and fun. These freshmen students were required to run fully-dressed through a huge stream of water as one of the initiation requirements at the school.

Ready Soon

Students Make A Splash

It was fun and games at Loyalist College yesterday to the pleasure of the senior students — and displeasure of freshmen.

In keeping with tradition in the college, students gathered in the afternoon as participants and spectators of student initiations.

Hundreds of new students were put through an obstacle course that would make most people shudder.

The first obstacle involved running down a muddy road through a massive stream of water.

There were rope swings, tire obstacles and other hazards.

The initiates were divided into teams and expected to run the course in a specified time. They were scored accordingly.

But it was the spirit of the event that made the difference. Despite the physical challenges there wasn't one complaint from the initiates.

Students Await Portable Classroom

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Although the portable classroom bought to accommodate them is not yet installed, the grade 5 class at Tyendinaga Public School on the Shannonville Gravel is back at its own school.

Due to the unavailability of the portable, the children were stated to be bused an extra six miles to Douglas Atkins School in Thurlow for two weeks.

Hastings County Board of Education officials say the portable was installed.

"I was opposed to moving the children, because the new school board was aware of the over-crowding at Tyendinaga School before they took over their responsibilities Jan. 1," Mr. McFarlane told the Intelligencer.

"Between June and December of 1968, about 35 children entered our school system as new families moved into the area," Mr. McFarlane said. "We opened a kindergarten in September 1968, using the general purpose room at the school because of lack of classrooms."

In 1968, when I was chairman of the board, we knew we needed new rooms and applied through our area superintendent, Paul Anderson, for departmental permission to build. He advised us that, because of the pending take-over of the county unit, the department would not give us permission, but his advice, we left a recommendation with the interim school organizational committee that these two rooms be constructed," he related.

After talking to the Tyendinaga school principal Mr. McFarlane said he contacted R. C. Horwood, area superintendent, who told him the busing arrangements would continue for four to six weeks.

When asked if parents had been informed, Mr. McFarlane said Mr. Horwood told him he was unaware of whether or not they had been contacted.

At the Aug. 30 meeting, attended by Mr. Horwood, L. A. Kells, superintendent of administrative services, and Laurison Gunning, trustee for the ward that includes Tyendinaga, parents representing about 16 affected families objected to the busing arrangements.

They were told the grade 5 pupils would be transported by their regular school bus to Tyendinaga school, it is a placed aboard another bus for transportation to Douglas Atkins School.

"Contrary to previous reports, none of the parents at the meeting objected to the extra expense of the bus," asserted Mr. McFarlane. "They objected to the pupils' loss of about three-quarters of an hour of each school day. They also looked with disfavor on the extra time spent on the bus by junior pupils."

As a result, some parents refused to send their children to school on opening day, Sept. 2.

Although the parents were told at the meeting that busing would continue for two weeks, the children were moved into the general purpose room at Tyendinaga school Monday, Sept. 8 after attending Douglas Atkins for only four days.

The kindergarten class, previously using the general purpose room, was accommodated in the staff room, according to Mr. McFarlane's information.

The parents of children concerned were informed of the new arrangements by a letter received on Sept. 8 after their children had left for school.

The portable is partially erected on the site now. When it is completed, Mr. McFarlane says he has been told, Grade 4 will be moved in, and the kindergarten pupils will be accommodated in the general purpose room as before.

The former trustee believes overcrowding at the school has not yet been resolved satisfactorily.

"Another room is required at the school, as specified in our recommendation to the interim committee," he said. "The general purpose room should be freed for use for general purpose activities, as originally intended."

"This would be the only way to ensure quality of educational opportunity to the children of Tyendinaga," Mr. McFarlane concluded.

IN MEMORIAM

CONOLLY — In loving memory of a dear husband and father who passed away September 11, 1967. You fell asleep without goodbye, But memories of you will never die.
Quietly remembered through the years,
With silent thoughts and unseen tears.

. . . But Getting Out Was Something Else

TWEED (Special) — The inability of thieves to effect an exit through locked doors may have limited the haul in Tuesday night's burglary at this community's liquor store.

An inventory taken at the store yesterday revealed 15 bottles of liquor — valued at approximately $90 — were taken.

Thieves gained entry by smashing a side window and apparently thought they could make their getaway by unlocking a door from the inside, say police.

But the doors at the store can't be unlocked from the inside without a key. The thieves were forced to make their escape back through the broken window.

Replacement of the window and repair of damage to floor tiles will cost about $200.

City Ratepayers Want Urban Study Completed

Members of the Belleville East and West Hill Ratepayers Association want the city's urban renewal study now being conducted by town planners Procter and Redfern to be completed.

This was made clear at the organizational meeting of the two bodies last night at the Belleville Shrine Club.

Association members noted that the study was now approximately 70 per cent and felt that regardless of when any project went ahead, the city should know what professionals recommend for the downtown area.

Late last week it had been suggested that in view of the federal government temporarily withdrawing financial support to urban renewal projects, Belleville's current study would be cancelled.

In other business, the meeting elected a slate of officers for both the East and West Hill Ratepayers.

They are: West Hill — Armind Quickert, president, with Ray Gunsolus, Leonard F. Reid and Al Whitney, vice-presidents; Ray Grant, secretary, and Miss Grace Kenny, treasurer. East Hill — William Wills, president, with Mrs. Marion Wilson, George Wishart and Zdenek Kvarda as vice-presidents; Cecil Becker is secretary, and Mrs. Mary McLaughlin as treasurer.

Approximately 40 people attended the organizational meeting, including several city aldermen.

G. A. Morton New President

Gerald A. Morton was elected president of The Belleville Club last night at the annual meeting held at the club premises at 210 Pinnacle Street.

Mr. Morton succeeds E. Guss Porter, Vice-president is W. D. Cook. Directors elected were R. L. Graham, J. E. McFarlane, F. C. Miller, H. M. Morton, Clive Ryan, Dr. C. H. A. Walters, Donald Soutter and P. T. Yealland.

A. S. Lewis was again appointed as secretary-manager. Mr. McFarlane was elected chairman of the house committee, Mr. Soutter was named chairman of the entertainment committee and H. P. Wills is to be chairman of a newly formed membership committee.

Shannonville Mishap

Belleville Man Dies in Car Crash

A Belleville man was killed early today when a car in which he was a passenger went out of control on Highway 2 near Shannonville.

Dead is Kevin Walsh, 21, of Belleville, a passenger in a vehicle driven by his brother, Morris Walsh, also of Belleville.

The mishap occurred three miles east of Shannonville on highway 2 at 12.35 a.m.

Morris Walsh was uninjured in the mishap.

Provincial Police could not release further details on the incident.

Born in Marysville, he is the son of Mrs. Cecilia Walsh and the late Francis Walsh. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Lillian Amy Longhurst Walsh.

He resided in Belleville for the past six years and surviving him are his stepchildren: Gregory Longhurst, Belleville; Mrs. Thomas (Mary) Connor, Barrie; Mrs. Hugh (Nancy) Watts, Belleville and Miss Laura Lynn Longhurst, still residing at home.

He is also survived by three brothers, Bernard of Marysville, Gerard and James of Belleville. Three sisters also survive: Mrs. Roy (Joan) Hinch, Napanee; Mrs. Doweine (Patricia) Doyle, Corbyville and Mrs. Laverne (Barbara) McGarth, Oshawa.

Mr. Walsh was employed at the Canada Cement Company. He was a member of St. Michael's Church, as well as the Knights of Columbus and the Alhambra Lodge.

Funeral services will be held on Saturday, from the John R. Bush Funeral Home to St. Michael's Church where Requiem Mass will be held at 9 a.m.

Interment will be in the Holy Name of Mary Cemetery, in Marysville.

'Know Canada Better' Works Minister Laing Tells Quinte Meeting

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Canadians need to become better acquainted — with each other and their country, Works Minister Arthur Laing said last night.

Difficulties of governing the country were compounded by its geography and settlement patterns, he told Prince Edward - Hastings Liberal Association at Sidney township hall.

"We're not a compact nation at all," said Mr. Laing. "We're spread so wide — and it's important that we know one another more, and better all the time."

His advice concluded a busy day in the Belleville area for himself and two cabinet colleagues — Finance Minister Edgar Benson and Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey.

The ministerial trio arrived in Belleville to participate in official opening ceremonies of the new regional Unemployment Insurance Commission offices.

Mr. Benson left early to return to Ottawa. But both Mr. Laing and Mr. Mackasey stayed on for other events — among them the Liberal meeting.

Earlier, they donned stetsons to mingle — and munch beef and beans — with more than 200 invited guests at the farm of UIC regional director J. L. Stevens on Sidney's second concession.

At nightfall they slipped away escorted by provincial police to meet with the local Liberals.

The political session in the township hall was geared to informality.

Mr. Laing and Mr. Mackasey moved among the crowd, views. There were no set speeches.

Instead, both men participated in a question period — "not necessarily tied to the plane departure from Canadian Forces Base Trenton for Ottawa."

Mr. Laing said the accomplishments of the Trudeau government since its election last year had been "overshadowed" by the public's scrutiny of the prime minister.

"A great number of Canadians wanted to know this man . . . to inspect him," he said.

Nonetheless, "in the first year of the Trudeau government we enacted a very great deal of legislation . . ." added Mr. Laing.

Queried on inflation, Mr. Mackasey said he challenged the traditional theory that one solution was to reduce employment.

"It seems to me there has got to be a better way than to create human misery," he added. "I just happen to think this is an outmoded concept."

However, he agreed Canada has a responsibility to reduce pressure on the money market by aiming for a balanced budget.

In those circumstances Finance Minister Benson "quite properly" has decided we must control spending," he said.

Steam Excursion

Train Sales in Slow Motion

Kenneth Fleming, public relations chairman for the United Appeal this year, said this morning that ticket sales for steam train trips to Anson Junction slated for this weekend are suprisingly low so far.

The steam train, possibly on its last Canadian journey, will be making four trips a day this Saturday and Sunday.

Mr. Fleming expressed fears that many people would show up without advance tickets and be unable to receive a seat on the train.

The train will take its passengers from Belleville, through Foxboro, Corbyville to Anson Junction near Stirling.

However, the security of the trip depends upon advance ticket sales.

"I would hate to see a line - up down at the station on Saturday and Sunday and not have room to seat them," Mr. Fleming said.

He estimated approximately 300 tickets had been sold, but that figure could — and should — have been 2,000.

"And there's only today and tomorrow to pick up the tickets," he added.

The trip is part of a series of events sponsored by the United Community Services as pre-campaign festivities next week.

Pay $100 For Fight

PICTON — Three youths charged with causing a disturbance on Picton's main street were fined $100 each and costs by Judge T. Y. Wills yesterday.

Robert Shelley and Donald Markland, both of Picton and Dennis Frost, RR1, Milford, pleaded guilty to charges laid following a fight at the corner of Main and Bridge streets late Monday afternoon.

Picton police chief, George Pitt, and another constable, assisted by four members of the Picton detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police broke up the scuffle, which drew a large crowd of spectators.

Park or Museum?

Is Zwick's Island a suitable location for an outdoor transport museum?

There are many who believe it is not, yet as everyone knows a vintage steam engine is already parked in a corner of the popular recreation spot.

Now there is a move among some members of council to have the railroad caboose currently serving as United Appeal headquarters at the corner of Front and Bridge Streets transferred ultimately to the Island.

There it would sit costly beside the steam engine, twin reminders of Belleville's traditions as a railway community.

All well and good — but is Zwick's Island to continue serving its main purpose as a park and recreational area or is it to become a repository for an ever-increasing amount of railroad hardware?

The matter is currently before the Parks Board which ironically has already made a decision ruling against positioning a caboose at the Island, on the grounds of cost. But as one councillor has pointed out, it is now "halfway there," and presumably the matter is open for reconsideration.

Is there nowhere else in Belleville that might serve as a more appropriate location for a transport museum, a place that would stand on its own merit and not clash with what is meant to be a recreation area? Is there perhaps some area in the vicinity of the station which could serve such a purpose?

Ceasefire Possible

There is talk of the possibility of a settlement of the war between Nigeria and the secessionist province of Biafra.

Nothing could be more necessary or humane than that this conflict should come to an end. For Biafra is not just another confrontation between two opposing sides, but more than any other war in the past this one involves a relatively fledgling nation and primitive society unable or unwilling to look after the needs of its civilian population.

Whether it is deliberate genocide or not, on the part of Nigeria, the fact is thousands of Biafrans are without food and are starving.

The enormity of the Biafran tragedy has been put into stark relief by CBC newscaster Stanley Burke who visited the country recently and now is on leave-of-absence so he can devote his energies to increasing aid to the needy there.

In a copyrighted article for the Toronto Star Syndicate Mr. Burke tells of the horror of the refugee camps and of the political tug-of-war in Nigeria involving British economic (principally oil) interests and Soviet efforts to get across their own interests.

Pawns in this power game are thousands, including countless children, who are starving while the combatants duel in the sun. Burke in his article calls for increased international awareness of the tragedy being enacted there, increasing pressure for a ceasefire, an end to the flow of arms to both sides, and a massive increase in aid to help feed the starving.

Man's inhumanity to man is no more apparent today than it is in Biafra. Consequently, the news of a possible ceasefire comes as a small victory on the side of humanity. But only a small one, for simultaneously comes the chilling report from Turkey — where the 21st international congress of the Red Cross has been meeting — that more than 90,000,000 people have been killed in wars since this century began.

During that time a sum of two trillion dollars has been spent on armaments and several times as much damage has been caused by 130 conflicts as five continents.

In the words of the hymn, "death where is thy sting, where grave thy victory - - - ?"

Grand Slam

Australia's Rod Laver has done what no man in tennis has ever done before, won the game's grand slam (the U.S. Australian, French and Wimbledon titles) for the second time. He did it before, in 1962, as an amateur. The $16,000 Laver picked up for beating fellow Aussie Tony Roche also boosted his earnings for the year to $105,000, making him the top tennis money winner of all time. It is a great moment in the history of the game, one that likely will never be repeated. It is also another gain for the left-banders of the world. New Zealand has golfer Bob Charles, now Australia's Laver has put the seal on his mastery of the tennis world.

Quebec Upset

Otto Lang Makes Heavy Weather of Pollution Measure

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Otto Lang may be the former eggbeat Dean of Law at the University of Saskatchewan and a Very Deep Thinker academically.

But he's got a lot more to learn politically than can be picked up on a college campus or even 14 months on Parliament Hill.

A month after his election last year, Otto Lang, by accident of political geography, was lifted from parliamentary obscurity into the low candlepower light that glimmers dimly on those called to the cabinet but given no departmental portfolio.

Prime Minister Trudeau did the calling — it could have been of the heads or tails of a coin tossed up who would — after Saskatchewan elected only two Liberals.

Otto Lang was one. Albert Douglas the other.

Who is Albert Douglas? Liberal MP for Assiniboia.

The same question might have been asked about Otto Lang if the prime minister had been given three choices in naming a Saskatchewan representative to his new cabinet.

But it had to be either Otto Lang, the 35-year-old former law dean and Rhodes Scholar, or ex-school board chairman and Farmers Union member Albert Douglas, 58 — or nobody.

So it was Lang.

For a quiet, completely undistinguished year he sat in the Commons, practically unnoticed even by the opposition members who asked him fewer questions than any other member of the cabinet.

He had no department, no portfolio, nothing for which to scream, until Energy Minister Joe Greene suffered his second heart attack and then Otto Lang was made "responsible," as the phrase goes, for water resources.

Still nothing happened until he called his recent press conference on water pollution for which he said there would be fines running to a daily top of $3,000.

It was all very splendidly indefinite. There would be clean water for drinking, swimming, fishing and other recreational purposes — sometime in the unknown future, at an open-ended price — if the provinces, municipalities and other levels of government played along with federal Ottawa.

And then it came out that with the whole deal hanging on provincial co-operation — for Ottawa, he conceded, could be fought in the courts — he had neglected to consult the provinces.

There was an instant roar of angry protest from Quebec, as there usually is in the best of circumstances, and a broad hint of non-co-operation.

Otto Lang, stepping into the glare of the public spotlight for the first time, had fallen on his face.

The prime minister is not going to like it.

His impatience with poor performance is notorious enough to terrify most other members of his cabinet.

But Otto Lang is not like "most" or even any other ministers. He lives dangerously.

With a prime minister who is so much the small "c" conservative as to make Tories John Diefenbaker and Robert Stanfield look like radicals, Otto Lang is "different" enough to be a card-carrying member of the New Democratic party's "new left," which is far out indeed.

He looks like a side-burned, mild-mannered, youthful stuffed shirt, but that is only his Clark Kent put-on.

Peel him and there stands a bleeding heart, as revolutionary as to be quite frank in his wish to break the "system" as it now operates.

He spelled it out to a meeting of Hamilton Liberals.

To "restore justice," he wants the government to sock it to doctors, lawyers, other professionals such as architects, engineers, accountants, dentists; to businessmen and industrialists, and even would you believe it, to labor unions.

In short, to anybody and any group which, through increasing fees, wages, salaries, prices and profits, exercise some measure of control over their incomes.

He sees these people and groups — from corporations to labor unions — as enjoying what he calls "the spoils of the protection of incomes system."

He wants to break it up for the benefit of what he called "unorganized Canadians" — mostly farmers.

Parliament Hill is unanimous that farmers and other "unprotected" people must be helped — but there have to be better ways of doing it.

As an academic - still - become-practical-politician, Otto Lang has forgotten — perhaps never thought of it — that doctors, lawyers, brick - layers, truck-drivers, railroaders, teachers, steel workers, board chairmen, laborers, grocery clerks, brokers, plumbers are "people" too.

And have one hell of a lot of votes.

"Tell me more about these little, hairless, cloth-covered creatures you've been seeing - - - "

Colorful impressive rites featuring a living rosary consisting of white-garbed young girls from Notre Dame Convent marked the second since the war rally of the Archdiocesan Holy Name Union in Kingston. Upwards of 600 representatives of the Holy Name Society from Belleville were present and marched in the parade. Standard bearers were Jack Young, Belleville, Joe O'Reilly and E. J. Blaney, Kingston. Special escorts to the color party were Edward Lee and Douglas Storks of Belleville. Leo Callaghan was ill charge of the Belleville contingent.

Parliament had before it today a demand from Prime Minister Mackenzie King for a decision as to whether Canada, as a free nation within the British Commonwealth, would go to war against Germany. In a speech of nearly three hours yesterday, Mr. King left no doubt of the policy of the government to enter the war along side Great Britain, not because the government alone wanted to go to war but because it felt that such should be the policy of the Canadian people.

Ho—A Ruthless Tyrant

Bernard Levin in the Daily Mail (UK)

The plain truth is that Ho Chi Minh was a ruthless and bloody tyrant. His first action on completing the conquest of North Vietnam was to slaughter in cold blood some 50,000 men and women who might have opposed his rule.

When his campaign to take over South Vietnam began it was waged with a policy of deliberate terror as an instrument of terror, the like of which had not been seen in the modern world.

From the cases of children literally chopped to pieces before their parents' eyes, in villages temporarily seized by the Viet Cong, to the hundreds of men, women and children who had been clubbed to death and whose bodies were discovered after the Tet offensive, the story was the same — the grossest atrocities committed not in the heat of battle or the bloodlust of revenge, but as a calculated and important part of gentle, witty Uncle Ho's policies.

Senator Dirksen

Montreal Gazette

Even the people who knew him best . . . find it difficult to describe Senator Everett McKinley Dirksen.

As his many friends and admirers in both parties said Monday, Everett Dirksen was "a pro," and a powerful one. Presidents Eisenhower, Kennedy, Johnson and Nixon all found him a valuable ally. What baffled all of them was that they could never count on his support for strictly party reasons. He both helped and hindered the programs of all four of them.

In his early days in the Senate, he followed the conservative progressive model of him by the dominating group. As soon as he gained sufficient power for it, he became an independent within his own party and was labelled conservative or liberal in turn by successive.

"The only man who doesn't change his mind," he once said, "is either incompetent or in a cemetery." He deserved the right to change it often.

Gen. George Washington was defeated in the Battle of Brandywine 192 years ago today—in 1777—by a British force under Sir William Howe. American loses in the engagement, named after the Brandywine River in Pennsylvania near where the battle was fought, were about 1,000 killed, wounded and taken prisoner, compared with about 600 for the British. Howe followed up his victory and 16 days later entered Philadelphia.

Embattled Minister Presses on with Post Office Reform

By PAUL DUNN

OTTAWA (CP) — In the 14 months that he has been Canada's postmaster-general, Eric Kierans probably has been more criticized than any other member of the Trudeau cabinet.

But Mr. Kierans still exudes the same confidence that carried him through top management posts and spells as a university professor and as Quebec's minister of revenue and health.

At 55, he moves like a younger man and his bright eyes under almost entirely grey hair sparkle when he talks about the job that has brought him so much criticism.

He rejects questions about his failure to bring about some aspects of post office reform in the same calm manner in which he bats down almost daily opposition digs in the Commons.

While agreeing that he has not realized all the savings he anticipated last fall, he stresses that without the changes in postal operations already made there would have been a post office deficit "greatly in excess of $130,000,000" in the 1969-70 fiscal year.

"Now I expect it will be about half of that," he said in an interview.

Mr. Kierans, also communications minister, said it was forecast that without changes "the taxpayers of Canada would have to support the post office department by $500,000,000 by 1974-75."

What about the criticism—including demands that he resign because of alleged deterioration in the postal service?

"In the spring and early summer, due to (letter carrier) walk evaluation we had late deliveries. We've recovered from this and delays in second-class mail are almost overcome.

"Only a very few thousand letters — and we handle 25,000,000 a day—are delayed for reasons that are within control of the post office."

His decision earlier this year to abandon Saturday sorting and home delivery in urban areas raised an outcry. The greatest delays in delivery result when letters are mailed late Thursday and don't get sorted till Monday.

Mr. Kierans feels the public is not yet fully aware of thisweekend situation and that the post office must publicize it. But he argues that almost all first-class letters mailed early enough on Thursday will get to their destinations the next day.

What about his department's labor relations?

"They have improved. But how much? We'll know this fall."

Postal unions are in contract negotiations with the government and should talks break down a strike could occur late this year. Mr. Kierans had barely taken on his job when a three-week strike hit the department last summer.

Just recently the 25,000-member Council of Postal Unions won an arbitration decision that blamed the post office for not having adequately consulted unions before adopting new work procedures.

Mr. Kierans promptly ordered an end to his money-saving scheme of encouraging letter carriers not to return to offices at noon hour. This ended an estimated $1,500,000 saving in transportation costs.

Other changes in the post office also brought a flood of criticism.

New postal rates approved nearly a year ago increased the cost of a first-class letter stamp to six cents from five. Second-class rate increases, which hit a wide range of publications, brought charges that the government was forcing small newspaper and labor and professional journals to shut down.

He views all of his cost-cutting steps in the same manner:

"We must balance all costs against the wishes of the public for service. How necessary is an additional partial processing of the mail in the afternoon when only some 10 letters per walk turn up? How necessary were several thousand revenue post offices that cost on the average of about $3,000 a year and had a cash turnover of $50 to $5,000?"

What comes next in the changing post office picture?

"Our management is far too thin . . . we need market orientation . . . we need maybe 45 to 50 additions to top management."

"It's the fewness, not the quality of present management that's been the problem."

An inquiry several years ago noted that the department, with some 48,000 employees, had fewer than two dozen employees earning more than $12,000 a year.

Mr. Kierans particularly wants new expertise in transportation services—a $100,000,000-a-year aspect of postal operations.

"We've got to adopt a very aggressive and competitive attitude, otherwise we'll be just a continuing drain on the public purse."

To that end his department now is paying particular interest to its business users—department store chains.

His changes seem to be finally meeting with some acceptance. Mr. Kierans recently received a letter from Reader's Digest—formerly one of his greatest critics—saying "the service has vastly improved in recent months."

He has started to receive results of a flock of consultants' studies undertaken in the last year and hopes to present recommendations for further postal changes to cabinet "early in October."

"Then I expect we'll present a white paper to the new year . . . it will contain a recommendation, either pro or con, on reorganization of the post office as a Crown corporation."

Does he plan to stay on as postmaster-general?

"I'm happy with the job. Think of the challenges with 48,000 employees and new technology. . . ."

Prince Edward Operator Warns

Higher Costs Besetting Quinte Tourism

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — High overhead and a lower number of American boaters holidaying in Ontario waters seem influential factors in the tourist season now ending in Prince Edward County.

President of the Quinte Isle Tourist Association and operator of Baycrest Marina, Big Island, Mr. Al Owen noted: "Things are definitely slower in the American plan—even to operate under it becomes more difficult each year due to high food costs."

Under the American plan, tourists receive lodging and board as opposed to the European plan, offering rooms with meals available only if desired.

Mr. Owen felt that the "terribly high overhead" noted by resort operators this summer was partially the result of wages paid out of proportion to seasonal employment.

"High school students receive the minimum wage when working at a resort and this is a hardship on the business," he said.

Mr. Owen explained that during slack periods a full staff must be kept on by the resort operator despite overhead.

"Most of the summer help don't want to do odd jobs such as mowing the lawn when things are slow," he added.

The future o fthe American plan, in this resort operator's opinion, is anything but rosy. "I can't see how this plan can survive with the present terrific overhead," stated Mr. Owen.

The number of boats, especially American craft visiting the Bay of Quinte, dropped appreciably this year according to Mr. Owen's estimate. He felt that pleasure craft anchoring near his resort were down about 70 per cent this year.

This sudden drop in the apparent result of government legislation requiring pleasure cruisers sailing in Ontario waters to carry a disposal tank, he believes. American boats are reluctant to dock where there are no facilities for pumping out these holding tanks. Consequently, they seemed to "steer clear" of county waters for the most part this year.

Earlier in the tourist season Mr. Owen commented: "The government made a big blunder when it legislated prematurely on the boats."

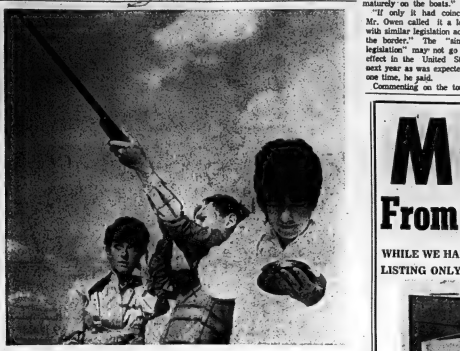
"If only it had coincided Mr. Owen called it a lover with similar legislation across the border." The "similar legislation" may not go into effect in the United States next year as was expected at one time, he said.

Commenting on the tourist season now nearing its close one than last year and added that last year's season was not good either. His specific reference was to the diminishing success of the American plan.

Holidayers in Prince Edward this summer, however, could go fishing and arrive back with a good catch. Fishing is steadily improving in county waters as a result of pollution control and a higher water level in the lake.

"News of better fishing is bringing back the older tourists," observed M. Owen. The older tourists seems to be the backbone of the industry. Mr. Owen reported that his old clientele chiefly filled his cottages this summer.

"There is no new blood among the vacationers," he remarked.



The tent and trailer trend is still another blight to tourism but Mr. Owen feels it will not be a permanent one. He does not expect the same people to sustain it for any length of time. If and when the cycle breaks, the testers will probably return to other types of accommodation as he sees it.

Spontaneous weekends proved a boon to tourism this season, he said.

Explaining the spontaneous holiday Mr. Owen said: "People don't like to gamble so if the weather seems doubtful they don't make reservations for a whole week — they ask only for weekend accommodation."

A number of vacationers this summer favored three or four weekend holidays to a full week's vacation. This trend reacued the resort operators from vacant cabins on weekends.

Full results of the 1969 tourist season aren't available yet to provide the complete picture of the industry's ups and downs in Prince Edward this year.

Experiment Goes Bang

The scene isn't as lethal as it looks. Shotgun-toting Mike Wagar, Quinte Secondary School student, was participating in experiment measuring speed of sound across Bay of Quinte west of Belleville yesterday. Among science students assisting were Debby Hamilton, 14, and Madeline Bates, 16.

Seven Planes Are Downed

brought down a fifth plane.

No Israeli planes were hit and there were no Israeli casualties in the second attack, the spokesman said.

By Israeli account this was the heaviest toll the Egyptians have suffered since July 24, when the Israelis also claimed knocking down seven Egyptian planes.

Today's total brings to 47 the number of Egyptian aircraft claimed knocked down by Israelis since the 1967 war.

Earlier today, Israeli planes struck across the Jordan River into Jordan.

The Israeli jets went into action following bazooka and machine-gun attacks on patrols south of Tiberias in the Israeli-occupied West Bank.

Farmers in Maoz Hayim village saw the Israeli jets fly low across the river to strike at the guerrilla posts. Three Israeli patrols earlier came under fire from the river's East Bank, near Maoz Hayim, Hamadyia and Gesher. Israeli sources said there were no casualties among the patrols.

In Amman, a Jordanian spokesman said two Israeli fighter planes dropped napalm bombs on the Karakar Ford area, in the northern Jordan Valley shortly after an exchange of fire there.

The Jordanian official said there were no casualties in the brief exchange of machine-gun fire started by the Israelis, or in the raid, which lasted five minutes. Ground fire intercepted the Israeli fighters during the raid, the spokesman added.

In the region south of the Sea of Galilee four anti-personnel mines were discovered early today by Israeli patrols but they were removed without mishap.

A military spokesman in Tel Aviv announced that four Arab guerrillas were killed last Wednesday night in a clash between an armed band and an Israeli patrol near the Damyia Bridge.

He said the patrol suffered no casualties.

The semi-official Cairo newspaper Al Ahram charged that the United States collaborated with the Israelis in planning the amphibious raid and that the purpose was to offset the political effects in the Middle East of Libya's revolution.

MR. AND MRS. ELVIN EDGAR OLIVER

Oliver — King

Rev. H. M. Davis officiated at the double-ring ceremony in Bridge Street United Church recently, when Margaret Ann King, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar L. King, Belleville, was united in marriage to Elvin Edgar Oliver, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Oliver, Napanee. Alec Gordon the church organist played traditional wedding music. Garry Steen of Kingston was soloist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor length gown in nylon sheer over taffeta in straight lines, with slight fullness falling from the back waistline. The chantilly lace bodice featured a scoop neckline. A full coat of matching chantilly lace scalloped down from the neck to the bottom on both sides, fell into a chapel length train. Her headdress was a summer crown with petals of organza and stand-up leaves of lace trimmed with seed pearls attached to a shoulder length, four-tiered nylon illusion veil.

She carried a cascade bouquet of American beauty red roses.

Maid of honor, Miss Marilyn Williams, of Belleville, was attired in a floor length, pink flowered brocaded taffeta in Empire style with short puffed sleeves and a satin bow and floor length streamers at the back. She wore a matching headpiece and carried a bouquet of pink and white mums.

Bridesmaids, the Misses Bonnie and Brenda King, sisters of the bride, and Miss Carol Oliver, sister of the groom, were identically attired to the maid of honor, but in blue. Each carried a bouquet of blue and white mums.

Joanne Cole, cousin of the bride, as flower girl, wore the same type of dress except with bell sleeves and a matching headpiece of pink satin. She carried a basket of pink and white baby mums.

Gordon Waterbury of Deseronto was groomsman, while ushers were Lenard King, brother of the bride; Ronald Cole, cousin of the bride and Keith Richmond cousin of the bridegroom. Rodney Cole, cousin of the bride, was ring-bearer.

A lawn reception was held at the residence of Mrs. Goldie Askey where the bride's mother received the guests wearing a peacock blue lace over taffeta dress with a matching coat, white accessories and a gardenia corsage. The mother of the bridegroom assisted, wearing a rose bonded rayon silk sheath with grapure lace bodice, beige accessories and a gardenia corsage.

Leaving on a wedding trip the bride chose a gold brocade ensemble with a sleeveless sheath dress and a matching coat in the double breasted styling with brown accessories and a corsage of yellow roses.

On return the couple will reside at 73 Walbridge Cresc. Belleville.

Argyll Chapter IODE Plans Dessert Bridge

The first meeting for the fall season of the Argyll Chapter, IODE, was held in the Armories on Wednesday.

The Regent, Mrs. F. R. Allan opened the meeting and minutes of the last meeting were read by the secretary, Mrs. J. B. Milroy. Mrs. J. K. Bradford gave the treasurer's report.

Members were reminded of the annual district dinner being held in Campbellford on October 31 at 6.30 p.m. Mrs. MacKay, Provincial Services at Home and Abroad Secretary will be the guest speaker.

Mrs. P. Till reported on the summer visit to "Pinegrove" the Regional Treatment Centre at Kingston for mentally and emotionally disturbed children. It was previously reported that good used clothing would be collected, however they can only use new clothing and toys.

Dr. McConville stated they received a government grant to operate the centre but it did not cover the cost of clothing and the help of nurses needed for the children. A donation of money would benefit them rather than assistance from the Chapter members as only trained personnel in this field of work can work effectively with these children.

Mrs. J. McLeod reported that a cancer clinic had been held during the summer and she assisted at the clinic with the preparation of dressings. Mrs. A. Duffy, Red Cross convener, reported that a large clinic was held in June and thanked the members who assisted with the serving of refreshments.

The Regent reported she had been contacted with regard to Belleville Week and a contest for school children. The members voted to donate a "Mosaic of Belleville" book to the winner of the contest.

Plans were completed for the dessert bridge and euchre, to be held Wednesday, September 24 in the Officers' Mess. Tickets were distributed by Mrs. J. K. Bradford.

Mrs. J. Sherry, co-ordinator of the Fashion Show told of the many new furs and styles to be shown and the Chapter is hoping for a good attendance as the proceeds will be used to further educational work. Mrs. Smith's group served lunch.

The Experts Say

Queen Crab Becomes Popular Seafood Dish

OTTAWA (CP) — Some like it hot and some like it cold, but nearly everyone who has sampled it likes queen crab, The department of fisheries is striving to ensure that its potential is finally being realized.

Until a few years ago, this delicately flavored shellfish was known only to Atlantic fishermen, who found it entangled in their nets, eating their lobster and trap bait and generally being a nuisance.

Studies in 1963 and 1966, however, convinced the department there was an abundant supply of the long-legged crab with a value of $100,000. Last year the catch soared to almost 11,000,000 pounds.

This year the 20,000,000-pound mark is expected to be reached. Queen crab now is stocked in food stores from coast to coast.

It is available in six-ounce and one-pound packs. In a main-course dish, a pound serves four to six people.

Queen crab can be combined with cantaloupe for a refreshing seafood salad. Thaw a six-ounce package of crab and drain well. Cut the meat into one-inch chunks.

Next, halve a medium-sized ripe cantaloupe, s w e e t o t h fashion. Remove the seeds and cut out most of the fruit, using a grapefruit knife or melon-ball cutter.

Measure one cup of the cantaloupe balls and add to the crab. Also add ½ cup sliced celery and ¼ cup chopped nuts. Moisten the mixture with mayonnaise and mix lightly, then heap the salad into the cantaloupe shells and serve.

'Time of Change,' Topic at CWL Meeting

MARMORA — The September meeting of Marmora Council of the CWL was held Monday evening after Mass. President, Mrs. P. J. O'Neill, welcomed members and new parishioner, Mrs. Rose Lajoie.

Correspondence read by Mrs. Tom Brady, secretary, included letters from missions in foreign countries acknowledging donations. A directive from the diocesan president, Mrs. Arnold Mangan, emphasized the importance of each League member working on a standing committee.

In her program on church life, Mrs. Charles Brady, convener, suggested a study club course at meetings during the year using the book "Time of Change," written by a Jesuit priest. This was met with approval, and men of the parish will be invited to share in this course.

Ways and means of increasing membership were discussed by convener, Mrs. Tom Hanley, and it was generally felt that a blitz to contact the whole parish would be the best method.

Mrs. Charles Lajoie read a letter from Madonna House, Combermere, thanking members for recent parcels sent which had been used to assist a burnt-out family in that area. Mrs. William Monk described conditions under which an adopted family in Southern India live, and thanked those who had contributed to a fund for encouragement was given to other groups of women in the League to become involved in this rewarding project through the "Save the Family" plan.

Mrs. Kay McCoy and Mrs. Paul Brady will serve on the radio, TV and films committee. Excerpts from an article regarding the problems of alcoholism were read by Mrs. Joe Maloney, Family Life convener.

Mrs. Breen O'Connor, 1st vice-president of the Diocesan CWL Council of Social Organization and Development, gave an account of executive meeting in Kingston September 6, outlining the new methods of reporting by convenors. Regional meeting for this area will be in Trenton, Sunday, October 5 and Mrs. O'Connor asked for a large attendance of a good attendance by local CWL members.

New business included catering for the Holy Name banquet in the parish hall on November 4 by the ladies, and for the Murphy — Smith wedding banquet on October 11 by group 3-4-5.

Date for annual parish bazaar was set for October 21 and 22 and the quilt to be raffled at that time was displayed.

WEDDINGS

MINAKER — FARRELL

A double-ring wedding ceremony was solemnized recently at Wesley United Church, Point Lona, San Diego, California, when Bonnie Rae Farrell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Salo of Superior, Wisconsin was united in marriage to George Ernest Minaker, only son of Mrs. Merton Cummings, Deseronto and grandson of Mrs. Margaret Emmons, also of Deseronto. Rev. M. Homeston, Methodist Church minister officiated at the ceremony.

The bride wore a white lace crepe dress enhanced with lace sleeves and carried a bouquet of pink r o s e s and baby's breath with matching flowers in her hair.

Preceding the ceremony, the couple who were unattended walked down the aisle of the church together.

A reception was held on the Rubin E. Lee river boat on Harbour Island Drive, San Diego, where the bride's mother welcomed the guests wearing an aqua linen dress with white accessories, assisted by the bridegroom's mother who wore a beige lace over taffeta dress with green accessories. A buffet luncheon was served at which time the bride's sister Mrs. Lee Morelock of Appleton, Wisconsin and the bride's daughter, Miss Pamela Farrell assisted. Richard Belo, brother of the bride, ushered the guests at the reception.

The couple will reside at Lima Valley Place, L o m a Point, San Diego.

ROBINSON — REAVIE

TWEED — The recent wedding was solemnized in Flinton United Church, when Carolyn Martha Reavie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Reavie, of RR1, Flinton, was united in marriage to Mr. Lloyd Gordon Robinson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Robinson of Actinolite. Rev. C. Wayne Hilliker of Toronto was the official in the ceremony. George Grubb played appropriate nuptial selections and accompanied the soloist, Mrs. Roy Wiley.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor length empire style gown of white crepe with lace coat.

Miss Elizabeth James as maid of honor, and the Misses Wanda Reavie and Darlene Holmes as bridesmaids were identically gowned in street-length yellow crepe dresses with lace bodices.

Wayne Robinson was groomsman, and the guests were ushered by Neil Reavie, Allan Robinson, Glenn Andrew and John Kot.

For the reception in the Flinton Town Hall, the bride's mother received the guests wearing a blue crimplene dress. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother who chose a mauve crimplene dress.

Following a trip to New York State the couple took up residence in Bowmanville.

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (AP) — The New Zealand Family Planning Association will launch a comic strip giving contraceptive advice, an Auckland doctor announced.

Club Activities

GAMMA MU CHAPTER

The first meeting of the Gamma Mu Chapter, Beta Sigma Phi was held at the home of Mrs. Donald Deacon.

The program, entitled "Oratory" was presented by Mrs. Robert Owen who introduced the speaker Mr. Lee Jourard. He led the discussion aimed at pointing out the importance of the communication of ideas through conversation.

Highlighting the meeting was a discussion of the fashion show sponsored by Beta Sigma Phi in conjunction with Belleville Week. The show will feature local models as well as professional ones. It will be held Tuesday, Sept. 30 at Centennial Secondary School. Tickets are available from any member.

The ritual of affirmation was held for three members. Later refreshments were served by co-hostess Mrs. John Steinbacher.

Family Reunions

MURPHY CLAN

TWEED — The second annual reunion for the Michael Murphy family was held recently at Beaver Lake under sunny skies and it saw the descendants of Michael's family of John, Annie, Pat, Mary, Maggie and Jude, all mingling together, renewing old acquaintances and making new ones.

This year, 250 Murphy cousins came from many parts of Michigan, New York State and Canada to join in the family festivities.

The day began at Erinsville with Mass for the family celebrated by Monsignor William Murphy of Grand Rapids.

During the service, tribute was paid both to the forefathers, who established such solid traditions and to the present generation, who were exemplifying those ideals. Mrs. Stafford Murphy, as organist, led the group in hymns.

Following the Mass, the family gathered together to enjoy a bountiful buffet dinner at Beaver Lake. Joseph Murphy of Enterprise, as president of the group, officially welcomed everyone and conducted the business details. Frank Kinlin explained the family tree charts that had been posted previously and noted that there were 366 living in direct family line and 105 who had married into the family.

A number of prizes were distributed at this time.

It was decided to hold the next reunion in 1971 and the following were chosen as committee members: Frank Murphy, of Stirling; Ray LeSage, Thomas Hopkins, Pat Lance, of Flint, Michigan; Elsmere Lake, Joseph Murphy and Miss Dillon, Patricia Ann LeSage, Winston Cousins, Terry LeSage, Laureate Murphy, of Saginaw, Michigan.

MR. AND MRS. DAVID J. LIVINGSTON

: Livingston — Latimer

Christ Anglican Church in Belleville was the scene of the recent wedding of Helen Latimer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Latimer of Melford, Sask., and David James Livingston, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. Goldworth Livingston, Belleville. Rev. M. J. Casswell officiated at the ceremony. Miss Jean Ashworth, Toronto, was soloist.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length gown of lizzie fabric with empire styling featuring a long sweeping train. Both the dress and train were trimmed with white appliques of roses. Her fourtier veil of silk illusion fell from a headdress of white rosebuds and tulle leaves. Her flowers were a cascade of apricot glamelias.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Jack Vinland of Toronto. Bridesmaids were Ruth Wright, cousin of the bridegroom, and Andrea Anne Latimer, sister of the bride. They were all dressed identically in floor-length gowns of apricot peau - de - chembe with chiffon sleeves and matching headdress. All carried nosegays of yellow and white 'mums.

Best man was Gary Legault, Sarnia. Ushers were Gary Ross, Belleville, cousin of the bridegroom and J. P. Smith, Stratford.

The bride's mother received the guests in the Pinnacle Room at the Quinte Hotel. She wore a coat and dress ensemble of lilac worsted silk and a matching feather hat with gray accessories and a corsage of pink and white 'mums. The bridegroom's mother wore an imported ensemble of pure silk brocade accented by a mink muff. She wore brown accessories and a corsage of apricot and white 'mums.

For travelling the bride changed into an off-white matching coat and dress ensemble with green accessories and a corsage of yellow roses.

They will reside in Toronto at 880 Jane St., Apt. 806.

Tasty Spiced Peach Chutney

By MARY MOORE

You understand that when I cook something in the kitchen as I have to write about it while the news is hot. This explains why this is written in September, 1969 for release in September, 1970.

My September 1969 Chutney was called English Fruit Chutney. Today's is Spiced Peach Chutney — similar but peachier and spicier. I love it and will use it during the winter when I have curry dinners.

SPICED PEACH CHUTNEY
(Skrizes 28-oz. jars)

- 6 qts. ripe tomatoes (17 cups when prepared and drained)
- 5 qts. ripe peaches (19 cups when prepared and sliced)
- 3 cups seedless raisins
- 5 cups chopped green peppers
- 3 cups chopped onions
- 1¼ cup preserved ginger, chopped finely, (optional)
- 1 tbsp. salt
- 1 tbsp. cinnamon
- 2 tsps. nutmeg
- 1 tsps. allspice
- 3 lbs. light brown sugar.

Scald tomatoes in boiling water, core, peel and quarter them. Drain off excess watery liquid in colander, pressing a little. Then into very large, heavy preserving kettle (I used a large cast aluminum) and turn on heat low.

Scald peaches in boiling water, peel, cut in halves, remove stones and slice. Stir into tomatoes in preserving kettle. Keep a long wooden spoon to hand all the time for very frequent stirring.

Now add all remaining ingredients except sugar. Raise heat and boil gently until thick, adding sugar during last half hour. Mine simmered away for six hrs. until it was thick enough for me. It should be thick like chili sauce.

Sterilize sixteen 20-oz. jars and lids in the oven. Pour Chutney into them from small pitcher with broad lip and seal wash, and label.

Does Society Indulge Wrong-doers?

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: Some time ago in your column you said you don't eliminate evil by suppressing it!"

Was God wrong then in giving the Ten Commandments? Should we dispose of our army and police? Children of this district have robbed and destroyed my garden several times. When I complained to the social worker, she laughed in my face and said, "Oh, but these are modern children." Is that your attitude?

Children also deliberately went into my basement and stole a number of things, among them keepsakes which I had kept from a past generation. These were distributed to other neighborhood children.

Speaking to the parents was useless and the social worker sided with the children who did it, even though it was evident they lied. — No Justice.

Dear No: Of course we need laws and enforcers. But putting the lid on a live volcano could cause an explosion.

I meant that love, not suppression, is the fulfilling of the law, as taught in six by Christ. There is room for some tolerance and understanding of mischievous children and other wrong-doers.

I am sorry I can't explain what happened in your case, but I'm guessing that the social worker was trying to do something to bring out the best in those kids, whose homes were the broken or near-broken kind, and hoped for help from you.

She didn't want them slapped down even harder.

* * *

Dear Doris: I am a girl of 18 and I have a crush on my English teacher. He is very young and quite good looking.

Lately I have been going in after school for special English classes. How can I get rid of this crush? — Confused.

Dear Confused: Don't lose it; enjoy it. Recognize it for what it is: a head-over-heels fascination with an older person who seems to you to be particularly nice. Keep it to yourself.

At your age I had a lovely crush on my French teacher, a twinkling, pretty young lady. And I learned my French! I still enjoy her memory.

* * *

Dear Doris: I am the president of a bowling league and have a banquet coming up in the near future. There will be a head table for the league executive and special guests.

Would you please tell me who and how to address first, second, and so on? — Just Howie

Dear Howie: Take your pic (1) "Ladies and Gentlemen."

(2) "Honored guests, members of the league and guests."

(3) "Mr. Mayor (or other dignitary, if any), honored guests, etc. — "

If you try to roll off a long list of individual names the whole thing becomes laborious and boring. Recognize prestige, but season it with a dash of diplomacy.

Ann Landers

Fiancee Disturbed By Family's Loving

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am dating a fine young man and he has asked me to marry him. My folks think Arnold is marvelous and I must say he treats me beautifully. The problem is this: Arnold acts so strange when he is with his family that I wonder if they are normal.

For example: Last night Arnold's brother Ben (age 22) asked him for a loan of $10. Arnold replied, "You are a person of proven integrity and you can have anything I have. I love you."

Ben took the $10, kissed Arnold and said, "Thank you. I love you, too."

They were not kidding, Ann. This is the way they talk to each other all the time. What's more, they always kiss each other and their parents hello and good-by. I've never seen anything like it. We are a close family, but this is ridiculous.

Do you think Arnold and I could have a good marriage? — Q.T.

* * *

DEAR Q.: It's how Arnold treats you that counts, and according to your letter, he treats you very well. I admit his family's behavior is unusual to say the least, but I see nothing here to indicate that Arnold would not be a loving husband.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am 20, male, and have been smoking pot since I was 17. I've heard a lot of weird stories about pot and most of them are lies. The stories are supposed to scare kids off. Some of my friends have been smoking for five years and have had no bad effects. Other have gotten into all kinds of trouble. Your reaction depends on the physical condition of the smoker and how strong the stuff is. I got off pot weeks ago and I hope you will print my letter because it might help somebody.

Six months after I started to smoke I began to get terrific headaches which lasted two and three days. Then I developed a sort of sleeping sickness. I could fall asleep any place, any time, in any position.

When I started to fall asleep on the highway I decided I'd better quit, but I kept going back to the joints because I liked the feeling. Pot smokers tell each other it is not habit forming but I'd like to know what you call it when you can't quit.

Two months ago I was high from a smoke and decided to drive to a town only 22 miles away. The next thing I knew I was in the hospital. I had fallen asleep at the wheel and hit an abutment. The car was demolished and I was lucky to get out alive. I was also lucky that I didn't kill a car full of people.

I thank God I got off pot before it wrecked my life. I'd sign my name but my folks would die of the shock. — HORSEHOE HERB.

* * *

DEAR HERB: It's nice to wake up alive, isn't it? Not all people have your kind of luck. Thanks for writing.

* * *

DEAR ANN: I'm floored by your reference to the Hoyt sisters, Ima and Ura. You've been had. Ima is for real but Ura is a myth. That pot-on has been floating around for ages. Only the gullible yokels believe it. How come you did? — HOUSTONIAN.

* * *

DEAR HOUSTONIAN: I guess I must be a gullible yokel. What else?

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am not sober as I write this letter. I've just finished my fourth can of beer and I needed every drop of it to get the guts to write this letter.

I am a 16-year-old guy and have been getting drunk almost every night since I was 14. I usually drink wine because it's the cheapest thing I can get my hands on.

I want to quit because I know I am wrecking my life but I haven't got enough willpower. Last year I went to my school counselor and he helped me but he won't help me anymore. I broke my word and got drunk and was kicked out of school.

My family doesn't care about me and I am sinking lower every day. Is it possible that a kid of 16 can be an alcoholic? Please help me. I am desperate. — YOUR FRIEND JIM.

* * *

DEAR FRIEND: Yes, a 16-year-old can be an alcoholic and you are living proof. Are you aware that alcoholism is a symptom of a deeper problem? Why do you need to numb your brain and pickle yourself regularly? Why do you find life so unbearable? What are you running away from? These are the questions that must be answered.

Get in touch with Alcoholics Anonymous. (It is listed in the phone book.) And please don't be self-conscious or reluctant to go to a meeting because you are only 16. A. A. helps everyone who wants to be helped.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Mother: "We have such a good, considerate baby. I never have to pick her up or play with her. She doesn't mind being in her crib most of the time."

Friend: "She's so good because you've never spoiled her."

Mother: "Tracy is such a happy baby. She smiles the minute she sees us and tries to make sounds when I talk to her. She's getting so sociable and enjoys being out here with the family part of the time."

A tiny baby blossoms in a climate of loving attention and needs to be cuddled, given smiles and tender words. These do not spoil a child but will help her develop a loving and happy disposition.

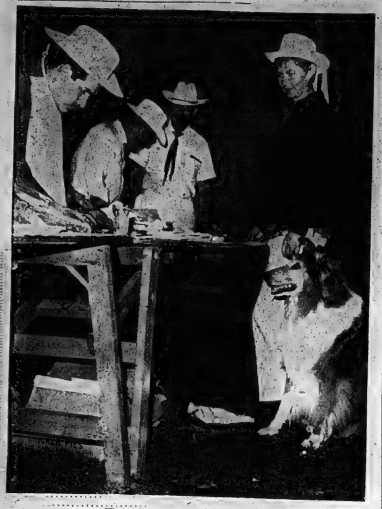
Junior Choirs Enjoy Camp



NAPANEE — The junior choirs of Trinity United Church and Madoc United Church once more enjoyed a camping weekend at the Aylsworth Lodge on Hay Bay. Mrs. Aylsworth is the organist and director of the senior choir in Trinity and Mr. Aylsworth directs the junior choir.

The weekend was a mingling of work and play. Friday evening was spent in music, directed by Mrs. Devolin of Madoc, followed by a swim, and topped off by a corn roast.

Saturday was a full day, beginning with music and going on to swimming and games. In the afternoon Mrs. Margaret Murphy with the help of Mrs. Roy Lawrence, taught crafts to the over 50 young people. Then came the final rehearsal, before everyone gathered in the banquet hall of Trinity Church for a banquet, given by the UCW, with Mrs. Bruce Davis as convener.

Mrs. Donald McCabe, the choir mother of Trinity's junior choir, gave her assistance throughout. During the evening, on behalf of the young folk, she presented Mr. and Mrs. Aylsworth with a vase, and spoke words of the appreciation felt by everyone. The ministers of both churches and their wives were guests, as well as all other adults who had assisted.

By coincidence, the interim minister, Rev. Sidney E. Lanman, had chosen "God is at the organ" as the topic of his sermon before he knew of the special music. The sermon was a tribute to the choir director and to the junior and senior choirs of the church.

Conversion Possibility

Town Offices in Old School?

PICTON — Deputy Reeve Donald Thompson today said that a portion of Picton's Mary Street School possibly will be converted into town offices within the next two years.

Council has received preliminary planning sketches from consulting engineers Totten, Sims, Hubicki and Associates, Cobourg, illustrating space allocations which could be provided in a single-storey portion of the school.

Council earlier this year decided to demolish the front part of the school, which has been condemned for several years. Repeated vandalism partially prompted the decision to tear down the building.

Mr. Thompson observed this morning that the rear of the building is about 18 years old and could provide a good location for town offices, including the police station and cells.

The deputy reeve says feasibility of the project hinges on the cost of necessary renovations.

"I think it could be a $25,000 to $40,000 job," he remarked. "There is no blueprint with a definite cost established."

He felt that the school's spacious basement could successfully serve as a lock-up and emphasized the excellent parking facilities behind the school. The parking area was opened for public use some months ago but is seldom used.

The idea of converting the building to town offices at this stage is a possibility subject to change by cost factors.

York Street School, closed and turned over to the town at the same time as Mary Street School, will be sold at public auction in the near future.

UIC Move Here No Sudden Idea; Cost Big Factor

Moving of the Regional Headquarters of the Unemployment Insurance Commission out of Toronto was not a sudden idea 1969.

Guests attending the official opening yesterday of the new UIC building on Dundas Street East, were told that such a move was discussed as far back as nine years ago.

The subject arose among officials several times since then. But it was not until the past 18 months that a serious study was taken to determine if such a move was practical.

J. L. Stevens, regional director of the UIC office, said that rising costs of office and domestic accommodation in Toronto had sparked the move.

Extensive surveys were conducted in ten smaller cities across the province to ascertain whether a move would be practical and feasible.

* * *

Mayor Scott said this was one of his brightest days as mayor of Belleville.

"I am the grateful mayor of a grateful city," he said, referring to the transfer of UIC regional headquarters to this city.

Mr. Mackasey reviewed the record of the Unemployment Insurance Commission which within the past three years had been completely re-organized with a substantial reduction in administrative costs while at the same time increasing its efficiency and productivity.

Quoting a recent article in the Financial Post, Mr. Mackasey said "The UIC is doing more for less."

"The effect has been that over the past two years the UIC has actually reduced its budget by seven per cent, or several millions of dollars despite a workload increase of 17 per cent and statutory wage increase of three per cent."

"That adds up to a net saving in operations over two years of 20 per cent."

In addition to a significantly improved financial situation, the UIC has also taken steps to better its service to claimant by instituting a complete mail service and has begun a program of claimant service centres across Canada to better assist claimants with their problems.

One of the contributing factors to the battle for greater efficiency in the UIC, Mr. Mackasey said, has been the introduction of computers to speed the operation of getting cheques to claimants.

A computer of the type installed at the Belleville office can handle up to 50,000 cheques per day. Three million unemployment cheques are mailed out in Ontario each year.

Referring to the decision to move the UIC office to Belleville, Mr. Mackasey said 19 different alternative locations had been considered before this city was chosen.

The move, he said, would result in savings of up to $200,000 annually in rent alone, while the advantages of improved working conditions in a highly functional building "would be a revelation to all who work here."

Computerization of the UIC operation had resulted in a staff reduction of approximately 800 people but the transition had been made with a minimum of effect on employees, many of whom found positions in other government departments.

"Efficiency and saving money is important, but people are a lot more important," he concluded.

Chief UIC commissioner Jacques Desroches said the transfer of the regional office to Belleville was another progressive step by his department.

Change, he said, means a challenge and the ability to meet that challenge was keeping up with the times.

"This new building is a manifestation of the fact that the UIC has kept up with the times."

Public Works Minister Hon. Arthur Laing said he was glad to see the decentralization of government services.

With Canada stretching 4,000 miles from the Atlantic to the Pacific he said the trouble with this country was that too few Canadians knew other Canadians.

For the good of the country, "we have got to have decentralization," he said.

The results were positive, indicating a considerable saving to the taxpayer and Belleville was selected as the logical location.

But it was the high cost of living in Toronto (the highest in Canada) which was greatly responsible for the move said Mr. Stevens. This factor proved most detrimental when endeavoring to attract competent people from other area offices.

Well - qualified personnel flatly refused to transfer to regional headquarters in Toronto even if a promotion was waiting for them.

The answer was the move to Belleville where living costs were lower.

Yesterday Mr. Stevens told the official opening day guests there had been many doubters last May — when construction commenced — that the new building would be ready for September.

But the deadline had been met and the regional director said the new building would aid the UIC considerably in its desire to acquire a "new look".

The full staff complement at the Belleville UIC regional headquarters will be about 320 people.

Currently on staff are some 280 — more than 200 of them transferred from the Toronto office.

Taking the Tour

Finance Minister Edgar Benson, (left), Belleville Mayor J. Russell Scott and Labor Minister Hon. Bryce Mackasey take conducted tour of new UIC regional headquarters yesterday. Mr. Mackasey cut the ribbon to officially open the new building. The event climaxed months of planning and construction. But the move — from offices in Toronto — had been debated as long as nine years ago. Costs were a prime factor in seeking alternative accommodation outside expensive metropolitan region, officials say.

Ribbon Was Cut, Workers Kept On Working

The old post office motto that "The mail must go through" has nothing on the new regional headquarters of the Unemployment Insurance Commission at Belleville.

While most of the 280 staff members were given time off to watch the official opening ceremonies for the new building, computer room workers and members of the mailing department remained right at their jobs.

Claimant cheques for nearly all Ontario are mailed out from the Belleville office and — as one official put it "they are waiting for their cheques."

Other regional office employees, however, ended their day's work just before three o'clock and congregated on the front lawn with invited guests to watch the official opening proceedings.

Stout Defence Keeps Ticats Undefeated

WINNIPEG (CP) — Coaches Joe Restic of Hamilton Tiger-Cats and Joe Zaleski of Winnipeg Blue Bombers harmonized in praise of their defensive teams Wednesday night.

Restic had a little more to say about, though, as his team remained undefeated in the Canadian Football League with a 17-7 interlocking victory over Winnipeg.

But despite the loss, Zaleski thought his defenders had shown a vast improvement over their last loss, 11-7 to British Columbia Lions.

The Hamilton defence came up with three key interceptions and a fumble recovery in helping defeat Winnipeg while the Bombers' held the powerful Eastern Conference team in check for much of the game, including two goal-line stands.

It wasn't enough though as Hamilton struck early with a touchdown by Dave Fleming who capped a 39-yard drive with a two-yard plunge in the first quarter.

Tommy Joe Coffey, the EFC leading scorer, converted that touchdown, added a single to provide the only scoring of the third quarter, then made good on his fourth field goal attempt in the final 15 minutes for an 11-0 lead. Ted Page took an interception 30 yards for Hamilton's final touchdown late in the quarter.

The Bombers surged back with a touchdown by Amos Van Pelt following Coffey's field goal, finishing off a drive that started on their 35-yard line. Pierre Guindon converted to narrow the Hamilton lead to 11-7.

Time was running out when the Tiger-Cats were forced to punt. With 24 seconds remaining, Winnipeg quarterback Wally Gabler elected to try a swing pass to halfback Butch Pressley on the last play of the game but Page stepped in front of Pressley, grabbed the pass and had a clear field as he ran 30 yards for the clinching touchdown as the game ended. There was no convert attempt as fans converged on the field.

It was Page's second interception of the game and Gerney Henley provided the other Hamilton interception, a big play in the end zone after the Bombers had moved the ball to the Hamilton 16-yard line.

The victory moved Hamilton into first place in the east with five wins and a tie for 11 points, one more than Ottawa Rough Riders and Toronto Argonauts.

Winnipeg remained in third place in the west with five points on two wins, five losses and a tie.

Lucky Creeper Says
God's Wonder of the Year
THE PUTTING GRIP IS A FINGER-LOCKING GRIP

Most skilled golfers use the reverse overlap grip for putting. That is, the left forefinger is locked over the right little finger (Shestruck). This tends to properly reduce the influence of the stronger right hand.
Grip just tightly enough to hold onto the club. A tighter grip is likely to produce unwanted tension.
I want both thumbs to go straight down the top of the shaft, and my palms to face each other exactly. The back of the left hand should directly face the intended line.

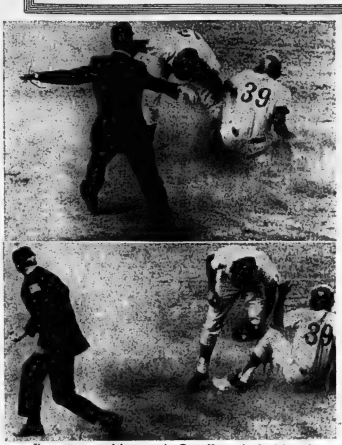
Symons Signs for Three

TORONTO (CP) — Bill Symons says he will be satisfied staying with Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League for another three years.



The 28-year-old fullback ended his holdout Wednesday and agreed to terms of a new three-year contract with coach Leo Cahill. Terms were not disclosed but it is believed Symons will earn between $28,000 and $30,000 a season.

The six-foot, 205-pounder, named outstanding player in Canadian football last season, had been holding out for a two-year contract paying more than $30,000 a season.

Symons, who had been playing under the option of his previous contract, said:

"I was serious about returning to the American pro leagues. Now I'm satisfied to stay in Toronto for at least three years."

The Denver, Colo., native was a sixth-round draft choice of Green Bay Packers in the National League, but joined British Columbia Lions midway through the 1966 season.

It appears second base umpire Doug Harvey is about to make a safe call. Top, but bottom frame shows he is emphatic about calling Montreal's Jose Laboy (39) out on an attempted steal in 2nd inning of first game of a twi-night double header.

Mets Finally Reach Pinnacle, Give Expos Food for Thought

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Montreal Expos, with a 44-99 won-loss record and smarting from a double defeat at the hands of New York Wednesday, can take heart in the fact that seven years ago today the Mets were in last place in the National League with a 35-105 record.

Today, the Mets are in first place in the Eastern Division, one game ahead of Chicago Cubs after downing the Expos 3-2 in 12 innings and 7-1 in a doubleheader Wednesday. The Cubs, meanwhile, lost 6-2 to Philadelphia Phillies.

In ther NL action, Houston Astros defeated Los Angeles 7-1 to tie the Dodgers for fourth in the Western Division, just two games back of first-place San Francisco Giants.

San Francisco lost 8-4 to Atlanta Braves but remained one-half game ahead of both Cincinnati Reds and the Braves. St. Louis Cardinals swept Pittsburgh Pirates 11-2 and 2-1 while San Diego Padres edged the Reds 2-1.

The hit that thrilled Met fans was a single by Ken Boswell in the 12th inning of the opener. It scored Cleon Jones and put the Mets in first place for the first time this year.

The Mets increased their lead to a full game in the nightcap as they erupted for six runs in the third inning and Nolan Ryan pitched a three-hitter.

Montreal got three hits and two runs in the first two innings of the opener off Jim McAndrew. McAndrew limited the Expos to one more hit until he was taken for a pinch hitter in the 11th. Ron Taylor of Oakville, Ont., pitched the 12th and got the victory.

The Mets had plenty of trouble with Mike Wegener, who yielded just five hits and struck out a club record of 15, but they scored one run in the first inning on Art Shamsky's two-out, single and tied the score on the fifth when Wegener balked with the bases loaded. Boswell's game-winning hit came off Bill Stoneman.

New York fell behind 1-0 in the second inning of the nightcap, then wrapped up its sixth straight victory and 22nd in 28 games in the third. Wayne Garrett, Cleon Jones and Boswell each drove in a run in the inning, and three more scored on a wild pitch and two errors.

Howard Issues Challenge For AL Home Run Honors

Reggie Jackson is itching to regain his American League home run-hitting lead from Frank Howard. He's also just plain itching.

Howard slapped his 46th of the season to match Jackson's output in backing Dick Bosman's two-hitter as Washington Senators whipped New York Yankees 6-1 Wednesday night.

But Jackson was deprived of at least an opportunity to go back on top a few hours later when he was sent home from the Oakland ball park with a case of the hives. It wasn't sudden just how long he would be out.

Jackson wasn't the only one to desert the fast fading Athletics. Only 1,945 fans, the smallest crowd in the Bay area's major league baseball history, turned up to see Seattle Pilots' 9-4 victory. That pinned the fifth straight loss on the Athletics, their 13th in 18 games, and put them another big step toward mathematical elimination in the Western Division.

Thanks to the Pilot victory, Minnesota Twins, who had only a two-game lead over Oakland just a little more than two weeks ago, maintained their 9½ game bulge despite a 3-2 loss to Chicago White Sox.

Baltimore Orioles whipped Boston Red Sox 8-6, Detroit Tigers stopped Cleveland Indians 4-1 and California Angels defeated Kansas City Royals 11-4 in other games.

Bosman held the Yankees hitless until Jimmy Hall lined a double to left centre with one out in the eighth. Jerry Kenney followed with a single for the only other New York hit, producing the lone run.

Ken McMullen hit his 18th homer in the fourth, a solo blast, and Howard put it away in the next inning with his shot with two men aboard.

Saskatchewan: 27-8

Dalton Blasts Als' Offensive Line

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal's head coach Kay Dalton took a rap at his offensive line Tuesday night in the wake of their 27-8 loss to Saskatchewan Roughriders.

The interlocking Canadian Football League game saw the Als extend their winless streak this season to seven games, including two ties. The Saskatchewan victory was the first by a Western Football Conference club over the East in 12 inter-conference games played this year.

"That offensive line was lousy from tackle to tackle," Dalton said. "It was just garbage."

However, he said he was pleased with the play of his defence.

Twice in the second quarter, with the Riders leading 10-0, the Montreal offence was stopped inside the Saskatchewan five-yard line, having three tries for a touchdown each time.

"An offensive line, any offensive line, should be able to move a defensive line back two yards," said Dalton. "They didn't look bad on pass protection, but the line wasn't moving the club in the running game."

The win left the Riders with 13 points and Western Conference leaders by four points over Calgary Stampeders. The loss jammed the Als deeper in the Eastern cellar.

Jack Abendschan, Saskatchewan's place-kicking specialist, increased his WFC scoring lead by 11 points on four field goals and two converts, giving him 68 points and a 34-point lead over his closest rival.

Quarterback Ron Lancaster threw a nine-yard pass to Gordie Barwell for one touchdown in the opening quarter. Glen McKinnie ran 11 yards for a second major late in the game. Punter Alan Ford counted a 42-yard single in the fourth quarter.

The Als counted a single by John Baker in the third quarter. Carroll Williams, who replaced starter Sonny Wade at quarterback, hit flanker Tom Cassese in the last quarter. Baker converted.

Ottawa Loses Racine for Argo Game

OTTAWA (CP)—Ottawa Rough Rider coach Frank Clair found himself with a player problem Wednesday that could upset the team's lineup for its Saturday clash with the surging Toronto Argonauts.

Clair lost the services of Canadian defensive linemen Jim Cain and Moe Racine after a tilt with the Montreal Alouettes last weekend, and has recalled Ed Joyner, placed on waivers by the club two weeks ago.

Racine came out of the Alouette encounter with a broken shoulder bone and Cain, who picked up what appeared to be a bad calf bruise, has had the injury diagnosed as a muscle tear and will be out for at least two games.

Camaro In Fast Crowd

Trenton high school teacher Jerry Dora was glad for a fourth - place overall finish in the Novice Sports Car Race Sunday at Keeper's Indian Summer Trophy program.

After all, he and his Trudeau (Belleville) Camaro were in pretty fast company.

Winner of the 30 car event, for instance, was Sarnia's Paul Spence in an open - wheeled Formula B Cooper, capable of speeds of 180 miles per hour.

Dora's performance in his stock Z-28 Camaro earned him a first in the Class A Touring Sedan section, and was his final novice race. Canadian - Automobile Sports Club officials have asked him fit for a higher class of competition against national drivers.

The Trenton teacher takes his step up the autosport ladder next weekend at Harewood Acres near Jarvis, when he will drive his Trudeau Camaro in the Canadian National Sedan Championships.

Juniors Concentrate on 'When' Of Hitting to Down City 2-0

Five hits wouldn't be enough to win a lot of Commercial League Softball games, particularly when two of the league's top pitchers are duelling.

But the Ellis Juniors showed that the "when" of hitting is more important than the "how many," getting key hits in a 2-0 win over City Hotel and a 1-0 lead in the best-of-seven final playoff series. Second game in the series is scheduled for the Alemite at 8 p.m. tonight.

Cleanup man Bob Parsons had a share in two exhibitions of timely hitting that gave the Juniors the runs they needed to beat Bob Ethier and the more experienced City crew.

Leading off in the bottom of the second inning in last night's game, the Juniors' rightfielder cracked a triple and scampered home when Paul Goodfellow followed through with an rbi single to make it 1-0.

A clutch, two-out single by Parsons in the next inning brought home Steve Ling — on, courtesy a City error — to round out the scoring for the Juniors — and the game.

Meanwhile, Scotty Reid was holding the Hotelmen to four hits, striking out eight without giving up a base-on-balls.

Ethier fanned three and walked a pair of Juniors in his five-hitter.

Two of City's four hits contributed a last-inning threat.

Left fielder Jerry Geneersaux cracked a leadoff single but stumbled rounding first and was thrown out by Juniors' rightfielder John Campbell.

Next City batter Doug Hull connected for the second straight safety off Reid, but Ethier hit a double-play ball to Juniors' second-sacker Steve Ling to end the game.

Catcher Larry Potter's double and a single by Ethier accounted for the other City hits.

Shortstop Dale Duvall and catcher Wes Mary got the other Junior hits.

Printers Win Consolation With One-inning Explosion

Without the fourth inning of last night's final game in the Departmental Softball League's consolation playoff series, the Intelligencer might have been in need of consoling.

A 13- run fourth inning permitted the Printers to coast to a 14-9 win over International Hardware. Recreation Club taking the consolation round 3-2, with two ties.

The Intelligencer used three pitchers in the win. Starter Ron Culloden left in favor of Dave Feeney, who was credited with the win. Feeney yielded to John Edwards in the fifth, and the "funny-ball" artist recorded the bulk of the Intell pitchers' six strikeouts.

There were no extra-base blows in the Printers' 13-hit attack. Feeney's three hits led the winners, with Bill Moreton, Merv Thompson, and Randy Johnstone each collecting a pair of safeties.

Ron Culloden, Pat Brown, John Edwards and Ron Broadbridge each contributed a hit.

Losing pitcher Ken Osborne had temporary relief in the disastrous fourth inning from Harold Redquest. Between them, the IHRC hurlers fanned five and walked three.

Bill Angove paced the nine-hit Hardware attack with a double and single. Don Brown and Cy Halford each hit a brace of singles, and Ray Ryan poked a triple. Gord Thompson and Tom Cain added singles.

Falcons Plumed

The Falcons are pretty young to be precedent-setters, but the Belleville Minor Soccer Association Bantam house league and cup champions have done just that.

At a Zwick's Island get-together organized by the privately-sponsored Falcons, members of the "A" and "B" sections of the team were each presented with distinctive yellow and black crests.

This makes the Falcons the first team in the still young city minor soccer association to obtain such recognition.

Black Hawks Banished To Western Division

panded to 12 from six teams for the 1967-68 season, the entrance fee was $2,000,000.

The six newcomers then were bunched into a new division and included St. Louis Blues, Pittsburgh Penguins, Philadelphia Flyers, Minnesota North Stars, Oakland Seals and Los Angeles Kings.

The joint announcement said the league's board of governors had unanimously approved the following steps effective in the 1970-71 season:

1. The addition of two more teams which will boost NHL membership to 14 with seven teams in each of the two divisions.

2. As the first step toward full divisional realignment of its teams, Chicago Black Hawks will play in a division including Los Angeles, Minnesota, Oakland, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and St. Louis. The two new teams will be matched in a division including Boston Bruins, Detroit Red Wings, Montreal, New York Rangers and Toronto Maple Leafs. The names of the two divisions have not yet been announced. Further and full realignment of the various teams by divisions will be completed prior to the 1974-75 season. This further realignment may be accomplished in one or more additional steps and may include a third expansion of the league to more than 14 teams, possibly including European entries.

3. A completely balanced schedule of 76 games in which all 14 member clubs will play each other three times at home and three away.

4. A change in the format of the Stanley Cup playoffs. Currently, playoff competition is on an intra-divisional basis until each division produces a winner and the two divisional champions meet in the Stanley Cup finals. Under the new playoff format, the four top teams in each division will play in the opening round in their own division, but in the next semi-final round, the two winners in one division will play the two winners in the other division, with the two survivors meeting in the Stanley Cup final. All series will be on a best four-of-seven basis.

"After many months of board and committee meetings, we feel we have achieved a comprehensive blueprint for the long-ranges growth of the NHL," Jennings said.

"We are now ready to receive formal applications for two new franchises from any city of major-league status in the U.S. or Canada and we are also considering further expansion which could include all of the major hockey centres in the world."

Boating Not Over For Power Squadron

It's just time to start thinking about boats for members of the Bay of Quinte Power Squadron.

Monday night is a n u a l course registration night for the Squadron at the Bay of Quinte Yacht Club, beginning at 8 o'clock.

The off-season courses — for novice boaters and the more seasoned enthusiasts — offer instruction in pilotage, seamanship, navigation, weather and engine mainten a n c e, among other useful water-going skills.

Bob's Auto Takes Lead In Tadpole Championship

Bob's Auto Body got a lien on the city minor baseball tadpole championship last night with a 6-4 win over Morrison Real Estate in the first game in a best-of-three series.

Paul Marrison and Robbie Coates pitched Bob's to the win, giving up five hits, striking out 17 and walking eight between them.

Tim Coates' two homers and double led the batsmen's seven hit attack. Robbie Coates hit two singles, and Fred Wessels and Paul Connors each contributed a safety.

The West Hill champion Morrisons got a 13-strikeout combination pitching performance from Mark Crawford and Shawn Mulroney.

Louis Crawford paced the losers with a pair of singles, while brother Mark, Bill Finlay and Mulroney each cracked a double.

Legion Team Enters Women's Softball Final

The Legion entry in the Belleville and District Ladies' Softball League ast their sights on the loop title last night with a 16-11 win that ousted Black Diamond from the best-of-five semi-final series at effective three games.

Winning pitcher Sharleen Quinn hit a triple in self-support, with major plate contributions coming from Sharon Lumis (homer), Nancy McCallum (homer, triple, double), Marjorie Reid (homer, double), and Gail Darrah (triple).

Connie Carson was the losing pitcher, with Verna Hill's brace of homers topping the Black Diamond girls at the plate.

The Legionettes now meet the winner of the Dixie Lee-Dairy Queen series to decide the league championship.

Minors Register Now

Beginning tonight, a parade of over 1,000 youngsters is expected to begin into the Memorial Arena.

The ice is not in yet, but the Belleville Minor Hockey Association's annual player registration runs tonight and Friday from 7 'til 9 p.m., and Saturday morning at the arena from 9 a.m. to noon.

BMHA president Tom Cavanagh stressed that no registration will be accepted after these dates for the city's minor hockey programs, which accommodated over 1,200 boys last winter.

Hipkin Gets All But One

A four-goal performance by Paul Hipkin led the LaMode Hair Styling to a 5-0 win over Circle TV in Belleville Minor Soccer Association Mosquito action last night.

The fifth LaMode goal went in off Circle defenders.

Meanwhile, Mark's Fish House got a goal from Bob Thompson and Avon Jewellers one from John Marda to create a 1-1 tie in the other Mosquito game of the night.

Trenton Kiwanians Tops

Trenton Kiwanians are still the best golfers of that service club's area chapters.

The foursome of Rev. William Murphy, Frank Hyland, Frank Miron, and Norm Armstrong kept the Corby Cup in Trenton for the second straight year, beating 17 other area Kiwanis teams in Wednesday's annual inter-club tournament at the Bay of Quinte Country Club.

Manitou Wins Canada's Cup, Her Designers Prove Point

TORONTO (CP) — Although Canada won the premier event of Great Lakes sailing early Thursday morning, there is no possibility that this country might attempt world supremacy through an America's Cup challenge.

"We just could not design or build a 12-metre yacht," said George Cassian, who, with partner George Cuthbertson, designed the Canada's Cup champion Manitou.

The Manitou, owned by a three-man syndicate from Toronto's Royal Canadian Yacht Club, finished the third race-last the Canada's Cup ahead of American-owned Niagara shortly after midnight.

She also won the first two races over 21-mile distances and swept the series with a victory by 13 minutes and 38 seconds in the 200-mile endurance test.

But Manitou and Niagara are in the Cruising Club of America Class 37, which gives them cruising waterlines of 37 feet and makes them much smaller than the 12-metre America's Cup yachts.

"There are just too many problems in designing and building that kind of boat," Cassian said. "Manitou is simply an improvement on similar boats we designed previously.

"We don't have anything to work on in a 12-metre yacht. It would be like starting from scratch and hoping to become a world boxing champion your first time in the ring."

Cuthbertson and Cassian did prove, however, they were capable of designing an offshore cruising yacht to beat one designed by the world renowned firm of Sparkman and Stephens of New York City.

The degree of superiority was slight, however, and it took supreme sailing skill to keep Manitou within striking distance in strong winds and bring her from behind to win on the final 100-mile trip around Lake Ontario.

Manitou, after proving her superiority in light weather during the shorter races, took the lead at the start of the 200-mile marathon at noon Tuesday in breezes that gusted to 12 and 15 miles an hour.

Both yachts blew their spinnakers before squalls that gusted to 30 m.p.h. after the first 2 miles and a miscalculation cost Manitou 10 seconds over the following 60 miles.

The mistake along with Niagara's apparent liking for stronger winds gave the American boat a 14-minute lead after 21 miles.

"I guess it was our turn to make the next mistake," said skipper John Lovett of Cleveland, who was in command of Niagara.

"We were coming upwind toward the third mark and we went about 3½ miles to weather off the mark expecting a wind shift that never came."

The mistake cost Niagara about 10 minutes on the 21-mile third leg and Manitou headed down the fourth lap about 4½ minutes behind.

The boats battled side by side around the fourth mark at the 150-mile point, "but I guess we all knew then that we had them," said Cassian.

"We had the weather forecast and it called for our wind—light and moderate," said skipper Perry Connolly, a Manitou co-owner.

Orillia No Match For London Bats

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Paul Allen drove in three runs to lead London Pontiacs to an easy 16-1 victory over Orillia Majors Wednesday in the first game of their Ontario Baseball Association Senior A final.

Second game in the best-of-five series will be played in Orillia but no date has been set.

Allen hit a double and two singles in five trips to the plate. His first single drove in Whitey Lapthorne with London's first run in the first inning and his second scored Brian Pearen in the third inning when the Pontiacs broke the game open with three runs.

Lapthorne also had three hits and Arden Eddie two, including a double.

London outhit Orillia 14-5 as righthander Rick Birmingham went the distance to pick up the victory.

Orillia earned a berth in the final by ousting Belleville Joyces 3-1 in a best-of-five series.

Tremblay Joins Habs To Test Skating Legs

MONTREAL (CP) — Left winger Gilles Tremblay will be in uniform today when Montreal Canadiens open training camp, and there is hope he may be able to help the defending Stanley Cup champions through another National Hockey League season.

The nine-year veteran, bothered by a recurring respiratory ailment that sent him to the sidelines halfway through last season, skated Tuesday and again Wednesday.

Tremblay, hoping to beat the bronchial problem that threatens to end his career, skated ahead of time to test the dampness of an indoor rink. He still is taking medication to ease his breathing problem.

"I must take things day by day and hope for the best. I won't be able to start training as strenuously as the rest of the players but maybe I'll be okay after all."

Tremblay got a big lift Wednesday when Montreal general manager Sam Pollock invited the veteran forward to sign his contract.

Sophomore coach Claude Ruel will greet 111 players to the training camp of the Canadiens and the Montreal Voyageurs, the city's new American Hockey League entry. The two clubs will work out for a week before being formed for exhibition games.

The Canadiens open their exhibition season Saturday, Sept. 20 against Boston Bruins in Montreal. The following day, they meet Philadelphia Flyers as part of a doubleheader at Quebec City where the Voyageurs will make their debut as a team against Quebec Aces, Philadelphia's top farm club.

Shack Tries for Slot

BARRIE, Ont. (CP) — Eddie Shack always wanted to play centre and now he will get the chance, says coach Hal Laycoe of Los Angeles Kings of the National Hockey League.

Shack, nicknamed the entertainer, was traded by Boston Bruins early this year to the Kings who open training camp here today.

A right winger for most of his NHL career with New York Rangers, Toronto Maple Leafs and Boston, Shack has earned a reputation for wandering from his position.

"Shack is a whirling worker," said Laycoe, "and it's my feeling that he has been too restricted in the past, playing on the wing.

"On the wing a player has to worry about his check, he has to play his position. And I've always emphasized positional play. But a centre doesn't have to restrict himself so much."

Shack, 32, now is in his 12th NHL season.

PIT MARTIN
Lists Hawk ills

Martin Says Only Five Hawks 'Wore Uniforms with Pride'

TORONTO (CP) — Centre Pit Martin, who scored 61 points for Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League last season, Wednesday took on that club's owners, general manager, coach and all but four of his team-mates.

In an interview in The Star, Martin said that of all the players on the club that ended last in the Eastern Division last year, only he, Stan Mikita, Ken Wharram, Dennis DeJordy and Pat Stapleton "wear their uniforms with pride and any desire to win."

He also criticized president Bill Wirtz and the club's other owners, general manager Tommy Ivan and coach Billy Reay.

Wirtz, he said, didn't seem to care about anything except healthy box office figures.

"The problem in Chicago is a total lack of direction. There is no leadership at all coming from the owners, the general manager or the coach.

"The second major problem is that there's a star conflict. Hawks have one big star and one fairly big star and the club seems to be set up to keep those two guys happy. The rest of us don't matter much."

Goals were stressed to the detriment of the over-all operation.

"Several of my team-mates have no other ambition. And the defence feels it—plenty."

Martin said he realized he could be causing trouble for himself by speaking out, but "if things are going to be the same around Chicago this season, I want to be traded."

36 Injured, 50 Arrested

French-Speaking Youths Go on Mob Rampage in St. Leonard

MONTREAL (CP) — The Riot Act was read Wednesday night after 1,500 French-speaking youths rampaged through the streets of suburban St. Leonard in the second incident of violence in eight days over English-language school rights.

Fifty persons were arrested and 36 injured in the 90-minute police-banned march. Four hundred provincial police were called in to help the 42-man municipal force quel the demonstration.

Scores of shop windows were smashed along a mile of Jean Talon Street and tear gas canisters were hurled at youths who three times out-flanked police lines set up across the suburb's main street.

Mayor Leo Ouellet read the Riot Act at 9:30 p.m. and the demonstration fizzled out soon after in front of Jerome Le Royer school, destination of the march.

The act empowers police to arrest those who do not disperse within 30 minutes after its reading. The arrested face Criminal Code charges rather than charges under a municipal bylaw.

The march, organized by the Ligue pour l'Integration Scolaire, which advocates French-only instruction in elementary schools, was banned by police because of violence which broke out at an LIS meeting last week.

At that time, persons opposing the gradual elimination of English-language classes battled with LIS supporters in a school auditorium.

Chairs were thrown, two persons were arrested and several were injured, including LIS President Raymond Lemieux.

While the French-speaking youths gathered early Wednesday night in a shopping area just outside St. Leonard limits, Mr. Lemieux told them:

"We are not the aggressors; we can say we are defending ourselves."

When he called the demonstration a "march to liberation," the youths responded with cheers of "Quebec aux Quebecois"—Quebec for Quebecers and "St. Leonard aux Francais"—St. Leonard for French.

The marchers waved Quebec fleur-de-lis flags and carried placards which read "non aux ecoles anglais"—No to English schools.

Led by Mr. Lemieux in a loud-speaker - equipped car, the marchers crossed into St. Leonard and were blockaded three times by riot-equipped police lined four deep. Police each time asked them to turn back because it was an illegal parade.

And while the LIS leader argued the point, most of the marchers out-flanked the police lines through adjacent empty lots.

At one point, attention shifted from the marchers to a small group of changing yoga adherents led by Swami Vishnudevanandu of the True World Order movement.

The Swami, dressed in Oriental robes, read from a text calling for universal peace as he faced both the marchers and the police with their clubs extended.

The demonstration was called in support of a decision by the St. Leonard Roman Catholic school board to gradually eliminate all English-language classes.

The policy was put into effect last September when Grade 1 classes were abolished, a move that affected 205 youngsters.

The board eliminated English-language Grade 2 classes this year and Grades 3 to 7 will meet the same fate on a year-by-year basis.

The English-speaking parents —most of them Italian immigrants—Wednesday registered their Grades 1 and 2 children for temporary classes.

Basement classes, used for 205 Grade 1 children last year, have been ruled illegal by Education Minister Jean-Guy Cardinal.

Three members of the five-man St. Leonard school board are backed by the LIS.

French-speaking persons make up about 52 per cent of St. Leonard's 25,000 population. The remaining 48 per cent are mainly English-speaking Italian immigrants.

Wednesday's marchers met with little resistance from the Italian residents who were urged to remain in their homes to avoid violence.

A handful attempted to set up a barricade several blocks before Jerome le Royer school and they were routed after a brief skirmish.

The demonstrators were pelted with rocks from rooftops and alleyways but their numbers discouraged any serious confrontation.

Three persons were arrested when police intercepted a small van filled with chains, clubs and sharp metal rods.

The Quebec cabinet met in Quebec City Wednesday to consider the legal and fiscal problems raised by an offer from the Protestant School Board of Greater Montreal to provide classroom space for the English-speaking Grades 1 and 2 children whose parents refuse to send them to the French-only schools.

Gerda Damages Nova Scotia Apple Crop

HALIFAX (CP) — Loss of part of the apple crop in Nova Scotia's Annapolis Valley was the most serious damage reported in the wake of hurricane Gerda, which cut through the western section of the Maritime provinces Tuesday night and early Wednesday.

A. E. Calkin, general manager of Scotian Gold Co-operative Ltd. at Kentville, N.S., estimated that between 10 and 15 per cent of the crop had been lost. This represented $300,000 to $450,000 to fruit growers.

The hurricane moved in from the sea with winds up to 140 miles an hour, but the velocity diminished as the storm moved overland. It struck Grand Menan Island, N.B., and then moved northwards across New Brunswick, eastern Quebec and Labrador.

Winds at Yarmouth on the western tip of Nova Scotia reached 82 miles an hour and forced cancellation of fishing in an International Tuna Cup match.

In New Brunswick, Highway 103 between Hartland and Florenceville was washed out at Simonds and will be closed for several days.

Potato farmers in the province reported damage to their crops and feared washouts in some fields might cause extensive losses.

Ferry services between Nova Scotia and New England and between New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island were halted. Five outbound and inbound flights were delayed at Halifax International Airport.

Drivers Beware

Canada's new breath-test law, which goes into effect this year, is similar to a two-year-old British law. In Britain a man suspected of impaired driving is given two breath tests. If both prove positive a blood sample is taken for laboratory testing. The lab sample is accepted in court as evidence for automatic conviction when it indicates more than 80 parts alcohol to 1,000 parts blood. (CP Photo)

Stan Little Again Heads CUPE; Promises Militant Union Campaign

TORONTO (CP) — The powerful Canadian Union of Public Employees re-elected Stan Little, 58, as president Wednesday, but rejected his proposal to increase union dues to help pay for organizing provincial government employees and low-income hospital workers.

A CUPE spokesman said another dues proposal would be brought before delegates today.

The 660 delegates to CUPE's biennial convention were asked to raise per-capita dues to $2.60 by July, 1970, from the present $1.50 a month.

The proposal received the necessary two-thirds majority, but a second vote was ordered when it was found there were 10 more votes cast than the number of delegates. It received only 65 per cent the second time and was declared defeated.

If the increase had been approved, it would have boosted CUPE's 1968-69 budget of about $5,000,000 to nearly $8,000,000 in 1970-71—most of it to go to organizing new union members and beefing up the union's staff.

In his report to the delegates, Mr. Little, president since CUPE's founding in 1963, promised a militant campaign to organize provincial government workers, particularly in Ontario where union certification of provincial employees is illegal.

Employees of most provincies, with the exception of New Brunswick and Quebec, are forbidden to join unions of their choice. CUPE recently organized New Brunswick's provincial employees. Quebec civil servants belong to a Quebec-based union.

A native of Inglewood, Ont., Mr. Little won re-election to his $18,800-a-year post by 459 votes to 146 votes for his nearest opponent, Wally Higgins of Toronto.

CUPE, with 130,000 members, has nearly doubled its size since 1963 and resolved at this convention to seek affiliation with the 120,000-member Public Service Alliance of Canada and the 40,000-member Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers.

Either merger would make CUPE the largest union in Canada, surpassing the United Steelworkers of America, which now holds top place with more than 140,000 Canadian members.

Earlier Wednesday, the convention delegates approved a resolution saying all police in Canada should be given full collective bargaining rights—including the right to strike.

The resolution pointed out that the governments of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia have recently granted their police this right.

Pelletier Sees Canadian Republic

LONDON (CP) — State Secretary Gerard Pelletier says Canada is likely to evolve into a republic within the next generation or two. He also suggests the provincial Liberal party in Quebec may be split strategically though not in doctrine.

Pelletier, on a cultural tour of Britain, discussed Canadian affairs with a group of reporters at a Savoy Hotel luncheon Wednesday when he emphasized the importance he attaches to increasing Anglo-Canadian cultural relations.

In particular he wants an agreement between the two countries to co-operate in joint production of films. He said the British government sees some difficulties involved in this proposal but that he is "very confident" a deal will be worked out sometime soon.

Kenneth Thomson, chairman of Times Newspapers Ltd., one of the guests, suggested to the minister that owners of art collections and other art patrons should be encouraged to assist cultural centres through greater tax concessions. There have been complaints in Canada that the Royal Ontario Museum—as an example—is not getting sufficient from wealthy Canadians because of low tax benefits from contributions.

Pelletier said he had this very much in mind and that "news in that direction" will be announced in the near future.

Asked about the future of the monarchy in Canada, Pelletier said he does not believe this is an urgent problem and the existing situation is "quite satisfactory." He predicted, however, that Canada will become a republic through evolution in one or two generations.

As for the Liberal party in Quebec, he believed the provincial group may be strategically split, with one faction suggesting the party go overboard in flirting with nationalism and separatism and the other urging strong support of the federal system. He believed Quebec voters should have a clear "federal option."

UN Observers Are Useless

NICOSIA (CP) — Don't send a United Nations observer team to do a man's job, many Cypriots are saying after heavy fighting between Egyptian and Israeli forces in the Suez Canal area.

A United Nations force with Canada as the main participant has been keeping peace in Cyprus since 1964. It numbers about 4,000.

Another team of about 90 men —none of them Canadians—has been stationed in the Suez since the 1967 six-day war. The Suez team has merely reported and has been unable to try to stop any of the fighting.

A senior Canadian officer here said Wednesday in an interview: "Observers are useless. Look at Suez."

There are indications the Canadian government would like to cut the 500-man Canadian contingent to the observer force when the UN mandate here comes up for review in the Security Council in December.

Most Greek and Turkish Cypriots and Canadian members of the force seem opposed to any such move as a negation of more than five years work here.

One Canadian officer said that more than anything else, the UN peace-keeping forces need power to disarm guerrilla forces.

The Canadian government tried to obtain such power for the UN force in Cyprus in 1964 without success. The officer said that as a result, Greek and Turkish Cypriots locked in intercommunal strife since 1963 have been able to arm themselves easily and well behind the safety of UN lines.

Osman Orek, Turkish Cypriot defence minister, said in an interview Wednesday he does not believe an observer corps could carry out the UN's job properly in Cyprus.

Everything the UN has done will be thrown away if the force leaves here in December, he said.

Little progress has been made on an agreement between the Greek and Turkish communities on the island.

"Under the circumstances, the UN should stay," Orek said.

Orek himself is an example of the estrangement between Greek and Turkish Cypriots in this country of 600,000. Legally he has been defence minister since Cyprus became independent in 1960, but he has not exchanged a word with the president, Archbishop Makarios, or any other Greek member of the cabinet since December, 1963, when intercommunal rioting broke out.

Under the constitution, he can be dismissed only by the vice-president, a Turkish Cypriot.

World Waits to Hear Canada's UN Vote

OTTAWA (CP) — The slow pace of negotiations on Canadian recognition of mainland China has posed a dilemma for the government in the perennial question of Peking's membership in the United Nations.

How Canada votes on the question could affect talks on recognition, going on intermittently for nearly seven months between Chinese and Canadian diplomats in Stockholm.

Informed sources said Wednesday that the government has not decided how Canada will vote when the issue of Chinese representation in the UN comes up at the forthcoming session of the General Assembly in New York.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp has said Canada's position in the world organization will be consistent with its attitude on recognition of the Peking regime.

At the 1967 and 1968 General Assembly sessions, Canada abstained on the Albanian resolution calling for Nationalist China's ouster from the UN in favor of Red China. The same resolution is expected to come up at the assembly session opening next week. It may come to a vote some time in November.

The question observers here are asking is: What stand will Canada take if the recognition talks have not produced an agreement before the vote at the General Assembly?

An informant said there is "absolutely no way of forecasting" what the government's policy would be in this situation. Mr. Sharp's Canada vote would reflect its decision in principle to recognize Peking—in other words, it would support mainland China.

On the other hand, the "if" qualification he made in Tokyo could be read to mean that Canada will change its UN vote only if agreement on diplomatic relations with Peking has been achieved.

QUEBEC (CP) — Yu Chi Hueh, Chinese ambassador in Canada, said Wednesday that if Canada recognizes the Communist government in Peking it would be a gisservice to the cause of peace in Asia.

"... By adding presitige and power to the Maoist regime", the ambassador said, "Canada's recognition could make the prospect of peace in Asia and the Pacific dimmer and more remote."

He was speaking at a dinner meeting of the Richelieu Club. The text of his speech was released prior to delivery.

The Communist regime has made it clear it want more from Canada than mere recognition, Yu said, it is also asking that Canada endorse Peking's Jurisdiction over Taiwan, home of the Nationalist government which the ambassador represents in Ottawa.

"If Canada should, in her sovereign wisdom, decide to accept these demands in order to establish diplomatic relations with that regime, what lever or influence could Canada then hope to wield, with which to persuade the Maoist regime to be less war-like and more peaceful?

"Herbert carries on quite an extensive correspondence with the mortgage company, the telephone company, the department store, the plumber, the electrician, the loan department at the bank . . ."

Ten Oil Firms Chartered Train

CALGARY (CP) — The vice-president of a United States oil company Wednesday took the wraps off a mystery train that ran between here and Edmonton for five days.

Paul Marshall of Hamilton Brothers Oil Co. told a news conference the Canadian National Railways train carried more than 80 executives from 10 oil companies while they worked out details of joint bids for 468,000 acres of land leases in the Prudhoe Bay area of Alaska, site of a major oil find.

The men had been on the train since Friday when it started its 325-mile runs under tight security arrangements between the two cities, which have wide spread links with the continental oil industry.

"We had the train planned for a month," Mr. Marshall said. "It cost quite a bit but we are sure we got our money's worth."

Mr. Marshall would not give the cost of the chartered train, but said estimates of $10,000 a day seemed reasonable.

Representatives of the 10 companies, brought together by Hamilton Brothers, boarded the train in Calgary and in Conrich, a few miles northeast of the city.

"We thought it was as secure a place for our meetings as we could find," Mr. Marshall said. He said the isolation was necessary because the companies had planned to bid as a group on only some tracts. They would also bid as individual companies or as part of another group.

The companies involved included Ashland Oil, Cities Service, Continental Oil, Highland Resources, Home Oil, Signal Oil, Sun Oil, Union Carbide Petroleum and Union Pacific Railroad.

West Germany Big Customer Of Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — West Germany moved strongly ahead in the list of Canada's most important sources of imports in the first seven months of this year, closing the gap on fourth-place Venezuela.

Trade statistics released Wednesday showed that the German federal republic increased its sales to Canada to $194,634,000 from $150,368,000 in last year's January-to-July period.

Imports from Venezuela remained steady at $196,892,000 this year compared with $196,568,000.

West Germany has been enjoying an export boom while many outsiders—and some of its own economists and politicians—regard the Deutschemark as undervalued.

Though the dominant Christian Democrat party opposes any change in the mark, upward revaluation might come after German elections Sept. 28. The opposition Socialists support revaluation, which would reduce the cost of German imports but raise the price of German exports.

Canadian imports from West Germany rose by more than 21 per cent while imports from all countries in the first seven months of 1969 were up almost 18 per cent to $8,214,039,000 from $6,966,542,000.

Imports from the United States—Canada's principal foreign supplier—rose 18 per cent to $6,945,629,000 from $5,-194,249,000.

Britain, apparently succeeding in boosting its exports and correcting a chronic balance-of-payments deficit, raised its shipments to Canada by 22 per cent to $461,200,000 from $394,-147,000.

INCO Strikers Lose $23,000,000 in Wages

SUDBURY (CP) — Striking employees of the International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd. have lost more than $23,000,000 in wages, a company official said Wednesday.

Jack Pigott, general manager of Ontario operations, said the strike has cost the average employee more than $1,300.

The strike began July 10 when 18,000 members of Local 6500, United Steelworkers of America, walked off their jobs at plants here and in Port Colborne, Ont.

Mr. Pigott said the strike also has "been harmful to the nickel industry, to its customers and suppliers, to the national economy and to local businesses."

He said the union is demanding increases of $2 an hour from Inco while settling other contracts throughout Canada "for less than half that figure."

Homer Seguin, Local 6500 president, said the union and company both have said they are prepared to meet and negotiate a "fair contract."

"It seems the two parties, Inco and the union, are saying the same thing, but unfortunately are not over the bargaining table where it eventually has to be resolved."

Average wages at Inco under the old contract were $3.06 an hour.

U. S. Spokesman Says Canada Moves World Nearer Wheat War

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — A spokesman for United States wheat farmers Wednesday charged the Canadian wheat board with moving the world closer to an all-out wheat war by making a cut-price deal with the Philippines.

Richard K. Baum, executive vice-president of Western Wheat Associates, said the Canadian board last week negotiated a secret agreement directly with Philippines flour mills for the sale of a minimum of 5,305,000 tons of wheat at concession prices and with credit terms far more liberal than justified.

The charge was made as informed sources disclosed that officials of at least three major wheat exporting nations—Canada, the United States and Australia—were still meeting here privately.

A three-day multi-nation meeting on the world market crisis caused by a glut of supplies and lower prices was officially slated to have ended last Friday. The extended talks, described as technical, were expected to continue through today.

Officials taking part included the general manager of the Australian wheat board, and the general sales manager of the U.S. department of agriculture's export marketing service, Clifford G. Fulvermacher.

Baum, in a statement here, said the price in the Canadian-Philippines deal was reported to be five cents a bushel below current market prices for Canadian wheat.

This was in addition to price cuts of more than 11 cents a bushel by Canada during the last few weeks, he said.

Baum said the Philippines has traditionally been a leading export market for U.S. wheat. Recent actions by Canada would cost the U.S. at least $10,000,000 in wheat sales during the next calendar year, he said.

Mustang for 1970

Boss 302, a performance-oriented 1970 Mustang from Ford of Canada, is powered by a highly-modified 290-horsepower, 302-cubic-inch-displacement four-barrel V-8 engine. First introduced as a 1969½ model, the new version of the Boss 302 boasts an improved competition suspension system with a rear stabilizer bar, Rear air spoiler and backlite "sport slats" are optional.

TV-Radio Column

Lena Shines in Own Show

NEW YORK (AP) — Lena Horne, often a guest star on other people's programs, finally had her own network special Wednesday night. Despite the presence of the usual assortment of guest stars, singing and dancing groups, the NBC hour was essentially a one-woman show.

Miss Horne demonstrated her distinctive style with a wide range of musical material, from the Beatle's Rocky Raccoon to Rodgers and Hammerstein's Surrey with the Fringe on Top.

Miss Horne's clothes were stunning. If one were to quibble, it would be about the constant focus of the camera on the star in semi-closeup. There was even a dance number in which we saw Miss Horne only from the waist up and the rest of the ensemble only when they happened to move into Miss Horne's frame.

CBS launched a new soap opera this week. Where the Heart Is. It probably will grow in popularity along with Love of Life and Search for Tomorrow which have been around longer than any television programs except The Ed Sullivan Show.

Harshest critics of the serial drama are likely to be viewers who rarely see them. The prime-time viewer, housebound by head-cold or some other short-term handicap, is apt to feel like a tourist in a foreign land without a phrase book if he tunes in, without preliminary briefing, to one of the daytime dramas. He is likely to listen briefly, wonder why everyone seems to be so unhappy and flip to a game show or old movie.

The veteran soap-opera viewer possibly can sympathize with the confusion of the novice when a new serial starts and the writers are busy introducing characters and sowing seeds of story lines and subplots.

SPECIAL INDUSTRIAL EDITION

TOTAL CIRCULATION: 20,000 COPIES

Sponsored by The Industrial Commission, The Chamber of Commerce, and endorsed by The Mayor and City Council

A special Industrial Edition to publicize the City of Belleville to its own citizens, and to Industrial prospects in Canada and the United States . . . so that the story of present growth in Belleville will become known, and the advantages of Belleville will be presented to people who are considering plant expansion.

EXTRA COPIES

2,000 extra copies will be printed and distributed by The Intelligencer and The Industrial Commission to Industrial prospects in Canada and the United States . . . so that the story of present growth in Belleville will become known, and the advantages of Belleville will be presented to people who are considering plant expansion.

SPECIAL EDITORIAL AND PHOTOGRAPHIC COVERAGE

Special editorial coverage and extensive photographic coverage of Belleville's industries and points of interest in the city are already in process of being prepared.

ADVERTISING SPACE

Advertising space will be sold in this issue at regular rates. Make your reservation for space early as sections of this Industrial Edition will be printed well in advance of the publication date. Members of our advertising staff will be calling on Industrial Plants and Retail business establishments shortly to discuss the merits of this issue and help you in preparing an effective story of your business. If you are missed, phone 962-9171 or call at The Intelligencer office and ask for Display Advertising.

Party System Still Best

Social Change Must Come Through Politics: Stanfield

REGINA (CP) — Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield said Wednesday changes in Canada's social structure must be made through participation in politics because any other way could lead to chaos or worse.

The Opposition leader told 450 students jammed into a lecture hall at the University of Saskatchewan that parliamentary democracy based on the party system, "with all its faults," is the best method through which to achieve change.

The 55-year-old Conservative leader, ending a four-day tour of northern Alberta and Saskatchewan, said any democratic government's move toward more democracy must be based on strengthening of the party structure.

He said the vital and necessary party system requires youthful participation.

"I wish my party were fully responsive, but if can become fully responsive only through people like yourselves."

Answering students' questions concerned the problems of western agriculture—a problem Mr. Stanfield heard about throughout his trip.

He attended a party agricultural policy conference here Tuesday and Wednesday. The conference was aimed at recommending policies for consideration at the Conservatives' national policy conference next month at Niagara Falls, Ont.

Suggestions being considered by the party include measures to establish a producer-based wheat selling agency and government measures to help in the diversification of western agriculture.

Mr. Stanfield said his knowledge of the problems facing agriculture had broadened during his tour.

At Lloydminster, Sask., Mr. Stanfield called for a new approach in Canada to welfare and public assistance.

He said he wants full public debate on the concept of a guaranteed minimum annual wage before the next election because, while large amounts of money now are spent on social assistance, welfare programs do not appear to be accomplishing their goals.

He discussed the problems of Indian and Metis people on his tour and told native people their treaty rights must be respected because they were made in good faith.

The tour, which took Mr. Stanfield to Kitkino, Lac la Biche, Bonnyville and Frog Lake in Alberta and to Lloydminster in Saskatchewan, was unresentful compared with the placard-waving demonstrations which accompanied Prime Minister Trudeau's trips through Western provinces.

"I know just the place for it — if we can knock four feet off the back porch!"

Budgetary Deficit $10 Million Over Estimate

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government's budgetary deficit for the fiscal year that ended last March 31 was $576,112,843, about $10,000,000 more than Finance Minister Edgar Benson estimated three months ago.

The finance department, reporting Wednesday final budgetary revenue and expenditure figures for the 1968-69 fiscal year, said the deficit on a national accounts cash basis was $77,000,000, not $67,000,000 as previously shown in preliminary figures.

The budgetary accounts are those with which Parliament deals directly, but the national economic accounts are more comprehensive and show the federal government's total impact on the country in its taxing and spending policies.

The year ended last March 31 saw total budgetary revenues of $10,181,000,000, or $22,000,000 more than Mr. Benson reported in his June 3 budget speech to the Commons. Expenditures were $10,767,000,000, or $32,000,000 more than the preliminary figure.

The new budgetary deficit of $576,000,000 compares with the record 1967-68 deficit of $792,000,000.

On the national economic accounts basis, last year's deficit of $77,000,000 was the closest the federal government has come to a balance in more than 19 years. There was a deficit of $333,000,000 in 1967-68 and a surplus of $197,000,000 in 1966-67.

A balance in the national economic accounts means the federal treasury has an essentially neutral effect on the economy. A deficit has a pump-priming effect in times of slack, and a surplus is anti-inflationary in times of boom. Mr. Benson is planning a $575,000,000 surplus for this year.

The $10,000,000 increase in the deficit previously reported adds to the country's net debt, now set at $17,335,837,000 for March 31, 1969.

Gross liabilities on that date were $35,819,260,883, of which $22,100,957,706 was in unmatured bonds and treasury bills and net assets were $18,583,422,893.

The final treasury statements for the year showed 1968-69 tax revenues amounted to $8,986,339,092, compared with $8,-401,932,443. These included $3,-356,430,988 in personal income taxes, up from $2,849,573,890, and $2,030,040,413 in corporation profits taxes, up from $1,-670,589,109 in 1967-68.

Sales taxes last fiscal year produced $1,589,840,338 for the treasury, down from $1,-601,992,631, and exercise taxes on tobacco, beer, spirits, and licences netted the treasury $509,287,838, up from $386,-554,300.

Customs duty receipts last year were $761,681,095, up from $746,437,251 in 1967-68.

Non-tax revenue—principally return on government investments and post office net revenues—totalled $1,304,796,702 last year, compared with $1,-013,042,491 in 1967-68.

Total expenditures last year on budgetary items was $10,-767,348,527, compared with $9,-824,080,572 in 1967-68.

National defence department spending was up slightly to $1,-760,795,764 from $1,751,586,169.

Expenditures by the health and welfare department rose to $1,-641,529,130 from $1,487,988,016.

Interest paid on the public debt rose to $1,442,514,498 from $1,289,966,267.

Quebec Inquiry Probes Liquor Sale Problems

MONTREAL (CP) — A Quebec provincial inquiry into the sale of alcoholic beverages resumes public hearings today, still juggling the issue of whether such sales should be put in the hands of private enterprise — an unprecedented move for a Canadian province.

Most briefs heard so far, however, recommend retention of the government's control of liquor sales.

The inquiry, established last December by Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand following settlement of a five-month strike by 3,000 Quebec Liquor Board employees, adjourned Aug. 14 until today.

It is headed by Judge Lucien Thinel of the Provincial Court and includes Marcel Benoger, a Quebec City chartered accountant, and Otto Thur, University of Montreal economist. A report is expected by the end of November.

To date it has investigated the actions of the QLB during strikes by its employees in 1964-65 and last year, studied liquor laws from other countries and provinces and heard briefs from distillers, breweries and executives of the liquor board.

The QFL and the Confederation of National Trade Unions have both urged retention of a government monopoly in liquor sales, but have suggested radical changes in the board's method of operation.

The CNTU represents liquor board employees in labor negotiations with the government.

Briefs have suggested liquor board outlets be open to the public 36 hours a year, and that special training and education be required of store employees. Present hours of operation vary in different parts of Quebec, but most close at 6 p.m. on week days and noon Saturday.

Israeli War Planes Hit Arab Positions

Gunmen Grab $10,000

WHITBY, Ont. (CP) — A 35-year-old woman and a policeman were handcuffed to the steering wheel of a police cruiser Thursday while two armed men escaped with $10,000 in cash.

Fern Whitmill of Ajax had cashed a $10,000 cheque at a branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia here. Mrs. Whitmill, a bookkeeper, withdraws the payroll every Thursday for the Dunlop of Canada employees' credit union.

As she entered a police cruiser driven by Constable Anatoly Wozniak, an armed man jumped into the back seat and pressed a gun to her neck.

Police Chief William Pokinghorn said:

"The officer felt he could have gotten the man and saved his own life but we would probably have had a dead woman on our hands.

"There was no doubt left in the mind of the officer as to what course of action he should take."

On demand, Constable Wozniak turned his revolver over to the robber.

The man put a balaclava over his head and ordered the police-man to drive to a cornfield about two miles north of Whitby, 26 miles east of Toronto, where a second man was waiting with a getaway car.

The first man handcuffed the policeman and Mrs. Whitmill to the steering wheel. Constable Wozniak told them he did not have the key to the handcuffs.

After they left, he unlocked the handcuffs with the key in his pocket and phoned police headquarters from a nearby farmhouse.

Thousands Flee Killer Gas Cloud

GLENDORA, Miss (AP) — Clouds of lethal phosgene gas, spewed from four railway tank cars that exploded near here Thursday night, endangering areas as far away as 30 miles today after forcing the evacuation of thousands of persons.

No fatalities and one injury were reported, although some livestock were killed, authorities said.

Glendora is about 30 miles north of Greenwood.

The tank cars were carrying highly flammable vinyl chloride which was transformed into phosgene gas by the fire which followed the explosion. Officials said the blaze would have to burn itself out and declined to speculate how long the gas would be a threat.

A shifting southerly breeze forced numerous changes in the evacuation area and estimates of the number of persons evacuated ranged as high as 25,000.

The highway patrol said the four tank cars were among 12 Illinois Central cars which derailed around 2:30 p.m. Thursday in a sparsely populated region about a half mile south of here. An area of one-half square mile was evacuated when the vinyl chloride began leaking from one car.

Authorities said the situation appeared to be under control after rail personnel arrived.

Giant Wave Didn't Strike After Quake

WASHINGTON (AP) — A seismic sea wave watch issued today after a strong earthquake in the Aleutian chain was cancelled a few hours later when officials found no unusual activity on tide gauges in the area.

A spokesman for the National Earthquake Information Centre said the quake measuring 6.9 on the Richter scale was felt strongly on Adak and Amchitka Islands. It was centred in the Andreanof Islands and occurred at 4:45 a.m. EDT.

Fourth Straight Day Of Aerial Combat

From AP-Reuters

Israel warplanes swept across the Gulf of Suez today in an attack on Egyptian military objectives on Egypt's eastern coast, the Israeli military announced in Tel Aviv.

It was the fourth straight day of aerial activity on the Egyptian-Israeli ceasefire line. It came 24 hours after fierce air battles with Egyptian aircraft in which Israel said it shot down 11 Soviet-made planes and Cairo said it downed six Israeli aircraft.

A brief announcement said the planes today went in at 10:30 a.m. and returned to Israel safely.

Singled out for attack, a Tel Aviv spokesman said, were Ras Za'farana, 55 miles south of Port Suez, and Ras Gharib, about 120 miles south of Port Suez, which is on the southern end of the Suez canal.

Ras Za'farana was the scene of some of the heaviest action during a 10-hour Israeli armored operation Tuesday along the Gulf of Suez. It was attacked again by Israeli planes Wednesday.

Earlier the Israelis reported one of their patrols killed eight Arab guerrillas in a clash 28 miles north of the Dead Sea Thursday night.

Church, School Ablaze in Belfast

BELFAST (CP) — Prime Minister James Chichester-Clark admitted today his Protestant party has treated the Roman Catholics badly and reaffirmed its determination on reform.

Commenting on a judicial inquiry's report on Northern Ireland's year of violence, Chichester-Clark said:

"It is self-evident that in the past all of us have made mistakes. The question is what do we do now—profit from these mistakes, or sink into a welter of recriminations which would insure that those mistakes will be repeated. . . .

"We are quite prepared to accept the facts the report contains. What we have to do now is get on with the reforms we have promised."

Militant Protestant and Catholic leaders denounced the report, which accused them of fomenting the religious strife.

The report, released today, was the result of a judicial inquiry by a three-man commission into the nature and causes of the troubles between Ulster's Protestant majority and Catholic minority.

A few hours after the report was released, fires broke out in a Methodist church and a nearby junior high school. Troops were called in to control the crowd that gathered before dawn to watch the flames.

Fifty firemen with six fire engines sped to the fires in the church, one of the biggest in Belfast, and the school, which are 20 feet apart in Donegall Road, less than two miles from the city centre.

$30,000,000 Needed To Complete A-Plant

HALIFAX (CP) — A heavily-censored copy of a technical study on the Deuterium of Canada Ltd. heavy water plant at Glace Bay, N.S., was released Thursday by Premier G. I. Smith of Nova Scotia.

The report, prepared by E. I. du Pont de Nemours and Co. at the request of Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd., estimates it will take an additional $30,000,000 and construction time of 20 to 24 months to bring the plant into production.

But Burns and Rowe of Canada Ltd., consulting engineers on the project, said in a commentary on the report that it was not clear whether the study group was asked to determine the minimum amount of work required to bring the long-delayed plant into operation as soon as possible.

The Nova Scotia government has invested about $105,000,000 in the plant, now more than three years behind schedule.

Premier Smith said he cannot estimate when a decision will be made on the future of the plant. The government had not decided whether it should go ahead with the additional expenditure.

Police Chiefs Delay Death Penalty Criticism

EDMONTON (CP) — Canada's police chiefs Thursday delayed for a year any decision to condemn the federal government for its handling of the death penalty.

A resolution was presented to the annual convention of the Police Chiefs Association at its final session condemning Ottawa for commuting death sentences. The resolution also called capital punishment policy, capital punishment policy.

The resolution dropped after several delegates argued there had not been sufficient time since 1967 changes in Criminal Code sections on the death penalty to assess the effects of the changes.

The 1967 amendments eliminated the death penalty except in cases where the victim of a slaying is a police officer or a prison guard on duty. The amendments are in force for a five-year trial period.

Several convention delegates criticized Ottawa's commutation in July of the death sentence passed against Leonard Otto Borg, convicted murderer of RCMP Cpl. Donald Harvey at Grande Prairie, Alta.

But Chief Arthur Cookson of Regina, incoming president of the association, cautioned delegates that "we can't use Borg as an example here."

"The jury recommended mercy and there is not enough basis for judgment."

Delegates were told murder cases increased 44.7 per cent from 1962 to 1968.

Chief James Kettles of Saskatoon said that so far this year more people have been murdered in Saskatoon than have died in car accidents.

In other resolutions passed Thursday, the police chiefs called for a strengthening of federal laws to ease the burden on law enforcement agencies in face of a 15- to 20-per-cent annual increase in crime.

Other items the delegates criticized as hindrances to law enforcement included the requirement for unanimous jury decisions, parole procedures, and the preliminary hearing system.

Supporting a request of the Canada Safety Council, the police chiefs asked that criminal negligence, intoxicated driving and impaired driving be placed under the Criminal Code. This would permit fingerprinting or some other form of positive identification across Canada.

News Briefs

OTTAWA (CP) — General Charles Foulkes, chairman of Canada's chiefs of staff committee from 1951 until 1960, died here today. He was 66. The defence department said General Foulkes died at the National Defence Medical Centre after a brief illness. Cause of death was listed as cardiac arrest. General Foulkes was the second man in history to be named chief of general staff when he was appointed to that position in 1945 as a 43-year-old lieutenant-general. He was appointed full general, the first such promotion in peacetime, three years after he was appointed chairman. General Foulkes became chairman of the chiefs of staff committee in 1951 at the age of 48.

WASHINGTON (AP) — United States government health experts, warning against a resurgence of polio if the United States lets down its vaccination guard, say potential pockets of the disease already exist in every metropolitan area of the country. Public health service doctors cautioned against any undue complacency from the fact that so far this year only 10 cases of paralytic polio — the lowest rate in history — have been reported. There were 48 such cases last year.

Court Action Against Demonstrators Deepens St. Leonard Crisis

MONTREAL (CP) — Charges and counter-charges are flying in the wake of a violent demonstration in suburban St. Leonard Wednesday which left the municipality's main street a shambles and further inflamed the city's school crisis.

Thirty-seven persons were arraigned Thursday on charges ranging from participation in a riot to possession of an offensive weapon in connection with the rock-throwing and window-smashing rampage which climaxed the demonstration.

Preliminary hearing for all 37 was set for Sept. 19 and all but one man were released on bail ranging from $100 cash to two $500 bonds.

In Quebec City, Justice Minister Remi Paul announced "several charges" will be brought against Raymond Lemieux, leader of the Ligue pour l'Integration Scolaire which organized the demonstration to back demands for French-only instruction in Quebec schools.

Mr. Paul said Montreal-Crown Prosecutor Louis Pardis would decide today whether Mr. Lemieux will be arrested on a warrant or issued a summons.

The justice minister would not specify what charges would be brought against Mr. Lemieux, and said "several" means "at least two and possibly more."

He added that under the Criminal Code, conviction for inciting a riot carries a maximum penalty of 14 years in jail and participating in a riot, a maximum of two years.

Mr. Lemieux, meanwhile, told a news conference in Montreal that the police, St. Leonard Mayor Leo Ouellette and the St. Leonard Parents Association created "a climate of terror" the day of the march.

He defended members of his organization and blamed the violence and vandalism which erupted during the demonstration on "outside elements" and "our opponents."

At the same time, seven English-language associations blamed the Quebec government for what they called "senseless violence" in St. Leonard where the dispute over English-language education rights has been simmering for 15 months.

Wednesday night's brawl in the east-end suburb came to an end only after Mayor Ouellette read the Riot Act.

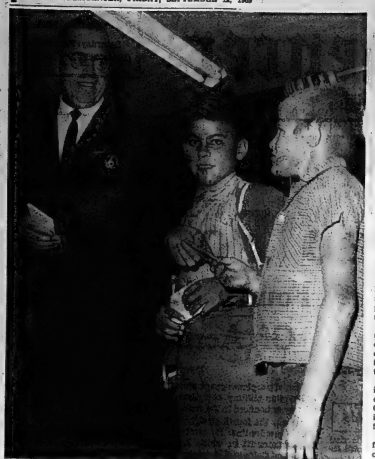
In Ottawa, Prime Minister Trudeau called the riot a disaster, but said the federal government is powerless to deal with the underlying education issue.

Police estimated that more than 100 persons were injured during the riot which involved close to 1,500 persons.

Roving gangs threw rocks and bricks at each other, while others went about breaking store windows on the city's main street.

Police used tear gas to break up the demonstration.

Mr. Lemieux said the violence was caused by "mercenaries" under the pay of Robert Beale, president o f the parents associa tion.



In another development Thursday night, a group calling itself the Comite Ouvrier de St. Henri announced it will picket the opening Sept. 23 of Dawson College, Montreal's English-language junior college.

The English-language organizations said in their joint statement Thursday that the government cannot absolve itself from the responsibility for the "senseless violence in St. Leonard."

English-language instructions in grades 1 and 2 in the suburb's elementary Roman Catholic school system have been abolished by the five-member St. Leonard school board, three of Home and Schools Associa-French-only education

Shewfelt Likes Challenge Of Running Private School

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

For Albert College's new principal, L. L. Shewfelt, his headship of the institution is fulfilling his hopes of new educational adventures.

He comes to the college after 20 years with the Scarborough public educational system as a secondary school teacher, department head, vice - principal and finally, for the last five years, principal of the new Wexford Collegiate Institute.

"I have already found satisfaction here," he said this morning, four days after college opening.

However, the principal has been at the college all summer, "acting as a guidance person, helping students to make educational decisions."

The opportunity to work more closely with students on an individual basis was one of the reasons Mr. Shewfelt accepted his new position.

Another was the opportunity to head a school affiliated with his church (United Church of Canada) and offering a religious environment for study.

Mr. Shewfelt is optimistic for the future of private, church sponsored schools.

"They stand as a symbol of f r e e d o m of educational choice," he said. "I doubt if you find any private schools in Russia."

One of the advantages Albert offers, its principal said, was association for its students with others from all over the world.

This year, for instance, out of a student body of 112, 25 come from outside continental North America, including such places as Malaysia, Pakistan, Africa, Hong Kong and the West Indies.

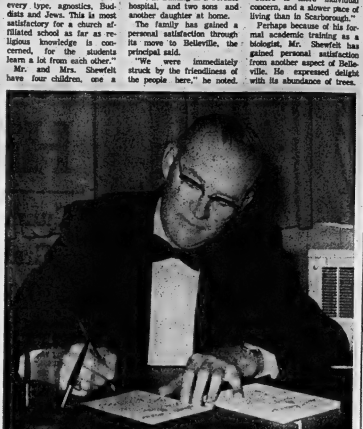
Foreign students are attracted by the recommendation of former students and the influence of church papers in their homelands.

The other advantages are individual attention and the attractions of residential life.

"When I asked a student what she got out of Albert," the principal said, "she listed the close knit friendships and the regular schedule."

She also termed residential life a "fringe benefit, because there is always someone to help you, and I'm able to help others in a similar way."

"A variety of religions are represented in our student body," Mr. Shewfelt said. "We have Muslims, Roman Catholics, Protestants of every type, agnostics, Buddists and Jews. This is most satisfactory for a church affiliated school as far as religious knowledge is concerned, for the students learn a lot from each other."



Mr. and Mrs. Shewfelt have four children, one a nurse in training in a Toronto hospital, and two sons and another daughter at home.

The family has gained a personal satisfaction through its move to Belleville, the principal said.

"We were immediately struck by the friendliness of the people here," he noted.

"There is more individual concern, and a slower pace of living than in Scarborough."

Perhaps because of his formal academic training as a biologist, Mr. Shewfelt has gained personal satisfaction from another aspect of Belleville. He expressed delight with its abundance of trees.

Principal Takes Over

L. L. Shewfelt, new principal of Albert College, comes to the church affiliated school after 20 years with the Scarborough system. He is finding a sense of adventure in administering a residential school with students from all corners of the world.

Humming Bird Still Here

Anybody seen a humming bird lately?

One Belleville woman, Parkdale area housewife Mrs. Charles Dodds saw one this morning in her backyard and called The Intelligencer to say it was only the second humming bird she had seen in her life. The other was in Germany a few years ago.

The humming bird was poking its bill into the flowers of her petunia bed but quickly flew away.

"It was sort of brownish with green and yellows," she said.

Humming birds with their "hovering" ability are generally considered tropical but they are occasionally seen this far north.

But their interest in flowers is not for the nectar as is generally supposed.

According to the encyclopedia, they feed almost exlcusively on small insects which are found on the petals of flowers.

The birds don't seem to mind the bit of nectar they pick up in the process.

Kinettes Pushing Buttons

Bellevillians arise, is the cry to be heard as Kinettes Lois Akey (on right) and Gail Burrows, pin a Belleville Booster button on service station operator, Eric Watkins. The girls were busy selling the buttons to all service stations in the area, as part of the pre-Belleville Week activities. Festivities officially begin Sept. 26.

St. John Has Trenton Branch

TRENTON — This town is to have its own branch of the St. John Ambulance Association.

Trenton has successfully operated a brigade of the Eastern Ontario Regional Divisional under the guidance of R. E. Levitt for many years. Its chairman, Roy Rogers is confident that, with the formation of the Trenton branch, the work of St. John Ambulance in the district will be expanded. Other offices in the Trenton branch are filled by William Nash, secretary, and Peter Vanessen, treasurer.

Four subcommittees were officially formed to assist Mr. Rogers in St. John work. Robert Prentice is heading up the training subcommittee; John Loucks will fill the public relations and publicity subcommittee chair.

The annual appeal for the branch will be held within the next few weeks. The appeal subcommittee is chaired by Ronald Chubb.

The Order of St. John has the responsibility of providing first aid training to industrial employees in accordance with the terms of the Ontario W o r k m e n's Compensation Act. Each year, in Ontario it trains approximately 10,000 employees from industry and business. In addition, 30,000 students of the general public, including youth organizations, town members and civil servants are trained.

The new branch wil be known as 416, Trenton Combined Division.

Fair 'Riot' Exaggerated

PICTON — Fair secretary Phil Dodds reported this morning that he is disturbed by the rumors surrounding last weekend's near riot at the county fair.

"The whole thing was greatly exaggerated," commented Mr. Dodds.

He is especially critical of press reports referring to "an estimated group of 1,000 spectators."

Checking out this figure with Picton's Ontario Provincial Police detachment, Mr. Dodds learned they estimated the crowd at from 300 to 500 persons.

Picton police this morning contradicted a report that a Picton youth received a two-week jail sentence over an incident at the midway during the fair. According to police, the youth was charged with the wilful damage and convicted. However, the incident occurred in downtown Picton.

Fire Deliberately Set

Oil on waters of creek near Canadian National yards was deliberately set alight yesterday — but firefighters were standing by. Oil — seeping through new railroad drain recently installed — was burned off to remove safety and pollution hazards.

Area Liberals Plan Disclosure Of Donations, Financial Report

TRENTON — The Prince Edward Liberal Association has adopted a new policy by printing and circulating a complete financial report showing donations and expenditures in the last year.

The report is contained in an eight-page booklet prepared for the association president Donald G. Joss for the annual meeting and election of officers to be held Wednesday night, Sept. 17, in the Recreation Hall at Batawa.

The booklet also contains a resume of the activities of association executive during the period, and outlines a number of suggestions for the incoming directors and township chairmen to consider.

The financial report prepared by treasurer Anthony Dicar, shows a balance on hand of $1,114.50 with $1,000 of the amount earmarked as a banquet reserve.

Association president, commenting on the treasurer's report said, "the felt it was time for all political parties in Canada to make a full and open financial statement to their members."

He noted it was his intention to urge the executive of the Liberal Party of Ontario to assume a similar procedure.

Mr. Joss called for the annual meeting to entertain the idea of entering a slate of Liberal candidates in all local and municipal elections as it is being done by associations in Toronto and other centres.

He also explained his reasoning for suggesting the nomination meeting be held in the riding in October to pick a candidate for the next federal election still at least three years away. It was his belief time would be on their side in this instance.

He said he was aware many of the association members felt it would be unwise to pick a candidate so early when he decided to put forth a resolution for approval.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market declined fractionally in light mid-morning trading today as weakness that began in late trading Thursday continued.

On index, Industrials were down .32 to 176.56, golds gained .17 to 192.33 and base metals picked up .23 to 109.28.

Western stocks, down 9.04 Thursday, were off 2.29 to 236.26. Dome Pete fell 3¼ to 85, Canadian Geidol 1¼ to 14½, Great Plains ¾ to 39¼, Ranger ½ to 16½ and Braisaman 60 cents to $5.50.

Home A, off 10¼ Thursday, was up ½ to 61 after a brief trading halt. Home B slipped ¼ to 53.

Home holds a 25-per-cent interest in a successful bid in the Alaskan oil lease sale.

Aquitaine gained ¼ to 24. Aquitaine said it has 12½-to-34-per-cent interests in eight successful bids in the oil lease sale.

OSF Industries lost ¾ to 10¾ after a brief trading halt. OSF recently said it had cancelled plans to acquire Seaway Ex share exchange. Seaway was unchanged at 9.

Falconbridge slipped ½ to 13¾. Mine, Mill and Smelter workers at Falconbridge have been on strike since Aug. 21.

Sielco was down ¼ to 23¼ and Algoma Steel was unchanged at 16¼. Steelworkers at both companies are on strike.

when steelworkers walked off their jobs.

Thursday, a wave of profit taking in western oil was enough of a depressant to turn an early advance into a small loss.

Oil lease sales in Alaska Wednesday marked the finish of speculation that sent western oil prices on a steady rise since the first discovery of oil in the North Slope area in 1968.

The handful of Canadian oil companies with interests in the North Slope area all saw their stocks deflate Thursday as it became apparent profits from drilling would not materialize for possibly two years.

Home A fell 10¼ to 60¼ after a brief trading halt to match orders. Home B ¼ to 53¼, Cygnus B 2¼ to 10¾, Western Decalta $1.40 to $8.60 and Petrol 26 cents to $1.88. Ranger was unchanged at 17.

Home Oil, with the largest interest in Alaska of any of the Canadian companies, also has a share interest in Atlantic Richfield of the United States which appears to have made a poor showing in the Alaskan sales.

However, Home said it has a 25-per-cent interest in an apparent high bid made by Hamilton Bros. of the U.S. for a tract of Alaskan land.

Trailers Start City Visit

Trailer travel is an increasingly popular way of life for vacationing families and retired couples.

And, for dedicated trailer enthusiasts, taking part in caravans and rallies is a big social event of the year.

Just such a rally — although a comparatively small one — is taking place this weekend in Belleville. Until Sunday up to 150 trailers, many of them from the United States, will be parked at the city's Fairgrounds.

At the rally is the Ontario Unit of the Wally Byam Caravan Club.

The rally doesn't officially get underway until Saturday. But already trailers are pouring into the city and by last night 50 or more were at the Fairgrounds.

Chairman of this week's rally is 'Earl Allin of Belleville.

Tomorrow morning Mayor J. Russell Scott will welcome the rally members at a pancake breakfast. The day's program will include tours of the city, including Black Diamond Cheese, and Corby's. Saturday night, trailer caravan pictures will be shown in the Ben Bleecker Auditorium following by a hard time dance.

One of the participants in this year's "buddy" rally is Bruce MacLean of Toronto, president of the club's Region 2 which takes in Ontario, and six of the northern states in USA, including New York and Pennsylvania.

MacLean said the Ontario unit held its rally here two years ago and that the International caravan club would like to hold one of its rallies in Belleville.

That finding accommodation for up to 2,200 trailers in one spot with a meeting place for 10,000 people is sometimes difficult," he says.

Mr. MacLean just recently returned from Laramie, Wyoming, where he attended this year's international rally.

Another couple attending this week's rally in Belleville are Ralph and Marie Wolf of Williamsville, N. Y. (near Buffalo).

Mr. and Mrs. Wolf took in a caravan tour in France last year, visiting many of the out-of-the-way spots never seen by ordinary tourists.

At one stopover the couple attended the only bullfight arena in France. Bullfights are illegal in that country but in this instance they take place with the full knowledge of the law.

"The local policeman attends all the fights and some time about the middle of the performance gets up and announces that the performance is illegal."

The officer then settles back into his seat to enjoy the remainder of the program.

Mr. MacLean says that many of the trailer enthusiasts taking part in rallies are retired people who spend all their time in trailers.

Most of them live in California or Florida and spend maybe two or three winter months there.

Then with the spring they take to the road, visiting all parts of the USA and Canada returning south again for the winter.

While on the road they attend as many trailer rallies as possible visiting other trailer enthusiasts and making new acquaintances.

This year's Belleville Rendevous is a "buddy" rally, meaning that each club member can bring along a friend.

Close to half of the weekend rally participants will be Americans who are making their way back to Florida or California to spend the winter.

Hull's Herefords On Block Saturday

PICTON — Prince Edward County's superstar cattle breeder, Bobby Hull, will put his herd at auction tomorrow.

The dispersal sale will take place in the sales arena of Arthur Bennett, Sawyerville, Quebec.

The Golden Jet previously has held three production sales, the most recent one in Picton last summer. Tomorrow's sale, however, is a complete dispersal of the Hullvue herd.

About 200 head of Herefords will be auctioned in the ring.

In a foreword in the sales catalogue, addressed to fellow breeders, Mr. Hull said the pressure of other business interests and the fact he must be active in hockey for eight months of the year does not leave him sufficient time to be as active at the farm as he should be.

Chamber Will Sponsor Belleville Week Tours

Bus tours of Belleville's industrial park, city parks and historic sites will be a Chamber of Commerce sponsored feature of Belleville Week.

At a special meeting yesterday to discuss the Chamber's contribution to the week directors agreed to support free guided tours, one each morning and afternoon, for as long as public interest warrants.

A pennant design contest, jointly sponsored by Shopette and the Chamber, will be held during Belleville Week. It will be open to city schoolchildren and the winner will receive a $25 prize.

Additional prizes of $15 and $10 will be awarded second and third place winners. Endorsement of Hastings County director of education has been obtained for the contest. Adjudicators will be chosen at a later date.

Further plans for industrial participation will be made at a Monday morning meeting of the industrial section of the Chamber of Commerce.

Need Watching

One of the most cold-blooded and appalling murders in recent Canadian history was the slaying of two motorists near Carp, in the Ottawa area, last January.

Two young men have just been given life sentences for the affair. They had pleaded guilty. Another charged with the same murders goes on trial later this month.

It is to be hoped the two now in jail will be watched closely, not only for any escape attempts but with regard to parole. It is inconceivable that two men who shot two men after flagging down their cars should be permitted any parole, yet the leniency with which many criminals are being treated in the courts today makes us wonder.

These men have been given life sentences and in the circumstances of their case the public should expect that the full term will be served. For one thing the mental stability of the men is suspect. The fact one of them went on a furniture-smashing rampage in the county jail following sentence lends to confirm this.

Men like these are an obvious menace to society and those charged with society's protection should govern their decisions accordingly.

Mercurial Soccer

Soccer is a great game, one which is gaining in popularity in Belleville.

Ideally, it is as Mayor Russell Scott noted in his recent proclamation about Minor Soccer Week "the most universal sport in the world, which teaches our youth to develop a competitive spirit, co-operation with others, body building and respect for authority . . ."

In reality though, more assaults have been perpetrated and more injuries sustained, many of them fatal, in the name of soccer than in any other sport.

In Britain soccer inspires intense rivalry, but in Latin America and the Mediterranean lands personal and group antagonisms can be even more heated. In Latin America the authorities have taken to building moats between the soccer pitch and the stands of spectators roused to fever pitch by the ebb and flow and general state of the game. It protects both players and referee whose esteem in the eyes of fans is usually so low, depending on a team's fortunes, that it is customary for him to be escorted off the field of play by police.

Occasionally matters get completely out of hand. The recent war between El Salvador and Honduras, resulting from a soccer match between the two countries, was a classic example. In that case the game of course was merely the spark to set alight long-smouldering political differences.

The current unrest in Italy also stems in part from rioting following a soccer match (as outlined elsewhere on this page).

For all these manifestations of Latin heat generated by soccer it is good to see the game catching on in Belleville. We are a little more stable, a little more sporting in this part of the world and soccer played in such circumstances is very much more in keeping with the spirit of Mayor Scott's proclamation. So all power to Minor Sports and to soccer as a growing element in the lives of the young people.

Lucky Escape

Korean seaman Chung Nam Kim, 27, is a lucky man. When he fell into the Pacific recently from a merchant ship he clung to a plant trunk for two hours before being picked up by another ship en route to Los Angeles.

The chances of such a fortuitous rendezvous must be rare enough as it is, but particularly so when it is realized that the sea turtle seems to be losing the race for survival.

A recent issue of UNESCO Features pointed out that all seven species of sea turtle, a lumbering traveller on land but a swift swimmer in the sea, are seriously threatened by over-exploitation, human invasion of nesting beaches, coastal pollution and other dangers.

Experts attending a meeting of the International Union for Conservation of Nature and Natural Resources, in Switzerland, said the threat comes mainly from the growing demand for food, eggs, meat, oil, leather, shell and the cartilage or "caliper" used in making turtle soup. While young turtles moreover are eagerly sought as curios for the tourist trade.

There may be some hope though in the suggestion that turtle sanctuaries be established on suitable islands in the Atlantic, Pacific and Indian Oceans as well as in education of the public. Meanwhile, one man will always remain grateful that a sea turtle was around in his hour of extremity!

'Soccer Riots' Spark Fresh Disorder

Is Italy Descending Into State of Anarchy?

By DAVID MAZZARELLA

ROME (AP) — The soccer riots in Caserta spotlight a disquieting trend in mass disorder in Italy. General strikes, city-wide revolts, clashes with police and demonstrations on a grand scale have become commonplace.

There were plenty of political and labor riots in Italy after the Second World War. And "kill-the-referee" melees are fairly common on the soccer fields in this as well as other lands of hot Latin blood.

But never have so many Italians seemed to have the idea that if you make enough big trouble, somebody will listen to you. The immediate grievance can be of seemingly small importance.

The people of Caserta were enraged because their soccer team was dropped from the Class B league to the Class C as the result of a bribery scandal.

They virtually wrecked their town and, gagging and weeping from tear gas, fought riot police with rocks, iron bars and their bare hands.

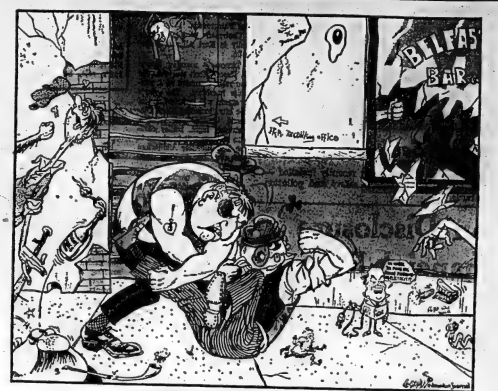
The Turin newspaper La Stampa commented on the readiness of Caserta's municipal employees to join the chaos that if you make enough big trouble, somebody will listen to you.

"Evidently all sense of proportion is being lost," the paper said.

A few weeks before, in the south Italian town of Castel Sant'Angelo, townspeople went on strike and paraded rowdily through the streets.

The reason: Their soccer team had been refused promotion to the Class C league because its stadium was considered inadequate. After the demonstration, the startled soccer federation gave the town more time to improve the field.

Five months ago, a factory shut down in the sleepy southern town of Battipaglia, and the entire city rebelled. Two persons died.



Last December, Sicilian farm workers banded together during pay negotiations, blocked a road and fought the police. Two of them were killed.

Some observers believe the disorders increase as the effectiveness of the government decreases.

"With 30 different governments since the war and constant political crises," says one, "who can expect any action except as the result of disorder?"

Some trace the trend back to widespread student rioting that began in the spring of 1968. The students got results; the government finally drew up a university bill.

With the political situation highly unsettled as the result of the Socialist party split which wrecked the centre-left coalition government, and with unions agitating for sweeping improvements in their contracts, the disorder is likely to continue.

Mr. Stanfield's Tour

Ottawa Journal

Mr. Stanfield is spending the second anniversary of his election as party leader today on a working tour of Western Canada.

It is a tribute to Stanfield the man and leader that he . . . is determined still to shape the party to sound ideas and ideals; to continue to present Canadians with a credible alternative to the good-and-bad Mr. Trudeau and his Government.

From his record we may expect from Mr. Stanfield an opposition as purposeful and critical as essential to the working of our democratic system. He has given Canada a taste of integrity and courage under fire and has in all his actions been mindful of Parliament and the democratic process . . . there have been signs of late that some in high places may have forgotten what Parliament and its traditions are about.

Mercurial Soccer

Soccer is a great game, one which is gaining in popularity in Belleville.

TODAY IN HISTORY

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Sept. 12, 1969 .....

Christopher Columbus sailed 465 years ago today —in 1504—from Hispaniola in the West Indies for Spain to end his fourth and last voyage to the New World. The great adventurer died after a long illness in 1506. In 1542 his bones were exhumed from their resting place at Seville and taken back to Hispaniola to be buried in the Cathedral of San Domingo.

1908—American flying pioneer Orville Wright set an endurance record by keeping his plane aloft for one hour and 14 minutes.

1958—Arkansas Gov. Orval Faubus closed all of Little Rock's four high schools as the United States Supreme Court rejected an appeal for a delay in racial integration of Little Rock's Central High.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1944—Great Britain, United States and Russia signed an armistice with Romania; Canadian infantry formations took Bruges in Belgium without opposition; U.S. 1st Army drove unchecked into Germany from Eupen, near the Belgian border; Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt opened 11th wartime conference in Quebec.

Next Monday should be a red letter day in the history of the Rotary Club. President Fred Deacon announced that a large representation of Watertown Rotarians possibly augmented by those of other nearby American clubs will be the guests of the Belleville club at luncheon in the Hotel Quinte. The American contingent will be bringing the guest speaker. The visit is a return compliment. Earlier in the year, the Belleville club were guests of the Watertown Rotarians with Judge J. C. Anderson being the guest speaker.

Action in the long proposed development of the Zwicky Island as a recreational area appeared in the immediate offing today as a result of a joint meeting of the city parks board and a special committee from city council, when it was decided to offer leasing rights to the area.

In a rapid sequence of events beginning at three p.m. EDT Saturday and ending at 1:10 p.m. Sunday, both the Senate and House of Commons approved the government's decision and a proclamation was issued declaring a state of war existed between Canada and Germany. This is the first time Canada declared war herself.

In 1914 a total of 33,000 men sailed from Canada in October, forerunners of a force which eventually reached 450,000 before the First Great War ended. And for that struggle Canada enlisted 619,000 soldiers for war service, the overwhelming majority of them by voluntary enlistment.

Are the Courts too Lenient?

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

This is submitted in response to your recent editorial entitled "Strange Decision."

Today the law seems to operate with no more definite purpose than to favor the worst offender, and to offer scant redress to the victims of serious crime. A recent instance was a case of molesting small children, where perhaps great harm resulted, to say nothing of the agony of mind the parents suffered. This in turn was compounded by the offender going unpunished. Yet, by observation we see that a mere drinking charge will warrant a stay in prison.

Generally, because of the growing laxity of the courts, much is in doubt, and where the doubt is genuine and meritorious it tends to undermine the integrity of good citizens. It may be that the "Go Easy" policies have gone too far.

Clothes, Dignity and the P.M.

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Why are devotees of Richard Jackson's unique column know that he will grab any hook on which to hang an article. It is difficult, therefore, to discern what he really believes: in fact, we sometimes suspect that Mr. Jackson does not know either. His "Dialogue With Dissent — Or The Dignity Of Office?" gives food for thought.

Why is it that the sober, the sombre, the conservative, the unobtrusively-dressed and mannered, are associated with dignity? Could it possibly be that there is something a little unhealthy in this obeisance to the undertaker image?

Mr. Jackson may be right about "the man himself and his troubled times", for "dialoguing with deadbeats" is a big, unhealthy in this obeisance to the undertaker image?

Mr. Jackson may be right about "the man himself and his troubled times", for "dialoguing with deadbeats" is as important as speaking with scientists, conferring with cabinet, or nattering with newsmen.

But dignity, Mr. Jackson, can come in any attire, for it is a thing of the spirit.

Ontario's Costly Medicare

Kingston Whig-Standard

The very high cost of medical services under the new Ontario medical program came as a shock for those who expected that the usual method of absorbing most of the direct cost through special taxation based on ability to pay would be used.

Underlining this high - cost Ontario situation is the recent announcement that Manitoba will cut its medicare fees by 86 per cent. Premiers for Manitoba say that province will be reduced to $1.10 a month from $9.80, and for single people to $5 cents a month from $4.80. Combined premiums for medical and hospital care will be $99.60 a year for families and $40.80 for single people.

The fees in Ontario, which will come into effect on Oct. 1, will be $14.75 a month for families, $11.80 for married couples and $5.90 for single persons. Thus the combined fees for Ontario will be $36 a year for single people, for couples $275 a year, and for families $300 a year.

Before this change Manitoba had the highest medicare fees next to Ontario. The cheapest are Saskatchewan's where a fully comprehensive plan costs the single person $36 a year and couples and families $72.

As we have said before, a rather dismal showing for Canada's richest province in the age of the "just society."

Both Sides Paying for Time...But

Israeli Raid Is Possible Step Toward All-Out War

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Israeli's latest military raid escalates the Middle East crisis and would appear to challenge Egypt to take further equivalent or greater response. A gradually increasing thrust and counter-thrust could set the stage for a full war.

But some military experts suggest that if a full war comes, it will be more of an accident than deliberate strategy. They maintain that Israel needs more time to become familiar with the F-4 Phantom jets obtained from the United States while Egypt needs perhaps another year to bring her units to full strength.

Nevertheless, the damage and dramatic impact of Israel's 16-hour raid on the west coast of the Suez canal is an embarrassing provocation which Cairo cannot ignore. Israel maintains the raid results from deliberate Egyptian breaches of the Suez ceasefire but it appears this action may also result from the Arabian hijacking of a commercial aircraft bound for Tel Aviv and the petrol-bombing of Israeli offices in European capitals.

In effect, instead of responding to the specific actions of the Palestinian Liberation Front or other organizations adopting Israeli outposts, Israel has picked its own ground for countering action. The area hit is reported to involve the Egyptian Third Army protecting Cairo's southern flank.

While actual damage to the Egyptian military forces is a matter for conjecture, indications are that the Israelis did not meet much resistance. And the fact that there was no immediate Egyptian counter-attack suggests the surprise element was sustained and the ability of the Egyptians to respond is in question.

While the struggle grows, the Big Four powers seem, for some reason, to have slowed their drive to bring peace to the Middle East. One British official said the big powers are helpless if Egypt and Israel refuse to heed the advice and commands of their big brothers.

But more than advice is involved in the current struggle. The big powers are still pouring in armaments, to one side or the other. Again the British official points to the huge Soviet aid to Egypt and other Arab states, saying that this would cause such a tilted advantage that the West cannot help but provide Israel with some countering equipment.

It would appear that it would be up to Russia to make the first move to cut off all arms from the Middle East and there is no indication that Moscow would bow to such a request.

United Appeal

Y Is Family Recreation Centre

By LINDA GELDART
(Staff Reporter)

This is the eighth report in a series of Intelligencer features on community agencies receiving support through the United Appeal.

Last year the Belleville YMCA, celebrated its 134th year of continuous service in the Quinte area.

The "Y", whose central concern is the membership that composes its Association works to provide a centre where families can enjoy their recreation together.

"Our essential purpose," said YMCA president, Harry Fast, "is to make available activities to the extent of our resources, and according to the needs of our own particular community."

The local YMCA is an independent association of members, and its policies are formulated according to local requirements.

This is in almost complete contrast to the YWCA, which, although Canada-wide as well is governed by means of a central committee rather than locally.

"One of the most important facts to remember about the YMCA is that no one is ever turned away if they cannot pay the fees," emphasized Mr. Fast.

"We at the Y are concerned about the "total person, not only the physical aspect of a sound body, but we feel that the importance of good mental health should play as large a part in our programs and thinking," he continued.

"Let me put it this way," continued Mr. Fast, "a sound, healthy and active body should be complemented by an equally sound mind. We would like to believe that through the programs provided the YMCA will provide for both."

"Our membership has grown to 3,800 from 900 four years ago — possibly the best indication that people in the community are taking advantage of what the YMCA offers," remarked Mr. Fast.

During the past 12 months, there have been more than 80,000 individual activities going on at one time or another . . . almost one third of these were free or with only a nominal charge.

In addition to activities within the Y itself, the association during the year worked in five school areas with younger children.

"This year", Mr. Fast said, "we are continuing our swim test program which we first began three years ago. This year we expect to test at least 2,500 youngsters."

The children are tested for their swimming ability — if they don't meet the particular standards set in each expected 1,500 will not, the Y provides two swimming lessons, free of charge.

Most people think of the YMCA just as a place to go and swim. Activities are not just limited to swimming, however, said Mr. Fast.

The Y runs a wide range of activities — everything from day camp to adult education courses.

"Our education courses," interjected Mr. Fast, "can be anything — from how to cook to casting. All we need is an expert in the given field and enough people interested."

There are life - saving courses available, as well as community canoeing service on physical fitness, physical education, recreation and matters pertaining to young people.

"As far as our summer activities are concerned, we offer children the chance to participate in a day camp. There are canoe trips, too. The response has been excellent," said Mr. Fast.

The association is a member agency of the United Community Service and as such received 16 per cent of its operating income from the proceeds of the United Appeal campaign.

"To make available the variety of activities we do, we must have support from the community. This can be done through the United Appeal campaign," he continued.

"What it amounts to investing in the community — but maybe more than this, it illustrates that those who live here care."

Four Seasons Requests Will Cause Some Delay

Further delays may be in store for the Four Seasons motel-training school on Belleville harbor.

Directors of the Chamber of Commerce were told at their meeting Thursday morning that Four Seasons officials have asked for changes in the city's re-zoning by-law for the proposed site.

Processing the changes will require newspaper advertisements and a 14-day wait before the Ontario Municipal Board can begin considering the matter.

"When the new bylaw is received, this board will do everything to expedite a decision in the matter," J. A. Kennedy, OMB chairman, was quoted as saying in a letter to the Chamber.

At a previous meeting the directors of the Chamber voted unanimously to support rezoning for the Four Seasons motel. The members of the Chamber were subsequently polled and of 252 replies, only one was opposed. The results of the poll were forwarded to the OMB chairman. His reply brought to light the possibility of a further delay due to "textual changes."

Young drivers pay more for car insurance -completely by accident.

Young drivers have twice as many accidents as other age groups. What's more, accidents involving young people are usually more serious, causing greater injury and damage.

Car insurance people know it's difficult for young drivers to afford sufficient insurance so they're constantly looking for ways to reduce rates. For instance, most companies give a rate reduction to students who pass an approved driver training course.

Savings are also available to each young driver as he gains experience and a safe driving record.

Further reductions in cost will be obtained by young drivers when their driving record as a group results in fewer accidents.

Couple Marks 50th Anniversary in Hospital

PICTON — Celebrating their 50th wedding anniversary last night Prince Edward County residents, Mr. and Mrs. George Leavitt enjoyed a traditional party in highly untraditional circumstances.

A patient in Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital, Mrs. Leavitt was unable to be at home for the party so family members and friends brought the party to her. The hospital sun room was turned over to the Leavitt family last night and with her husband, Mrs. Leavitt greeted well wishers from 7.30 to 8.30 p.m.

The happy couple accepted a gold plate appropriately engraved for the occasion which was presented to them by the 20 friends and relatives in attendance.

Life-long residents of East Lake, Mr. and Mrs. Leavitt have two children, a son, Nellington of East Lake, and a daughter, Rea, (Mrs. Charles Newman), RR 1, Milford.

Engagement Notice

Mr. and Mrs. William Gulley, Napanee, announce the engagement of their daughter, Marilyn Jane, to John Francis Coffey, son of Mrs. Mary Coffee, Read, and the late Mr. Daniel Coffey. The wedding will take place October 11, at 11 a.m., in St. Patrick's Church, Napanee.

Third Annual Antique Sale

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Victoria Avenue, Belleville is presenting their third annual Antique Sale and Show. Preview night is September 16 from 7 to 10 p.m. and will continue September 17 and 18 from 12.30 p.m. to 10 p.m. in the church hall.

There will be 18 registered antique dealers from various communities in Ontario participating, assuring the public of a most interesting display of items of yesteryear.

For a small admission this is a rare opportunity to view such a large collection of antiques and whether buying or browsing there will be much to interest everyone.

The members of the Guild will have 'Tea Room' facilities if so desired.

Proceeds from the show are for the organ fund and tickets may be obtained from members of the Guild or Mrs. J. Robertson, 305 Dundas St. West.

Women's Institutes

RIVER VALLEY WI

RIVER VALLEY — On Thursday afternoon 20 members of the River Valley Women's Institute and one visitor had a tour of the local golf course at River Valley. David Duffin and Robert Hoard were in charge of the first tour. The group was transported to the golf course now in operation.

At the close of the tour each member received a barrel of peat moss for her flowers.

The second tour was at the Oak Hills Flying Club. Allan Morton spoke about the various planes on the field and in the hangars. He then gave three members a free ride.

Following the tour, Mrs. Ernest Carr was hostess at the institute centre and the president, Mrs. Roy Tucker, was in charge of the business meeting.

Mrs. Stanley Irwin will be hostess for the October meeting when the district president, Mrs. Cecil Jeffrey, will pay her official visit.

Family Reunions

LOTT — MILLER REUNION

The Lott and Miller reunion was held at Zwick's Island on August 16. Relatives came from Chicago, Ill. as well as from the surrounding area. A number of prizes were given out.

It was decided to hold the next year's reunion at the same place about the middle of August.

Contact Club Holds Dinner

The Contact Club, Christ Church recently resumed activities for the fall season in the form of a potluck dinner. Canon R. B. Wright and Rev. David Hawkins were welcomed.

Following the tasty dinner, the program for this fall was outlined. Shirley Morton offered to serve as secretary, due to the resignation of Laura Stafford. Best wishes were offered Vi Terry who is leaving for a vacation in England.

President Lillian Middleton introduced Lois Beeby, who spoke on the forth coming opportunity sale to be held as a Parish effort, October 17 and 18. Florence Lennox will instruct the girls at a work meeting, September 22, in preparation for this event.

The group was asked to remember Pam Park and Mary Philips who are ill. Nursery duties for the fall were outlined by Betty Normington.

The meeting was adjourned by Betty Guthrie.

STONED COAT

PRINCE GEORGE, B.C. (CP) — An eight-foot-high Rocky Mountain goat, carved by Ralph Humphreys of Langford, near Victoria, is being raised on a stone pedestal at one entrance to Mount Robson Provincial Park near here. A second goat will be carved and placed in the park next year.

"banish washday blues!"

And live a little!

All you need is an automatic washer and electric dryer. With one setting of a simple control, the washer fills itself, washes, drains, rinses, and damp-dries. Then the dryer takes over. Keeps your clean wash free from impurities in the air. Fluffs clothes into a natural shape for easier ironing. And takes special care of your permanent-press garments. There's no work. No watching. No waiting. Your time's your own.

You've banished your washday blues!

With an automatic washer and electric dryer, you don't have to do the whole family wash the same day. Do a little at a time. Whenever you feel like it. Even when it's pouring rain.

Get yourself a new automatic washer and electric dryer from your local major appliance dealer, and live a little.

Abortion Laws Said to Be Archaic

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have read at least fifty letters in your column in the last ten years from young girls who were pregnant and not married. You have never once suggested the best solution — abortion. Why? I'm sure you aren't Catholic and I know you aren't stupid. Yet you have carefully avoided coming out with the best solution to a problem which has plagued womankind for centuries.

Why has the Number One Mother Confessor of the world been silent on abortion laws which are archaic, and unjust? How about proving you have some guts by stating your position on this issue instead of ducking it? I'll watch the paper for your answer. —BALTIMORE.

ANN LANDERS

DEAR BALT: Where have you been? I have said repeatedly that the abortion laws in this country are archaic and unjust and need to be drastically amended. However, I cannot, in good conscience recommend a procedure which is illegal. Moreover, advising a girl to get an abortion could be highly dangerous counsel since I have no way of knowing for certain how pregnant the girl is. (Often she doesn't even know.) What's more I would have no way of knowing who would perform the operation or where.

Too many women have already died as a result of botched jobs performed on kitchen tables and in motel rooms. I don't wish to swell the number, thank you.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You didn't have to admit that you don't know anything about dogs. Your readers were already aware of it.

We've had dogs all our life — pedigreed dogs, alley mutts and Heinz types — 57 varieties. We also have beautiful rugs in our home. The worst stain on our living room Oriental was not made by a dog but a neighbor child who spilled a bottle of strawberry soda pop. Do you think that child should have been given to a farmer? Shame on you! — A.W.

DEAR A.W.: Your letter is a perfect example of the point I was trying to make. Dogs are dogs and people are people. It's only when folks forget which is which that they raise the blood pressure of sensible people.

DEAR ANN: So often the children of divorced parents are unhappy because they don't see much of their dads. This is tragic, of course, and it's almost always the mother's fault.

My mother hated my father and she made no secret of it. She never called Dad when we were sick, or had a birthday, or graduated from high school. She never invited him over at Christmas time or Thanksgiving — occasions when children need to be with their fathers.

Although our dad lives less than fifteen minutes away we haven't seen him more than four times in the past three years. When the divorce was granted, Dad got visiting privileges and we often wondered why he never used them. Now that we are older we know it's because mom never invited him. — H & F.

DEAR H & F: A dad who has visiting privileges the graduation and Thanksgiving, and Christmas. Sorry, kids, sometimes the truth hurts.

sometimes the truth hurts.

Successful Living

Baby-sitting Requires a Special Know-how

By DORIS CLARK

In a modern world where mothers and fathers know it's good for them to get out together baby sitting assumes the status, almost, of a profession.

A sitter is in charge of a priceless possession — somebody's child. Does she know enough about what she is doing?

After everyone is gone and you, the sitter, are in charge, it is startling how alone you can feel if a child gets even a small cut or burn and you don't know where to look for first aid equipment. So be sure you know where supplies are kept.

Know the little ones' first name and his nickname. Be sure he knows yours. A good sitter spends time making friends with the children and getting them to tell her about what interests them. Be on hand ahead of time to learn about lights, stoves, heating systems. To get any special instructions.

And never, just never, invite a boy friend in to sit with you. You are at work when you are sitting for money. No self-respecting career girl would take her boy friend to her office with her!

* * *

Dear Doris: We went steady for three years, this girl and I, and planned to be married. We never argued, and always talked things over.

Two months ago she broke up, saying she wanted to be more alone as before she got married. I took it very hard because we had declared our love to each other many times and there were no doubts in my mind.

But what happened was, we went out with different persons and still saw each other once or twice a week. This bothers me. I have nightmares and end up crying lots of times. When we are out she still tells me she loves me, and is jealous about anyone I go out with.

Do you think she is playing me for a sucker? She has me and she knows it. How long should I give her to make up her mind? — Confused Over the Whole Mess

Dear Confused: So she eats her cake and has it too! Don't fall for it. It is only a true test if you really separate, and do not see each other at all for say six months.

This agreement to stay apart carries with it the understanding that if either finds another he or she is as free as air to choose that other for keeps.

* * *

Dear Doris: What help is there for a woman who loves her husband very much but can only rarely stand him touching her?

Is it true that a good percentage of married women are like me? — Frigid

Dear Frigid: There is a good deal of help. Sometimes early experiences create a touch-me-not person. Prudness in parents, lack of hugs and kisses and affection in general, or too much physical punishment by father or brother, could do it.

The cure lies in understanding the cause, and in learning more, much more, about what good physical relations can mean in marriage. Both husband and wife need to read and discuss materials about Sex and Marriage. I'm sending a list recommending books on the subject.

Many marriage partners need this kind of help before they can become warmly responsive.

Try turning your trouble into triumph by getting help from a trained social worker. Doris can put you on the right track.

Cancer Group Plans Fall Campaign

TWEED — Mrs. George Sinclair, of Catherine Street, Tweed, will serve as campaign chairman for the Tweed branch of the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society.

Mrs. Sinclair will head a group of volunteers who will raise funds in September on the Society's full-scale attack on crippling arthritis.

"Arthritis, a leading cause of physical disability in Canada, is a problem of particular importance to business and industry," said Mrs. Sinclair. "It strikes most often in the productive prime of life — 66 per cent of those afflicted are of working age, a problem which affects our community as well as the rest of Canada".

In addition to some thousands of volunteers from coast-to-coast who take an active part in the Society's program, the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society had a professional staff of some 150. As a result, there has been a marked increase in professional, public and governmental interest in arthritis.

Fifteen years ago researchers against this number one cripplar was small. Facts were sparse and treatment was haphazard, but awareness and knowledge grew. In modern techniques such as grew from the application of electron microscopy, chromatography, statistical analysis and clinical observations.

Diseases such as grave arthritis can now be fully controlled by drugs discovered within the past 15 years.

LACK INITIATIVE

HONOLULU (AP) — After a study, a team of researchers from the University of Hawaii'. Repeat of Butter Tart Recipes

By MARY MOORE

NOTE: I anticipated the popularity of the General Brock High School Butter Tarts given here on April 10. They were so popular we have run out of the surplus copies I made and requests are still pouring in so I have requested to repeat the recipe.

GENERAL BROCK HIGH SCHOOL BUTTER TARTS
(Two dozen 2¾" diameter)
PASTRY ("Tart Dough"):
½ cup plus 2 tbsps. shortening
¼ cup plus 2 tbsps. lard
1½ cups plus 1 tbsp. (¼ lb) unsifted all - purpose or pastry flour
2 cups less 1 tbsp. (½ lb.) unsifted cake flour
1-3 cup plus 1 tbsp. (⅔ oz.) skim milk powder
½ tsp. salt
½ cup less 1 tbsp. (3½ oz.) light brown sugar
1 large egg
½ cup less 1 tbsp. (3½ oz. water

Sceed ½ tsp. vanilla
4 drops yellow food coloring (optional)

FILLING:
2¼ cups (1 lb.) light brown sugar
½ cup less 1 tbsp. (2½oz.)
¼ cup (2 oz.) soft softening
2 tbsps. soft butter
½ tsp. salt
1¼ tbsps. golden corn syrup
4 eggs
¾ tsp. vanilla
Approximately 1 cup raisins or walnuts

To make Pastry combine in large mixing bowl the shortening, lard, flours, milk powder and salt and mix well. Combine in a small bowl the brown sugar, egg, water, vanilla and coloring (if used) and add to mixed dry ingredients and mix to a smooth

Reverse snobbery

In the past Brights fine Canadian wines had no snob appeal. The self-styled neighbourhood "wine expert" would gush over a wine with an imported label, automatically sneer at any wine with a Canadian label.

Lately an interesting new phenomenon has arisen: reverse snobbery. The same "wine expert" has suddenly discovered Brights fine Canadian wines! He will tell you now, readily, that "there is something to be said for them". They may be "pretentious" but they're "very palatable".

Welcome to the Club!

A "cellar" with a newly-developed snob appeal:

President Champagne • Canada's prize Champagne
President Burgundy • A great dry red table wine
President Sauterne • A delicate light white wine
President Sherry • Ideal before lunch or dinner
President Extra Dry • A dry white wine of quality
President Port • A distinguished dessert wine

For "people who have everything"? A gift of a President wine "cellar" will open their eyes to what they may have been missing.

Patient Charged In Fire Deaths

TORONTO (CP) — A 26-year-old Toronto mental patient, charged with manslaughter in the deaths of two men in a fire at an Anglican Church hostel Wednesday night, was remanded Thursday for a 30-day mental examination.

Charles Lawrence Rame, a patient at the Ontario Hospital here, turned himself over to the police Wednesday night five blocks from the scene of the fire.

Killed in the blaze which destroyed the Beverley Lodge, a hostel for paroled youths, were David Payne, 28, of Fredericton, NB., and Robert Nadeau, 20, of Timmins.

In hospital in critical condition with second-degree burns is Allan Robertson, 17. James McCreary, 18, is in hospital with a broken ankle suffered when he jumped from a second-floor window.

Damage to the 90-year-old building was estimated at $14,000. Firemen said the blaze started in the basement.

Military Balance

Russia to Pass U.S. in Missile Buildup

LONDON (CP) — Canada's decision to reduce its NATO forces in Europe could make it difficult for allies to maintain their present force levels, a military expert said Thursday.

The suggestion came from Alastair Buchan, director of the Institute for Strategic Studies, as the international body prepared to release its annual assessment of the world military balance.

A major point of the current survey, released today, was that Russia will outstrip the United States in intercontinental and medium-range nuclear weapons within the next four months.

Buchan also said at a press conference on the report that he would find it difficult to believe that Russia would go on with an indefinite buildup of intercontinental missiles, if only to avoid an interminable race with the U.S.

The military-balance appraisal noted without comment Canada's intention to cut her land and air forces stationed in Europe. It did not speculate on how big the reduction might be.

Buchan was asked what effect, if any, the Canadian move might have on the balance between the NATO and Warsaw pact forces confronting each other in Europe.

"Its effect is modest if it is confined simply to Canada," replied the director, 51-year-old son of Lord Tweedsmuir, who was Canadian governor-general between 1935 and 1940.

"But the point is, other democratic countries may find it harder to justify their military spending to the electorate if Canada reduces forces."

This was the last appearance of Buchan as director of the institute. He becomes commandant of Britain's Imperial Defence College on Oct. 1. Francois Duchene, a British-Swiss economist, is his successor as head of the 36-country organization.

The Institute, founded in 1958 on American and British initiative as an international centre for research on security defence and arms control, is headed by former Canadian prime minister Lester B. Pearson.

The Institute said the Soviet Union had 1,050 intercontinental nuclear missiles in July and is expected to have 1,150 by the end of 1959. The U.S. total has remained steady at 1,054 missiles since 1957, with no new construction since then.

In addition, the Soviet Union has 700 intermediate- and medium-range missiles; the United States, none.

The report said the Americans are still ahead of the Soviet Union in the number of submarine-launched nuclear missiles, with 658 to 160, but the Russians are building four nuclear-powered missile submarines a year.

Since the recent upsurge of border incidents, the Institute said, the Soviet Union has shifted six more regular army divisions to the central Asia border region, while the Chinese are estimated to have added 600,000 men to their armed forces and "moved regular formations up to the Chinese-Soviet border to displace or supplement border troops."

China's military potential, the report said, lies basically in her large reserves of manpower."

'Bonnie' to Be Retired

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's only aircraft carrier, the Halifax-based Bonaventure, is to be retired from service around the end of this year, it was learned Thursday.

Defence department planners were reported to have decided on de-commissioning of the Bonnie as an economy move.

The 20,000-ton Bonaventure, nucleus of Canada's anti-submarine forces, joined the fleet 12 years ago. She has a complement of 900 to 1,000 men.

Operating the ship is reported to cost $1,250,000 to $1,500,000 a year, not counting the price of operating its 18 Tracker planes and Sea King and Sikorsky helicopters.

The final fate of the Bonaventure apparently has not been determined. Informed sources said the ship might either be scrapped or sold to a foreign power.

Earlier this year, the Bonaventure was the subject of a much-publicized investigation by the Commons public accounts committee, which sought to ascertain why the cost of her mid-life refit two years ago had soared to $13,000,000 from an originally-estimated $8,000,000.

However, the refit controversy is believed to have little if any connection with its early retirement. The issue was reported to be basically one of saving money.

The Bonaventure was launched at Belfast in 1945 for the Royal Navy but was put into mothballs at the end of the war, before construction could be completed.

Canada bought the hull and machinery in 1952 and construction was resumed. She was commissioned as HMCS Bonaventure Jan. 17, 1957.

Blue Blades, Czech Forward Among Pre-Season Novelties

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Eight National Hockey League clubs officially opened training camps Thursday with at least two players appearing with innovations in foot gear.

Defenceman Terry Harper showed up at the Canadiens camp at the Montreal Forum with a new pair of skate boots that resembled ski boots and defenceman Jim Dorey appeared at the Toronto Maple Leafs camp in Peterborough, Ont., with his skate blades painted blue.

Harper claimed his new skate boots provide more protection and stability while Dorey accepted Leaf general manager Jim Gregory's theory that the flashy blades probably made him skate faster.

Clubs now in camp besides the Canadiens and Leafs are St. Louis Blues at St. Andrews, N.B.; New York Rangers at Kitchener, Ont.; Minnesota North Stars in Toronto; Los Angeles Kings at Barrie, Ont.; Detroit Red Wings at Port Huron, Mich., and Boston Bruins at London, Ont.

Oakland Seals officially open camp in Oshawa, Ont., today while Pittsburgh Penguins open Sunday at Brantford, Ont. Chicago Black Hawks open at Chicago and Philadelphia Flyers at Quebec City Monday.

Harper was one of 103 players who appeared at the Forum to start training with Canadiens and their new farm club, Montreal Voyageurs of the American Hockey League.

Medical examinations at the Leafs' camp Thursday showed that left-winger Wayne Carleton has a fractured right elbow and will miss at least two weeks of workouts.

Carleton, who scored three goals for Canada's national team on a recent exhibition tour of Russia, said he will still be able to skate.

"Actually, the damage occurred in practice in Winnipeg. My skate went through the ice and I fell into the boards. I missed a couple of games during the Nationals tour in Russia but I played five."

At London, Boston general manager Milt Schmidt said in an interview the Bruins are going to be tough again this season.

"Nobody's going to intimidate this club. They just won't be pushed around."

The Bruins, minus only star centre Phil Esposito who has a sore throat, will train with their CHL affiliate Oklahoma City Blazers.

St. Louis, last season's West Division champions, Thursday showed off the first player from a Communist country to sign a contract with a North American professional team.

Jaroslav Jirik, 30, star of the Czechoslovakian national for several seasons, donned a Blues uniform for the first time in a pre-camp meeting at Ottawa's Civic Centre before the club moved to St. Andrews.

Blues coach Scotty Bowman said Jirik, a left-winger and defenceman, is only one of three Czech players his team has been trying to lure into pro hockey.

At Toronto, Minnesota manager-coach Wren Blair said during speed-skating sessions Thursday his club has added speed for the coming season.

The club additions include Tommy Williams, acquired from Boston this summer, and Charlie Burns.

Admission $6,000,000

Vancouver Can Meet NHL Price

MONTREAL (CP) — The National Hockey League announced Thursday it will make room for two more teams for the 1970-71 season with the openings available to any Canadian or United States city willing to pay the price.

In Vancouver, which has been seeking a place in the NHL for four years, an applicant said the $6,000,000 price of admission and other requirements could be met.

Six American centres. Buffalo, Baltimore, Cleveland, Washington, Atlanta and Kansas City, have also indicated interest in joining a 14-team present 12 teams.

The expansion plans were explained at a news conference held jointly in New York and Montreal via closed-circuit television.

Other topics related to expansion included a realignment of teams, scheduling, playoff format and draft setup.

Speaking on the Vancouver bid for entry into the NHL, league president Clarence Campbell said that when Vancouver first applied for a franchise three years ago the city did not have an adequate arena and the financial presentation was not adequate.

Since then, however, Vancouver has built new facilities and re-organized its financial structure, Campbell said, and both met NHL requirements.

In Vancouver, Cyrus McLean, president of Vancouver Canucks of the Western Hockey League and official applicant from that city, said his group will "do everything possible to comply with the terms" laid down by the NHL.

When the league expanded to 12 from six teams in 1967, the price paid by the new clubs for their franchises was $2,000,000.

Joe Crozier, Canucks general manager, said the $6,000,000 stipulation "does not create any problem", but he will have to look carefully into the draft setup, which he described as a "bit of a bombshell."

A minority shareholder in the Canucks organization, Frank McMahon, said he would sell out if the club met the conditions spelled out in Montreal by the NHL governors.

In Baltimore, a spokesman for the financial group described the admission price as steep.

IT'S A BOY — Randy Jenkins, 20 dresses up to show how he looked when he posed as a girl to play goal for Erindale College's girls' hockey team two years ago. The shoulder-length blonde hair is his own but he added a padded bra to complete the deception. His team defeated another Toronto-area girls' team, Scarborough College, 1-0. (CP Photo)

Randy Wore Lipstick When He Played Goal

TORONTO (CP)—Wearing a brassiere and remembering not to talk are the toughest adjustments a guy must make when he plays goal for a girls' hockey team.

At least, that's what Randy Jenkins discovered two years ago when he was in the nets for the girls' team at Erindale College. His deception has just been uncovered and Jenkins, now 20, agreed to talk about it.

Jenkins had blonde, shoulder-length hair at the time — as he has today — and Barry Barlett, Erindale's director of physical education, persuaded him to go in goal against the Scarborough College girls' team.

"We just wanted to beat our archrivals, Scarborough College," Barlett explained. "It was only an exhibition game, so there was no harm in it."

Jenkins, now a third-year general science student at Erindale, recalls that on the day of the game he arrived late at the team's dressing room "so I wouldn't embarrass any of the girls."

"I already had false eyelashes, a living bra, eye shadow and lipstick.

"In the warm-up, I couldn't stop a thing. I was well padded and the bra was so tight I could hardly move."

The five-foot-one, 150-pound Jenkins looked like a girl — from a distance anyhow. But he had to keep quiet because his voice would have given him away.

Scarborough fans must have been suspicious. They kept urging him to speak, but he remained mute and fashioned a 1-0 shutout.

The deception was not discovered until several months later when Scarborough's athletic director spotted Jenkins on a ski slope and recognized him.

Imlach Interested In Joining Canucks

TORONTO (CP) — George (Punch) Imlach, fired as general manager and coach of the National Hockey League Toronto Maple Leafs last April, said Thursday he will consider an offer of a position with Vancouver Canucks.

PUNCH IMLACH
Back In NHL

The Canucks, a Western Hockey League club, are to receive an NHL franchise next season if they fulfil requirements.

"I've been offered a position with Vancouver and chances are I'll go out there in the next week or two to discuss the deal and see what they are offering," Imlach said in an interview.

He did not say what position he had been offered by Canuck manager-coach Joe Crozier, who once played for Imlach when he coached Quebec Aces in the Quebec Senior Hockey League.

Crozier also was part-owner, manager and coach of the Leafs farm team in Rochester, N.Y., until last season when he moved to Vancouver.

Cooke Says NHL Franchise A Bargain at $10,000,000

Owner Jack Kent Cooke of Los Angeles Kings, a member of the NHL expansion committee, said Thursday: "It's going to cost each new club more than $7,000,000. The fee for coming into the NHL and acquisition of major league hockey players alone is more than $7,000,000.

"Then there are indemnities which will cost each club more than $1,000,000. Tack on the first year of operating costs and you are talking more like $8,000,000.

"Even at $10,000,000, in my humble opinion," said Cooke, "an NHL franchise is not overpriced. The ownership of an NHL club will be among the most valuable ownerships in major league sports."

Cooke scoffed at the thought that transfer of Chicago Black Hawks to the Western Division would in effect guarantee the team a spot in the playoffs as proposed for 1970-71.

"I don't think it is automatic. Whichever way one looks at it. The Western Division has come of age and with future realignment in the cards, the parity will be that much closer if indeed we have not already reached it."

Pit Says It's All A Mistake!

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Pit Martin denied Thursday he said only five players, including himself, were giving their best for Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League.

Martin was quoted Wednesday in a published report as saying only he, Stan Mikita, Ken Wharram, Dennis DeJordy and Pat Stapleton "wear their uniform with pride and any desire to win."

"I would never have mentioned those names if I knew I would be misquoted," Martin said in a telephone interview at his home in Windsor, Ont. "I never said anything like that."

He also denied the report that there is a star conflict on the team. He was quoted as saying: "Hawks have one big star and one fairly big star, and the club seems to be set up to keep those two happy."

"I don't have any conflict with Bobby Hull or anybody else," he said.

Habs Add

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League Thursday announced the purchase of veteran left winger Andre Pronovost from Minnesota North Stars. Terms of the purchase were not announced. The 33-year-old native of Shawinigan, Que., has a total of 96 goals and 104 assists in 556 NHL regular-season games.

Rink Would Help

KANSAS CITY (AP) — William Morris, president of Kansas City Blues of the Central Hockey League, said Thursday the biggest drawback to the possibility of Kansas City landing a National Hockey League franchise is a place to play.

The Blues play in the American Royal Arena, an old building in the stockyards district which can seat only about 6,000 for hockey and has a parking problem. It does not meet NHL requirements. The Municipal Auditorium in downtown Kansas City also is considered unsuitable because of seating limitations and scheduling problems.

Ethier Throws One-Hitter At Juniors to Knot Series

By MAURICE SWITZER
(Sports Editor)

In Belleville softball circles, they say Bob Ethier can be as good as he wants to be.

In last night's second game in the Commercial League's best-of-seven final playoff series, "Shuff" must have been about 99 per cent eager.

The chunky southpaw only had four base-runners to contend with in seven innings as City Hotel whipped the Ellis Juniors 6-0 and knotted the series at 1-1.

A six-inning bloop single by Juniors' pitcher Mark Sheridan dropped in just behind City first-sacker Doug Murray's outstretched trapper to rob Ethier of a no-hitter.

A fifth-inning walk and two infield errors — one his own throwing error — accounted for all the other base-runners the Juniors could manage off Ethier.

The City hurler threw third strikes past 10 Juniors to get the game over in 65 minutes.

Sheridan started out looking like a world-beater, too, until he walked three City batters in the third. The hefty right-hander got two men on strikeouts, but Bob Brooks' single gave City a 3-0 lead when Juniors' centrefielder Cliff Scott threw the ball over the screen.

Another of the four hits Sheridan gave up was Ethier's fourth-inning rbi double. Ethier later scored on Doug Murray's ground ball.

Jerry Genereaux's fifth-inning single brought Larry Potter in for the final City run.

Sheridan struck out six and walked as many Hotelmen.

The series resumes at the Alemite with an 8 o'clock Monday night game.

Departmental Trainmen Fight Like True Brothers

Nobody fights like brothers, and the two trainmen entries in the Departmental Soft ball league showed their final playoff series is not going to be settled easily.

The CN Combines squeaked out a 6-5 decision over CN Turbos last night to square the best-of-seven set at 1-1. And the Combines have entered a protest that the Turbos used three ineligible players in their 3-2 win in the series' opener Tuesday.

Last night the Combines couldn't have objected to at least one of the players in questions.

They chased Turbo starter Ron Conlon from the slab after touching him for four hits and all their six runs in the first three innings of the seven-inning game. Conlon had walked six and struck out five.

Reliever Rod Bagnell shut out the Combines the rest of the way on four hits and a pair of walks.

Junior Day toed the slab for the winners, fanning three and issuing two walks in his eight-hitter.

Day and Bob Bardy each contributed two hits to the Combines' attack, while Plumbe was the only Turbo batter to hit safely twice.

Third game in the series is scheduled for Monday night at 6 p.m.

Quinte Lacrosse Loop Wants Junior Status

The two-year-old Quinte District Lacrosse League has big plans in store for the game that only a few years ago was a local novelty.

League organizers resolved at their annual meeting last night to make application for Junior "B" status at February's Ontario Lacrosse Association meeting.

Whatever the outcome of that presentation, registrations and players' cards will be part and parcel of the league's operation next year, the executive decided, keeping in line with other minor sports.

The city's minor lacrosse association president, Roy Payne — was elected to head up the Quinte District loop's new executive. Cobourg's Mike Jones will be first vice-president, Campbellford's D Ing Stickwood second vice-president, Larry Bigg, Picton, secretary; Layton Dodge, Cobourg statistician; and Wally Thrynuk of Belleville will be chief referee.

Congratulations were extended to Campbellford, who won the league championship by defeating Picton two games to one in the playoff final.

Do or Die For Legion

Belleville's Branch 99 Legionnaires hope they have their bad game out of their systems for the year.

The city's bantam all-star representatives in Ontario Baseball Association play-offs meet an arch-rival Kitchener 21 - 1 shellacking last Sunday in Kitchener to go one down in the best-of-three OBA semi-final series.

Saturday, Kitchener is in town for a 2 p.m. Parkdale game, with the deciding game if necessary, to be held on the same Belleville diamond the following night, again at 2 o'clock.

This year's version of the Branch 99 bantams is missing about half a dozen members of last year's team that went all the way to the OBA finals, only to bow out two games to one to a powerhouse Niagara Falls team.

Coach Dick Hurst gives his Booth TV tykes all-stars some drill to prepare them for the Sept. 20 round-the-bay walkathon to raise funds for the Quinte Community Recreation Centre. The team's sponsor has pledged ten cents per mile to the boys, who were this year's Eastern Ontario Baseball Association pennant-winners.

Two Familiar Faces Will Be Missing From Area Harness Racing Circuit

At least two faces will be missing from the remaining four weekly sessions of harness racing sponsored by the Quinte Riding and Driving Club.

Ernie "Tick" Mueller—top driver at the current Kingston Horsemen's Driving Club extended meet — has been indefinitely suspended by the Canadian Trotting Association.

Muller was involved in two accidents this year, and was recently suspended for 15 days for careless driving in one of the Saturday night Belleville Fairground heats.

Muller's suspension leaves driveress Chocletta, Barbara Maple, and Todd Judge — all owned by members of his family.

The second missing participant on the Belleville track will be Miss Happy Kim.

The familiar Picton entry owned by Chris Storma had to be destroyed after a pileup at Orono Raceway near Oshawa last Friday.

Driver Ken Weeks escaped serious injury, and returned to Belleville for last Saturday night's trots.

Parsons Bounce United

Belleville Parsons have advanced to the second round of the Belleville Cup competition by downing Belleville United 7-0 in Bay of Quinte soccer action.

A hat trick performance by Reid Mallory paced the Parsons, with Bob Rutherford adding a pair of goals.

Tom Ryan and Peter Koutsoubis also scored for the Parsons, whose next opponent will be the winner of the Rovers - Bata game.

Dessert Served For Minor Softball

The main course of the Belleville Minor Softball Season is over, and tomorrow it's time for dessert.

Most of the 700 players registered with the BMSA this summer are expected to be at the Alemite for tomorrow's Presentation Day ceremonies.

League, playoff, and city championship teams' trophies will be handed out, as well as most valuable player awards in each of the tyke, squirt, peewee, and bantam divisions.

Saturday's activity gets under way at 1:30.

Even Referees Can Be Taught

There are no lessons to teach referees how to ignore the hoots and jeers from partisan hockey spectators.

Just about all the other essentials will be taught, however, at the annual eastern Ontario referees' school to be staged in Kingston, Monday night, Sept. 22.

Staged under the auspices of the Ontario Hockey Association, the school will be held, beginning at 8.30 the evening of the 22 at the Royal Military College's Constantine Arena.

To avoid unnecessary delays the night of the session, applications are being made available in advance through the office of OHA secretary-manager Bill Hanley, 24 Merton St., Toronto 295.

Ducks on Agenda Of Game Club

With the duck hunting season swooping in on Quinte area outdoorsmen, the Belleville and District Fish and Game Club has chosen an appropriate format for their opening meeting of the season Tuesday night.

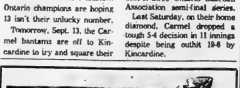
Wildlife management officer Bill Bittle, from the Tweed Lands and Forests office will discuss migratory game birds and laws at the 8 p.m. Club Canara meeting.

The Fish and Game Club members are also laying plans for their annual Turkey Shoot, slated for Sunday, Sept. 21 on the third concession of Sidney Township property of Fred Hosking.

Carmel Draws 13

Carmel's Bantam C Eastern Ontario champions are hoping 13 isn't their unlucky number.

Tomorrow, Sept. 13, the Carmel bantams are off to Kincardine to try and square their best-of-three Ontario Baseball Association semi-final series.



Last Saturday, on the home diamond, Carmel dropped a tough 5-4 decision in 11 innings despite being outhit 19-8 by Kincardine.

Pinch Hitter Bids Giants 'Aloha'

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The only Chinese-Hawaiian to the majors and a pitcher just up from the minors played key

* * *

Major League Leaders

roles Thursday night in two National League division races.

The Chinese-Hawaiian was Mike Lum, No. 5 in the Braves' outfield but No. 1 in Al Atlanta today after a pinch single that beat San Francisco Giants 5-3.

The pitcher was Jeff James, a right-hander making his first appearance of 1969, who tamed Chicago 4-3 with last-out help from Grant Jackson as Philadelphia Phillies sent the Cubs plummeting to their eighth consecutive defeat.

Elsewhere, New York Mets blanked Montreal Expos 4-0, Cincinnati Reds held off San Diego Padres 6-4, Los Angeles Dodgers nipped Houston Astros 1-0 and 5-4, Pittsburgh Pirates edged St. Louis Cardinals 3-2.

The standings in the Eastern Division find the Mets two games ahead of the Cubs while, in the West, it's Cincinnati back on top by one percentage point over Atlanta.

Lum came to bat in the eighth inning of a 3-3 game with two out and the bases loaded after the Giants issued an intentional walk to Sonny Jackson. His single to centre off Frank Linzy scored Oscar Brown, running for Rico Carty, and Orlando Cepeda. Carty and Cepeda opened the inning with singles.

Willie McCovey slammed two homers for the Giants, his 42nd and 44th of the season, while Hank Aaron hammered No. 41 for the Braves.

James, just up from the Pacific Coast League, started in place of the injured Phillie Jerry Johnson. The right-hander spent 1968 with the Phillies and compiled a 7-4 record including two victories over the Cubs.

The Cubs' skid has left them in a state of confusion. Veteran Ernie Banks wandered around the clubhouse after the defeat, chanting, "We're gonna win, we're gonna win," then he turned to pitcher Ken Holtzman and asked, "Ain't we?"

Mets By A Hare?

NEW YORK (AP) — Gil Hodges' lucky rabbit may be making the road trip with New York Mets which begins tonight in Pittsburgh. And if Hodges discovers that the little guy can't swing from the left side, he may even make the lineup.

The Mets haven't lost since the stuffed snowshoe hare arrived at Shea Stadium, sent by an enthusiastic upstate New York fan,"I thought I'd send the whole rabbit instead of just the foot," the fan's enclosed note said.

Since the hare arrived the Mets have won seven straight games and taken over first place in the National League's East Division. The latest victory was a 4-0 six-hitter by Gary Gentry against Montreal Expos Thursday.

McNally Winning Again; Orioles Zero in on Crown

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Dave McNally, who had a 17-game winning streak going until Aug. 3, moved back into the win column Thursday night as he pitched a four hitter in Baltimore's 7-0 victory over Boston Red Sox.

The victory was McNally's first complete game since Aug. 7, and coupled with Detroit Tigers' 5-3 loss to Cleveland Indians, increased the Orioles' runaway lead in the American League East Division to 15½ games and cut to three their magic number for clinching the division crown.

In other AL games, Kansas City Royals blanked California Angels 3-0 on Wally Bunker's one-hitter, Washington beat New York Yankees 7-3, Chicago White Sox tripped Minnesota s West Division leading Twins 4-0 and Oakland Athletics stopped Seattle Pilots 6-3.

McNally, 14-9, who won his first 15 games this year, doubled home the Orioles' first run as Baltimore scored up its 10th victory in 11 games.

Rico Petrocelli's 31th homer was the only damage of Mc-Nally.

Lou Tiant, 9-18, scattered eight hits in shaking off a personal eight-game losing streak and won his first game since July 13 in beating the Tigers and Denny McLain, 22-7.

The only hit of Bunker, 10-10, was Jay Johnstone's leadoff single in the seventh. Ed Kirkpatrick, a former, Angel, backed Bunker with solo homers in the fourth and sixth.

Sal Bando led his 20th homer of the season and a single, driving in three runs, in helping Oakland break a five-game losing streak.

Veteran Joel Horlen checked Minnesota on three hits and rookie Bob Christian knocked in two runs as the White Sox beat the Twins for the second straight night.

Injuries Plague Ottawa Roster

OTTAWA (CP) — Injuries to two players have presented Ottawa coach Frank Clair with a complex lineup problem, but he remains confident that Rough Riders can handle Toronto Argonauts in Saturday's game in Ottawa.

The teams are tied for second place behind Hamilton in the Eastern Football conference.

The lineup problem resulted from last Saturday's football game against Montreal Alouettes which Riders won convincingly, 47-20. Offensive tackle Moe Racine will be out for the rest of the season with a broken left leg suffered in the contest.

In the same game, defensive lineman Jim Cain suffered a torn calf muscle.

Dave Braggins was moved from his defensive position to replace Racine, but that left gaps in the Ottawa defence.

Clair's next move to replace the losses was to recall Ed Joyner, a defensive tackle dropped a few weeks ago.

With Joyner's recall, the Riders were over the limit of 14 imports, so halfback Darwin Gonnerman was placed on waivers. Winnipeg Blue Bombers picked him up Thursday.

Another complication is John McCambridge, 23-year-old offensive and defensive end from Detroit, who was brought in Thursday for five-day tryout.

Greg Thompson, a Canadian who dropped out of training camp when he found it interfered with his employment, was drafted in a halfback.

Clair said Wednesday he would like to try 19-year-old lineman Wayne Smith from Halifax, but Smith's inexperience would make him a risk.

"Smith's going to be a great one but he's a long way away yet," the coach said. "He's faster than hell and he's got some nice moves but he's pretty green."

Earlier this week Clair praised the Argos' defensive unit: "Their defence was sharp. They like mad. We have to think a lot this week about pass protection. It's going to be a tough football game . . . But we can do it providing every one is ready to give it 100 per cent."

The fans obviously expect Saturday's contest to be a good one. By Thursday afternoon, the Lansdowne Park ticket office reported almost all tickets sold except those in the end zones.

TREE FACTORY

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Forest Service is developing a 465-acre site near Surrey in the Fraser Valley which will eventually produce 40,000 tree seedlings a year. The nursery will concentrate on producing B.C. interior varieties of seedlings.

Yorkton Has Own Festival

YORKTON, Sask. (CP) — On the surface there is little to distinguish the city of Yorkton, 100 miles southeast of Saskatoon, from other small prairie cities.

But Yorkton has one feature none of its neighbors, large or small, can claim. It is the scene of an international film festival and has been so since 1950.

The 10th biennial International Documentary Film Festival is scheduled for this city of 15,- for Oct. 22-24.

Some inhabitants were surprised when the Yorkton Film Council in 1949 announced plans for the first International Documentary Film Festival for 1950. But the committee that organized the initial festival felt that films are for people, so why should it not be held here? Foreign and domestic film makers apparently agreed, for there has never been a shortage of entries.

The festival is marked by Golden Sheaf awards and certificates of merit. It has been well supported by Yorkton citizens, who, it is rumored out in thousands to see the films.

Entries are coming in for this year's festival from many parts of the world.

Reporters attending the third festival in 1954 asked why Yorkton was chosen as the site. Nettie Krykski, secretary of the festival, replied: "There isn't any reason why ordinary people who aren't glamorous or well known can't enjoy the same things they enjoy in the big capitals of the world. We wanted a film festival we've just went ahead and organized one."

Residents of Yorkton appear to agree.

Manhattan Changes Course, Takes Easy Ice-Free Route

WINTER HARBOUR, N.W.T. (CP) — The SS Manhattan, freed from polar ice twice Thursday, continued to plow its way through the Arctic Ocean with the help of a smaller Canadian Coast Guard icebreaker.

The 150,000-ton Manhattan, being used by Humble Oil Ltd. to explore the feasibility of the Northwest Passage to take oil from Alaska's north coast to United States markets, was snared by 11-foot polar ice for three hours the first time and 30 minutes the second.

It was the fourth and fifth times the supertanker had been trapped and, as on previous occasions, the Canadian icebreaker John A. Macdonald was able to free her.

Late Thursday, leaders of the expedition decided to back out the scheduled M'Clure Strait—north of Banks Island and 1,400 miles north of Edmonton—and proceed instead through Ice-free Prince of Wales Strait, a relatively narrow stretch of water between Banks Island and Victoria Island.

The decision was made after the Manhattan, which has a speedstyle bow, encountered increasingly heavy ice in M'Clure.

Taking the easier route through Prince of Wales Strait will defeat part of the Manhattan's purpose—to make scientific findings in the worst ice possible.

Spokesmen for Humble Oil said strategy included some assistance by ancillary vessels.

But the voyage so far has been relatively easy. There have been no shrieking winds or storms of any kind, and the temperature has been about 30 degrees throughout—as if the Arctic was on its best behavior for its US visitor.

Polywater

Scientists Discovered New Water Form

NEW YORK (AP) — Scientists reported Thursday on a new form of water, much slower to freeze or turn to steam than the water we are used to.

The existence of a second form of water—termed "almost inconceivable" by the scientists —was reported by two groups of American researchers, confirming earlier work by scientists in the Soviet Union.

The new form has been named "polywater," for its unique molecular structure.

Scientists from the University of Maryland and the U.S. National Bureau of Standards reported their research to the 158th national meeting of the American Chemical Society.

Polywater has "remarkable properties," the scientists said.

Although it has the chemical composition of ordinary water — two hydrogen atoms and one oxygen atom— polywater does not freeze at zero degrees centigrade. At 40 degrees below zero centigrade it solidifies to a glass-like state, rather then the crystal state of ice.

It remains a liquid to about 500 degrees centigrade, while normal water turns to steam at about 100 degrees. Polywater has a density about 40 per cent greater than ordinary water.

The first reports on a new form of water came in 1962 and 1968 in Soviet journals from the scientists N. F. Fedyakin and Boris V. Deryagin.

Polywater has been produced in laboratories in minute quantities by condensation of ordinary water vapor in capillary tubes. The quartz capillaries, only as thick as a human hair, are suspended over distilled water in a sealed, low-pressure system.

After about 18 hours, the condensation in the tubes is polymeric water. A polymer is a long array of identical molecules.

The mechanism by which this happens is still unknown.

One place where scientists think polywater may exist—in nature is in mineral systems such as clays, where water has been measured with a density greater than normal.

Policy Control in Volunteers' Hands

OTTAWA (CP) — Participatory democracy has come to the Company of Young Canadians, and because participatory democracy ranks with motherhood in the value system of the "just society" this might be expected to worry some hearts on Parliament Hill.

But in this case the democratic participants are not run-of-the-mill country folk but CYC volunteers, whose general view of their own role in Canadian society has been known to bring foam and invective to the mouths of politicians.

Last month, elections were held and volunteers chose 10 representatives for the organization's new 15-man permanent council, which starting either this weekend or next month will direct CYC policy.

The other five council members will be appointed by the government. Since the company was founded as an independent Crown corporation in 1966 it has been run, at least on paper, by a provisional council consisting of 10 government appointees and five volunteer representatives.

Thus, control of the company's over-all policy—including financial decisions—will now be in the hands of the volunteers.

SOME DOUBTS

The reason it is felt doubtful whether the new council will start making policy this weekend or next month is that State Secretary Gerard Pelletier is not scheduled to announce the government's five council members until next month.

To many of the volunteers this is irrelevant. While Executive Director Claude Vidal maintains that any council meetings before the government officials are appointed will be unofficial, at least some of the volunteer-elected members, encouraged by what they consider the excessive period they had to wait to gain control, are ready to start making some changes.

A meeting has been scheduled this weekend between the executive of the old provisional council and the 10 volunteer-elected representatives of the new council.

The CYC was set up by Parliament in 1966. Its objects are to support, encourage and develop programs for social, economic and community development in Canada or abroad through voluntary service.

Kingston, Ont., volunteer Logan Murray, president of the Volunteers Association of English-Speaking Canada, which represents about 100 of the company's nearly 200 volunteers, says the weekend meeting will be an official one, not a "get-together" as the CYC head office is calling it.

There is no doubt that some of the volunteer representatives will use the meeting to fire a barrage of criticism of the CYC's central Ottawa administration for its past conduct. Several volunteers, some of them influential and some of them members of the new council, have expressed dissatisfaction with the central Ottawa office in general and Director Vidal in particular.

Vidal, 29, came to the company last September from the School of Fine Arts in Montreal, where he built up a reputation as a firm administrator during last year's student strike there.

There have been volunteer complaints since his arrival that he has been playing the government's game, stressing financial responsibility and "safe" projects and trying to rid the company of its more radical volunteers and controversial projects.

He has also been accused of being authoritarian—making decisions that should have been left to the permanent council.

Vidal himself refuses to comment, referring all would-be interviewers to his information officer, Ian Hamilton, a former volunteer.

Hamilton agrees that Vidal stresses financial responsibility, and that well he should considering the criticisms of the company for overlooking such details in the past.

Skip Hambling, a former volunteer in Cape Breton, N.S., now working with the federal-provincial Newstart program in P.E.I. and one of those elected to the new council, expresses the viewpoint of the dissatisfied and more radical volunteers.

The head office administrators, he says, "have a wishy-washy humanitarian thing, but they're not political in the broadest sense. We are. We think there's a difference between social service and social change. . . . We are interested in changing the system."

"They want us to hold some slum person's hand. We want to turn that hand into a fist, so that a person will get out of the slum and won't have to put up with the slum any more, ever."

If there is a majority wish to dispose of the Ottawa office altogether or even fire Vidal, then they will have the power to do, loud rantings can be expected to emanate from Parliament Hill.

CUPE Backs Student Leaders

TORONTO (CP) — Delegates to the biennial convention of the Canadian Union of Public Employees Thursday voted to support student leaders in their efforts to make Canadian universities more democratic.

Maggie Bizzell told the 660 delegates, representing 130,000 CUPE members, that unless unions involve themselves with students, young people will continue to get a prejudiced view of unionism from university administrations.

Miss Bizzell is a member of CUPE Local 1,222 representing the 17 employees of the University of Toronto Students' Administrative Council.

Delegates were less generous in their support for a plan by the CUPE executive to increase revenues by about $4,000,000 to finance a plan to expand services and staff.

They turned down a proposal to raise to $2.90 from $1.60 a month per capita payments from locals to the national office.

After three ballots, spread over two days, delegates gave the necessary two-thirds majority approval to increasing the payments by $1 a month per capita in two stages.

Younger delegates at the convention managed to put through a resolution to convene a conference of Youth in Public Employment (YIPE) to look into the problem of involving younger members in the union's leadership.

Sino-Soviet Pow-Wow Indicates Thaw in Relations

MOSCOW (Reuters) — An unexpected meeting between Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin and Chinese Premier Chou En-Lai Thursday left unclear whether a thaw is imminent in Sino-Soviet relations.

The Peking summit, first between the two feuding giants in 4½ years, was proposed by the Russians through North Vietnam said the chairman of the Japanese Communist party.

Sanzo Nosaka said at a news conference today in Tokyo the Russians told the Chinese they would like to stop in Peking on the way home from the funeral of Ho Chi Minh in Hanoi.

Nosaka said the Soviet delegation did not get an answer until they arrived on a stopover in Calcutta, India.

The Associated Press said the few facts made public in Moscow and Peking indicated that the meeting was a chilly one.

The Soviet announcement said only that the two sides had openly explained their positions and described the talks as "useful." Peking's announcement described the talks as "frank," a term normally indicating disagreement.

The Peking announcement said that the conversations were held at the airport.

The fact that Kosygin went to such length for such an unceremonious meeting, however, underscored the seriousness of the Soviet-Chinese conflict.

Moscow observers said there was hope in the fact that any dialogue had been established at all between the two countries whose acrimony broke into open fighting this year along their 4,500-mile long border. Only Wednesday Moscow accused Peking of threatening Russia with war.

But it remained to be seen whether the brief encounter could possibly herald a reconciliation between Moscow and Peking.

In a report issued Wednesday by Tass, the Soviet Union said China still had not replied to the proposals and accused Peking of making "absurd territorial claims" on Russian territory.

The Chinese claim that Imperial China was forced to cede large areas of what is now Soviet Siberia and the Soviet Far East as a result of "unequal treaties" in the 19th century. But Russia says the treaties are legal and binding.

The last huge meeting between top Russian and Chinese leaders was between Kosygin and Chou in Peking in February, 1965, before and after the Soviet premier visited Hanoi.

At that time China and Russia apparently went their separate ways in giving support to North Vietnam in the war against South Vietnam and the U.S.

Electronic Babysitter Aids Deaf

KENNEWICK, Wash. (AP) — After seven weeks of sleepless nights, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Gray now go to bed without worrying about their child. An electronic babysitter has made it possible.

The Grays, both 26, are deaf. The baby, Gordon Jr., was born July 25. The mother and father, unable to hear whether the child was crying, alternated staying up nights at his bedside in four-hour shifts.

Then, two friends rigged up an electronic device to a microphone in the baby's crib. The equipment flashes a light in the daytime and acts off a vibrator under the parents' pillows at night. A slammed door or a scream sets it blinking or jiggling.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Fuss or Solitude Patient's Choice

When you are ill do you prefer to crawl off to a corner and suffer in solitude? Or, do you like to have your family make a fuss over you? Perhaps the following letter will help you decide:

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I read recently of the woman who wrote to you complaining of the oversolicitousness of her family. She stated that she would be willing to trade all she would rather be off in a corner and suffer alone.

I wonder if she doesn't know how lucky she is. I'd exchange places with her. My own personal experience is opposite from hers. My family does not believe in giving or showing sympathy, attention or understanding. (I recall that as a youngster I wasn't allowed to cry when I bruised my knee.)

I am 63 and have several physical ailments, none of them imaginary. Any one of them would make anyone uncomfortable because of the pain and misery they cause.

My children are 33 and 44, live a few hundred miles from here. I don't expect them to come here to see me. I don't expect candy, flowers or any other gifts. But it would be wonderful to know they cared.

A phone call — a card, an occasional letter. Some little act or word showing kindness, tenderness, or love.

I know what it means to crawl off in a corner and suffer alone, feeling relieved and unwanted. The woman who wrote to you saying that her family is overadicitous ought to thank her wonderful family.

Yes I'll change places with her. On second thought, I don't think I will. I wouldn't want to wish my misfortune on another human being. — (Signed, Mrs. X.)

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am a 49-year old man, in good health, but get very little exercise. Do you recommend massage? — Mr. H.

COMMENT: Massage is one of the finest forms of passive exercise. A daily walk might help, too.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am 78 and need an operation. I am healthy, drive my own car, live alone and have been very active. My trouble is that my uterus has fallen and presses on my bladder. It hurts and feels bad until I lie down to rest. Am I too old? — Mrs. G.

COMMENT: Pelvic repair is a relatively simple operation when performed by an expert gynecologist or general surgeon. If your doctor says you are able to withstand surgery, you will be thankful for it because of the increased comfort.

As I keep saying (ad nauseum?) it isn't the patient's calendar age that counts so much as his physiological age. At 78 you may be in as good condition as a woman of 48.

I wonder how readers feel about the following letter:

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I wish you would call attention in your column to a brand of carelessness that is becoming increasingly common among the people who I happen to be associated with. This is the spreading of germs by testing the food which is to be served to others, and then putting the spoon or fork back in the serving dish.

It seems to me to be an exceedingly disgusting habit and I wish people would realize how distasteful they make associations with them seem when they force you to "eat after them."

Police Describe Mary Nelles Kidnapper As Smart, Educated... and Ruthless

TORONTO (CP) — The leader of the abductors of Mary Nelles apparently had a soft spot for women. During the 40 hours of her captivity between Sunday evening and Tuesday afternoon, he tried to comfort her and held her hand when she became upset.

He is also apparently acquainted with the higher social circles, at least well enough to know the financial status enjoyed by her family, which has interests in more than 37 companies.

A senior police official said in an interview Thursday that "this case may be solved on Bay Street," the city's financial district.

The kidnapper has the vocabulary of an educated man, knows the Muskoka resort area well, has the intelligence to plan complicated manoeuvres and the ruthlessness to ensure the plan is carried out to perfection by those under him, says the police spokesman. He is, apparently, a flawless typist.

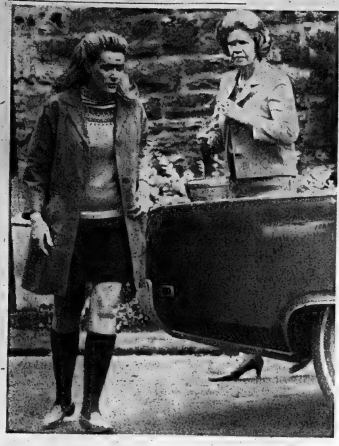
Such is the picture police have formed of the man who so far has eluded a massive search in the Muskoka District, about 100 miles north of here, and made off with the $200,000 ransom dropped by Mrs. Nelles' husband, Henry S. Radcliffe Nelles, two miles from Port Carling.

The money was raised by Mrs. Nelles's uncle, Toronto millionaire N. M. Davis, a director of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce.

The police spokesman told The Globe and Mail in the interview the planning of a complicated series of calls to pay telephones, and the efficiency with which they were carried out, indicated a person of better than average intelligence was behind the scheme.

Mrs. Nelles, 28, was taken Sunday from the converted schoolhouse where she lived with her husband at nearby Claremont to a hideout about two-hours drive away.

Throughout the entire period, she was masked with adhesive tape.



Police have searched hundreds of cottages in the area and are checking restaurants and motels for someone who may have seen the kidnappers.

Roadblocks set up Tuesday afternoon after Mrs. Nelles' recovery have been removed. Police said the chances of tracking dogs finding clues were poor following rain most of Thursday.

Police have circulated to police forces across the country the serial numbers of the $20, $50 and $100 bills in which the ransom was paid. They have also notified the FBI although no United States' connection with the crime is suspected.

SIGNS OF ACTION

Signs of things happening on the moon were spotted by naked-eye astronomers at least 70 years before the invention of the telescope in 1610.

Leaves Home with Mother

Mary Nelles (left), 28-year-old daughter of Toronto millionaire Marshall Davis and wife of Toronto stockbroker Henry Radcliffe Nelles, leaves her family home with her mother Thursday. Mrs. Nelles was kidnapped Sunday from her home and released after ransom of $200,000 was paid.

Satellite Still Needs Name

OTTAWA (CP) — Someone south of the border thinks it should be Satty Chatty. And unnumbered Canadians propose Adanac, or, more conventionally, Canada.

Those are just a few of the 20,000 suggestions mailed to the federal communications department in its name-the-satellite contest.

The prize is an all-expenses-paid trip to Cape Kennedy, Fla., to see the launch of Canada's first domestic space communications satellite.

The department is surprised by the response to the contest announced last June by Communications Minister Eric Kierans.

His boss, Prime Minister Trudeau, comes in for a lot of attention. Entries include PET, for Pierre Elliott Trudeau, and even just plain Trudeau.

Some of the entries were transparent leg-pulling. For example, a printed card signed Bob Stanfield, the name of the Opposition leader, proposed Trudeau the First for the initial satellite, Benson for the second and Sharp for the third.

Another with a historical bent proposed Wolfe for the first and Montcalm for the second.

The contest closes Oct. 1 and the department expects an upsurge from school children who hadn't entered during the summer holidays as they return to classrooms. Reminders about the contest and rules are being sent to many schools.

Key rules are that the name proposed must mean the same or nearly the same in English as in French, or be an Indian or Eskimo name, and be clearly Canadian or with Canadian content.

The satellite is to be shot aloft late next year or in early 1971.

5 Men Arrested, Ransom Found

One Old Boyfriend

TORONTO (CP) — Mary Nelles and her family expressed relief Friday night that five men had been arrested in connection with her kidnapping, but shook that one of them was a former boy friend of the 26-year-old blonde.

"It's a great relief," said Mrs. Nelles' husband, Cliff, 29.

"But it's a very great shock to all of us. It's something that was completely unexpected."

Mr. Nelles said the arrests probably would mean he and his wife, married for only two months, would return to their converted schoolhouse home in Claremont, 25 miles northeast of here.

Family members said Mrs. Nelles had expressed fear of returning to Claremont—the site of the kidnapping last Sunday night—but probably would be less nervous about it now.

She has returned there only once since her release by the kidnappers Tuesday afternoon — a 90-minute visit Thursday to wash some dishes and collect some clothes.

Mrs. Nelles' father, millionaire Marshall Davis, also expressed shock that one of those arrested was a former boyfriend of his daughter and a family friend—Gary Adams, a 26-year-old printing office operator.

He said police had been investigating the possibility that one of the kidnappers was an acquaintance of the family.

"But none of us considered it for a minute," said Mr. Davis, who praised the police work involved in the case.

"They did a magnificent job. We have very much to be thankful for."

He said it was "a relief" to know that the kidnappers were not "a bunch of hardened criminals who might have tried it again somewhere else."

Another member of the family and group of friends who visited the Davis' home Friday night to celebrate the arrests and recovery of the $200,000 ransom said:

"We're all very relieved tonight for a change. But it's a pretty bitter pill for Mary . . . for all of us . . . to swallow."

Tracking Dogs Unearth Loot

TORONTO (CP) — The biggest manhunt in Ontario's history ended Friday night with the recovery of $200,000, presumed to be the ransom paid for the release of Mary Nelles, and the arrest of five men charged with her knidnapping.

Assistant commissioner Harold H. Graham of the provincial police's criminal investigation branch said the money was found in a plastic garbage bag buried near a Footes Bay cottage, about 110 miles north of here.

Commissioner Graham said details in the four-page ransom letter led police to believe the kidnappers knew the Nelles family well.

He said the first break police had was the discovery Friday by tracking dogs of a foam rubber cushion, bandages and a pair of binculars buried near the cottage.

Charges of kidnapping and conspiracy to kidnap were laid against five men, one of them Gary Adams, 25, a printing office operator and former boyfriend of Mrs. Nelles before her marriage last July.

Also charged were:

John Rogan, 30, a real estate salesman; Peter Burns, 23, a transport company employee; Ralph Cameron, 25,who worked for Adams; and Michael Whiteside, 24, a printing salesman.

The five, who live at the same street address in central Toronto, are to appear in court in Whitby Tuesday.

Adams and Cameron were arrested Friday night as they stepped off a plane from Montreal. The others were picked up near their apartment building.

Mrs. Nelles, 28-year-old daughter of a Toronto millionaire, and her husband, Henry Radcliffe Nelles, a Toronto brokerage employee, were overjoyed Sunday night as they returned to their converted-schoolhouse home in Claremont, 26 miles northeast of Toronto.

The attackers bound and blindfolded the couple and took Mrs. Nelles away, leaving her husband behind.

The Nelles's house is isolated, with the nearest neighbors living about half a mile away.

Through a series of telephone calls, the kidnappers gave instructions for Mr. Nelles to leave $200,000 at a designated spot. Following these instructions, he found his wife unharmed on Tuesday.

Earlier, the kidnappers asked for $850,000 ransom, then settled for $200,000.

The Nelles were married in July. Mrs. Nelles's father is Toronto financier Marshall Davis and her uncle, who raised the ransom money, is N. M. Davis, also a Toronto millionaire, and a director of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce.

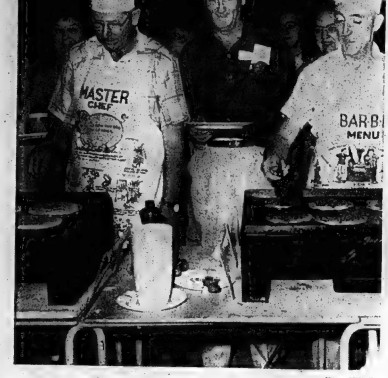
Mr. Nelles left the ransom money at the appointed place in the resort country northwest of Orillia. Then, directed by another telephone call, he found his wife, still bound and gagged, in a sleeping bag a short distance away.

"She had not been harmed," Mr. Nelles told a news conference later. "She confirmed to me that she had been well taken care of."

Then began Ontario's biggest manhunt.

Elaborate roadblocks were set up on streets, highways and also conducted from the air, and police dogs, frustrated at times by rain-washed grounds, were brought in.

All routine steps were taken. Serial numbers of the $20, $50 and $100 bills with which the ransom was paid were circulated to police forces across the country. The FBI was informed.



The lake country—dense bush and winding backroads which make the Muskokas a popular tourist area—was a tough one to search.

Police had set a sophisticated trap, based on visual and electronic surveillance of Mr. Nelles's car as he drove to deliver the money, but the contact broke down and the kidnappers made their getaway.

While the search intensified, police feared the abductors had been able to travel many miles in the two hours between the time the money was dropped and when Mrs. Nelles was found.

During the ordeal, police had at least one good thing to say about one of the kidnappers—he was gentlemanly. During the 40 hours of her captivity he tried to comfort her and held her hand when she became upset.

The first police officer brought in on the case by Mr. Nelles was Deputy Chief Bernard Simmonds of the Metropolitan Toronto Police. He turned the case over to the provincial police.

BARRIE (CP) — David Cruise, 26, of Midland, Ont., Friday was sentenced to seven years on a reduced charge of manslaughter following his non-capital murder trial for the stabbing death of his wife.

Cruise was charged after his estranged wife Viola, 27, was stabbed 23 times on the lawn outside their home May 17. Court was told the incident occurred after the woman returned home in the company of another man.

The all-male Ontario Supreme Court jury convicted Cruise after deliberating 6½ hours.

SAIGON (AP) — United States bombing raids over South Vietnam are back to normal today, but Washington is directing them, military spokesmen said.

The B-52s resumed their attacks after a 36-hour halt ordered by President Nixon to test the intentions of the Viet Cong command following the three-day cessation for the funeral of president Ho Chi Minh of North Vietnam.

Supreme Court To Hear Kopechne Inquest Argument

BOSTON (AP) — The Massachusetts Supreme Court will hear arguments on the constitutional issues that have blocked the Mary Jo Kopechne inquest Oct. 8, a spokesman announced Friday.

The statement followed a meeting between lawyers in the case and Associate Justice Paul C. Reardon of the state Supreme Court.

Details of what were discussed at the meeting were not released, but it was understood that principal topic was procedure for the Oct. 8 hearing.

Miss Kopechne, a 28-year-old Washington secretary, died July 18 when Senator Edward M. Kennedy's car plunged off a narrow bridge and into a tidal pond on Chappaquiddick Island, off the Massachusetts coast.

Ice Beats Manhattan

WINTER HARBOR, N.W.T. (CP) — In a display of brute strength Friday night, the SS Manhattan rammed its way out of dense polar ice after being trapped for 24 hours in M'Clure Strait 1,400 miles north of Edmonton.

The experimental supertanker took more than two hours to crunch through two miles of 12-foot thick ice separating it from the open sea. It then turned around and headed back out of the strait, an embarrassing climax to a history-making voyage through the Northwest Passage.

Now the 115,000-ton vessel will steam through ice-free Prince of Wales Strait to reach Sachs Harbor 220 miles to the southwest—on the south coast of Banks Island—sometime Sunday.

The decision to turn back was made Thursday after the Manhattan ground to a halt three times. But the decision came a trifle late—the vessel was trapped by the ice.

A test vessel for the Humble Oil Ltd. Arctic expedition to find whether 250,000-ton tankers can move Alaska oil to eastern U.S. markets, the Manhattan did not have enough power to back up through the ice. Only about 7,000 of its 43,000 horsepower is available astern.

There was some speculation about placing a towline aboard from the Canadian Coast Guard icebreaker John A. Macdonald, but Capt. Roger Steward declined when the open water was spotted.

But the Macdonald went alongside the Manhattan several times during the Friday dash to open water to relieve pressure on the American vessel's hull.

Stan Haas, project manager for Humble, said the failure to negotiate M'Clure Strait was not a disappointment. He said the Manhattan had done all it was intended to do.

Another member of the family and group of friends who visited the Davis' home Friday night to celebrate the arrests and recovery of the $200,000 ransom said:

"We're all very relieved tonight for a change. But it's a pretty bitter pill for Mary . . . for all of us . . . to swallow."

Ethiopian Plane Hijacked, Bandit Reported Shot

ADEN (Reuters) — Two nationalist commandos today hijacked an Ethiopia Airlines DC-6 airliner to this Southern Yemen Republic city and one was reported shot as he tried to escape after landing.

The four-engined propeller-driven aircraft was hijacked over Ethiopia on a flight from the capital, Addis Ababa, to Djibouti with 27 passengers and five crew members aboard.

The Ethiopian news agency said one of the two hijackers was shot and wounded by Aden security men as he tried to flee the airport. The other man was also reported captured.

The hijackers were described as members of the Eritrean Liberation Front, an organization dedicated to seizing independence for the former Italian colony of Eritrea, ruled by Ethiopia since 1952.

Eritrea, a largely-Moslem region, was administered by Britain after the defeat of Italy in the Second World War and was handed by Christian Ethiopia by a United Nations General Assembly vote after the war.

The Ethiopian news agency said one of the hijackers was in the cockpit of the airliner when it landed. Passengers and crew were being questioned by Aden authorities, the agency said.

The front said in Damascus it was responsible for the hijacking and that the passengers' safety would be guaranteed.

A spokesman said the operation would not be the last in its effort to undermine the Ethiopian economy.

Arab Planes Hit Israel

CAIRO (Reuters) — Egyptian planes today attacked Israeli positions and installations on the eastern coast of the Gulf of Suez and South Sinai, a military spokesman said.

He said that all planes returned safely to base without being intercepted by Israeli aircraft.

Barbed Wire 'Belfast Wall' Divides Protestants, Catholics

BELFAST (CP) — After averting another clash between Roman Catholics and Protestants, British troops worked today to complete the "Belfast Wall," a steel and barbed wire fence designed to separate the neighborhoods of the two groups.

The British hope the fence will persuade both Roman Catholics and Protestants to dismantle the barricades they erected after last month's rioting.

The Catholic Civil Defence Committee of "Free Belfast" meets tonight to decide whether the barriers should come down.

Informants said the barriers probably would be removed after a face-saving agreement with the army that would allow leaders of the enclave to take them down voluntarily.

Details of the agreement were said to have been worked out by a "Free Belfast" delegation that met with British Home Secretary James Callaghan in London Friday.

An army spokesman said trouble between the two groups Friday night began when a crowd of Protestants approached British troops and "bashed and banged the roofs and windows" of trucks they were driving. He added: "The soldiers inside decided caution was the better part of valor and moved away."

But the crowd then advanced on a Roman Catholic bar in a predominantly Protestant neighborhood, smashed in the door, broke all the windows and threw two gasoline bombs inside.

Roman Catholics began gathering to retaliate, and more Protestants began streaming into the area. Finally, the army spokesman said, British troops arrived and the crowds dispersed.

Bernadette Fails to Raise Million

NEW YORK (AP) — Bernadette Devlin, fire-brand member of the British Parliament, collected more than $80,000 in her campaign for $1,000,000 in behalf of Northern Ireland Roman Catholics, a campaign spokesman said Friday.

Brian Heron, national co-ordinator of the National Association for Irish Justice, said at least $91,485 was collected, but he had no knowledge of any amounts collected by other organizations sympathetic to the civil rights cause of the Catholic minority or funds persons may have sent to the Civil Rights Association of Ireland.

Heron said the visit of the 22-year-old member of the House of Commons received "millions of dollars" worth of publicity.

Steam Train Draws Crowd

Hundreds of people turned up this morning to take advantage of the historic train trip from Belleville to Anson Junction on what could be one of the last trips in Eastern Canada by a steam engine.

Children in particular thrilled to the blasing and clanging, the historic sounds of the once-modern locomotive, sounds that they would never hear save for this weekend's trips.

The United Community Services is sponsoring eight such steam locomotive trips, four today and four on Sunday, as the first event in a week of festivities serving as pre-United Appeal Campaign events.

Due to expensive repairs the old locomotive may be forced into the rusty boredom of retirement after this weekend.

It left Belleville this morning at 10 a.m. on its first half-hour trip to Anson Junction. A second journey took place later this morning and two more were planned for this afternoon.

Sunday's schedule is the same with two morning trips and two afternoon trips.

Ticket sales soared at the last minute for Saturday's steam trips, but Sunday's tickets are still available, Kenneth Fleming, public relations chairman for the appeal, said this morning.

The old locomotive will pull its cars from out of history as well. Not one modern car is being used for the journey. The United Appeal's short migration into the past is as authentic as it can be.

Engineer Lyle Langabeer is also finding it an adventure. A diesel engineer, he has found that his occupation takes him into the past and the future.

Mr. Langabeer was the engineer on the 10 a.m. trip, and also had the distinction of being the engineer on the turbo train's run through Belleville some months ago.

Still Smoking and Steaming

The United Community Services' steam train sits by the CNR station from which it left this morning at 10 a.m. On board were hundreds of people waiting to take a trip from Belleville to Anson Junction on the steam train before it retired.

Picton Jail Prisoners Hold Guards Captive

As inspector from the department of correctional services was enroute here today to probe circumstances surrounding an altercation at Prince Edward County jail last night in which two guards were overpowered.

Police and jail authorities refused details on the incident today.

Prisoners were reported to have held the guards captive for almost two hours. Jail governor George Swoffer talked them into releasing the men.

Town police were called to the jail and surrounded the building but did not enter.

Today police and the governor refused to comment on the incident.

About 15 prisoners were in the jail at the time of the outbreak.

How many inmates were involved in the fracas was not known.

All authorities have persistently maintained silence on the affray.

There was no official confirmation on the incident either last night or today.

Town police and the county OPP detachment referred all inquiries to the jail.

However, the governor said an inspector from the department was on his way from Toronto today to investigate the incident.

He said he would have nothing to say until the department official had scrutinized the affair.

The county jail here is one of the oldest in Ontario.

Brigadier H.L. Sharp SA Head

Brigadier Harold L. Sharp has been appointed divisional commander for the Salvation Army's Mid-Ontario Division, with headquarters in Belleville.

He succeeds Lt. Col. Wilfred Hawken, who retired earlier this year.

After graduating from the International Training College in London, England, Brigadier Sharp spent many years as a Corps officer in cities from Brandon, Man., to Halifax, N.S. In 1964, he was appointed training principal of the Salvation Army College, St. John's, Newfoundland. For the past two years he has served on the divisional staff in London, Ont., and in Toronto.

Brigadier and Mrs. Sharp have two children. Lieut. Glen Sharp, 1969 serving on the Canadian Evangelistic Team, and Sandra (Mrs. G. E. Dale) in Toronto.

As director of divisional women's services, Mrs. Sharp is actively engaged with the Army's women's organizations in the area.

Boy Drowns At Trenton

TRENTON — The drowning of an eight-year-old boy who fell 20 feet to the Trent River here went unreported for three hours after the incident frightened his younger brother and a playmate.

James Anderson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Anderson, 86 Stanley Street, was hunting pigeons beneath the new James MacDonald Bridge when the fatal accident occurred.

With him were his six-year-old brother Kenneth and a friend, Randy Benford, nine.

Police say the boy was crawling along a girder under the span to a pigeon's nest when he lost his hold and dropped to the river 30 feet below.

The two other boys — apparently frightened by the experience — returned to their homes and went to bed without telling anyone of the incident, say police.

The drowning came to light three hours later when Mrs. Anderson, disturbed at her older son's failure to return home, questioned both boys.

The body was recovered by searchers dragging the river below the bridge about 1 a.m. today.

A Father's Fish

Like any young offspring, 18-months-old Lynn Ann Malcolm of Belleville is proud of her dad — Jim Malcolm — and his accomplishments. Today she's prouder than ever, after he showed her latest achievement — catch of 12-pound pickerel in Quinte north.

IN MEMORIAM

CARROL — In loving memory of a dear son, Larry, who passed away Sept. 13th, 1967.
In my heart's memory,
Lonely is my heart today.
For he was my loving Larry,
But forever was called away.
Still I hear his voice calling,
To cry may no tears be shed.
Wish those dear tears are shed.
When alone I pray.
—Sadly missed and always remembered by Mom.

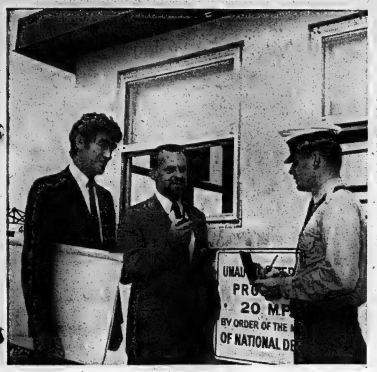
FREEMAN — In loving memory of a dear wife Evelyn Corday, Peace Valley, Fraser who passed away September 13th, 1965.
Deep in memory's picture,
No artist can paint with skill,
The love that we have for mother,
That memory will keep it still.
—Ever remembered by husband Charles Nelson Freeman.

HUNTER — In loving memory of a dear husband and father William Earl (Curly) who passed away Sept. 13th, 1967.
We did not kissed a special day,
To bring you to our mind,
For the days we do not think of you,
Are very hard to find.
If all this world was ours to give,
We'd give it, yes, and more,
To see the face of a loved one,
Come walking through the door.
—Sadly remembered by wife Ora and son Steven.

HOLLEY — In memory of a dear mother, Sarah Holley, who passed away September 13th, 1967.
—Always and lovingly remembered by son Sidney, daughter Hazel Lynch, brothers Wayne, Glenn and Sandy.

BIRTHS

STINSON — Mr. and Mrs. Paul Stinson are pleased to announce the birth of their daughter Faith on Thursday, September 11th at Belleville General Hospital. A brother for Angela. Special thanks to Dr. Pearce.



CARDS OF THANKS

I would like to thank the neighbors of the 2nd line for their gift of a beautiful clock and everyone else for cards and flowers and especially the nurses who visited me while in Kingston General Hospital. Also thanks to Rev. Ross for special comforting words and prayers.
—Claude W. Clarke,
R. R. 4, Belleville.

The family of the late Mrs. John Wrass wish to kindly express for their appreciation of kindness for their appreciation; also to those who gave flowers and to those who gave donations to the Cancer Fund and Gideon Bible Society.

DEATHS

ANDERSON — Suddenly at a resident of 86 Stanley Street, Trenton, on Friday, September 12th, James Edward Anderson, beloved son of Mr. and Mrs. George Anderson, and brother of Kenneth, Randy Benford, Trenton. Dear brother of Ann, Lynn and Sandra Kelly, Trenton. Dear brother of Ann, Lynn and Sandra Kelly, Trenton. Dear brother of Ann, Lynn and Sandra Kelly

Check and Double Check

Security surrounding the model of the RCAF Memorial to be built at Trenton requires even architect Victor Prus and artist-designer Frank Johnson of Picton be checked by Cpl. Fred Denison of the base security police.

Bus Gets Students Past Menacing Bears

Parents in the Whitney area, on the eastern boundary of Algonquin Park, recently asked for, and got, a special bus to transport their children over a 17½-mile route to their separate school in Whitney.

No school board in the province puts a bus on a 17½-mile route, but the Hastings and Prince Edward separate school board bowed to the parent's request in this case.

Their reason -- the eight pupils living along the route were being molested by bears during their walk to school.

The road the children must take to school passes a one-half mile stretch of bush adjacent to the park, where bears have been a menace all summer.

Ever since tourist operations in the park began, bears have been attracted from their haunts in the bush to the populated areas around park garbage dumps.

The unpredictable animals have become such a menace to campers and permanent residents of the area that park officials have been asked this year to find a new method of garbage disposal to discourage raiding by bears. A sanitary land fill operation, with the garbage bulldozed under the ground, was one suggestion made.

In the meantime, the Whitney school children will be safely bused past the hazard.

Procedures at Y Surveyed

The Belleville Family YMCA's administrative procedures are to be updated, it was announced yesterday.

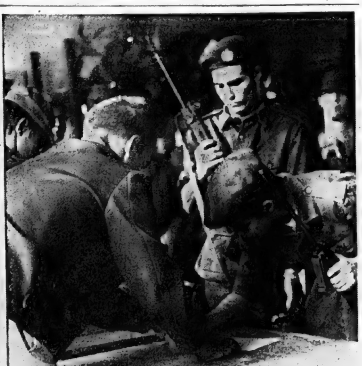
At a board meeting early in the year it was decided to revise the membership and financial recording procedures and general administration proceedings now in effect at the local YMCA, and try to streamline them where possible.

At the invitation of the board of directors, John Pollock, business administrator and Robert Smith, associations consultant spent three days in Belleville. Both are on the staff of the National Council of YMCAs in Toronto.

Mr. Pollock and Mr. Smith are doing similar surveys of administrative systems in other Canadian YMCAs and it was for this reason they were asked to come to Belleville.

They met with the auditor, insurance agent and members of the executive committee of the "Y" as well as the president and treasurer of the community fund.

Their recommendations and suggestions for improvement in the business proceedings will be presented to the board of directors at the end of the month.



Board Hiring Personnel Officer

Hastings county board of education will soon advertise for a personnel officer to join the administrative staff at the board offices.

He will be in charge of wages, payroll, records, the filing system and procedures, all under the business administration section of the administrative system.

One reason for the hiring of the new official, according to board chairman James Clarke, is the recent certification of school caretakers as a local of the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

"The increased work load this and negotiations with teachers' federations, will incurr, makes a full-time man on this aspect of operation a necessity," said the chairman.

Weapons Issue

The spring into fall training for the members of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment is a weekend exercise in basic infantry skills, called, logically, Exercise Spring Board. Aiming towards a trained rifle company by next summer, officers issued weapons to other ranks at the armory this morning before the unit pulled out.

Unveiling Sept. 28

Model of RCAF Memorial Under Wraps

By DONALD M. SOUTTER

Security is commonplace at a military base but at Canadian Forces Base Trenton it has taken on an added twist.

For, locked in a room and under 24-hour guard is a four-foot square architect's model. It is so closely guarded that even the architect has to identify himself when he wishes to enter and must be accompanied by a senior officer of the security force.

Focus of the attention is the winning design by Montreal architect Victor Prus of the $3 million Memorial which is to be built on 10 acres of land next to Canada's largest air force establishment. The model will be unveiled Sept. 28 in Trenton during Battle of Britain Sunday ceremonies by defence minister Leo Cadieux.

Prus was a fitting winner of the contest which drew enquiries from 3,000 architects, for he is a former RAF pilot.

"I had an advantage the others didn't have," Mr. Prus says, although it was one that was not known to the judges who picked his concept out of the 99 architects who submitted working sketches in the contest.

The judges, Brigadier General David Adamson, Prof. Charles Moore of Yale and Charles Elliott Trudeau, brother of the Prime Minister, did not know the names of the architects involved in the competition which was run with the co-operation of the Royal Architectural Institute of Canada. Dr. E. R. Arthur of Toronto was the professional advisor.

Mr. Prus, a quiet, retiring individual as a rule, lights up when he talks about his design.

"It developed as a result of my experience as a pilot," he explained. "The experience of flight itself is an emotional thing. It is a metaphysical experience and proved to be my inspiration.

"The basic concept is built around this idea and as a result the flight is more important than the dynamics of the building. I was able to incorporate this because the sky means something different to me than to others."

The feeling of space is built in to both the exterior of the building and the inside. The building itself "acts as a foil" to emphasize the horizons.

There are no interior doors and "the lack of doors" he says lies in the articulation of the building make it feasible that one area flows into another," said Mr. Prus.

Rules of the competition gave architects a complete freedom of choice and enabled them to design not only the building but the landscaping of the 40-acre site itself.

"This was important to me," said Mr. Prus.. "for in recapturing the emotion of space that is understood by fliers, the driveway lines up with the core of the building so that it flows from the entrance into a central outburst."

Although the architect had a freedom of design, he did have to include the mandatory areas in the building. These were the Memorial Hall, which according to the competition rules "must dominate the memorial complex both physically and spiritually"; a non-denominational chapel seating 100 and two smaller 75-seat chapels; a community activities area, flexible enough to double as a convention centre to serve 400 and a Hall of History designed to display the history of Canadian air achievement, yet modern enough that "by use of computers visitors will be able to experience a visual and aural 'read out' of historic speeches, aircraft and other pertinent data."

"It was a long and agonizing gestation period before I had my concept firmly fixed in my mind," said Mr. Prus. "I never put pencil to paper until it is as complete as possible in my head.

"For months I developed an intensity of feeling. You become something like a walking computer as you file away all sorts of impressions. You don't know where they come from.

"Then, I awakened one morning and there it was. It is hard to explain the agony of this period but the sense of exaltation makes up for it."

It was this feeling for space that attracted Mr. Prus to the air force after he was wounded in desert fighting in Africa during the early stages of the last war.

After escaping from his native Poland via Yugoslavia and Greece he joined the British Mideast Forces and as an artillery observer fought at the siege of Tobruk.

During a Stuka dive bomber attack in 1942 he was wounded and still carries a piece of shrapnel in his body.

"It was too close to my heart to be removed," he said "so I still have it.

"In hospital I learned that if I crouched slightly when they were taking X-rays the shrapnel was not noticed so I made my way to England and enlisted in the air force."

Trained as a pilot, Mr. Prus then was attached to the 2nd Tactical Air Force, and flying mosquitoes, provided support for ground movements through France, Belgium and Holland.

This was an emotional time," said Mr. Prus, "and when we lost someone from our squadron we would drop a rose into the sea as a gesture."

This bit of admitted sentimentality has found its way into Mr. Prus' building design, for included is a rose garden as a gesture of respect for now-dead air force personnel.

This sentimentality will be recaptured on Sept. 28 when a 12 foot by 12 foot mock up of Mr. Prus' winning design will be unveiled at Trenton during the Battle of Britain Sunday ceremonies.

The close association of the memorial to the annual day of remembrance will be carried out throughout the building project. The cornerstone of the building will be officially laid on Battle of Britain Sunday in 1970 and the building will be officially opened on the same Sunday in 1971.

Fund raising for the project is entirely voluntary with support being sought from air-minded Canadians. The Royal Canadian Air Force Association and the Air Cadet League are sponsors along with the air element personnel of the Canadian Forces. Support is also being given by the Women of the RCAF.

Grader Works at Site of Proposed Building

Fry Park Is Complimented

Belleville's Park's Board has received an enthusiastic pat on the back from a tourist who visited here this summer.

The Chamber of Commerce and Kiwanis Club recently received a letter from Mrs. James W. Turner, thanking all responsible for Fry Park on the Cannifton Road. The Turner family visited the park during a camping trip from Cape Cod, across the eastern seaboard states, and through Quebec and Ontario.

"Of all the camping grounds and picnic areas we stopped at, I can say without any doubt your Fry picnic area was by far the prettiest, cleanest and greenest and the best kept spot we hit," she wrote.

"It is certainly a credit to your city," Mrs. Turner continued, "And I couldn't help but write and congratulate all those who are responsible for it."

Mrs. Turner said she and her family had enjoyed the park "immensely" and was sure many others felt the same way, but "have not the time to write and let you know."

Model Aircraft In the Air

Scores of planes will take to the air at Mountain View tomorrow — but there won't be a fleet in sight.

At least not in the aircraft. The event is a championship meet for model aircraft enthusiasts in Eastern Ontario.

Organized by the Montreal Flying Club, the event will be staged at Mountain View airport from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Museum Workshop In October

This year the annual Museum Section Workshop of the Ontario Historical Society is being hosted by the Hastings County Museum and the Hastings County Historical Society. It will take place on October 16, 17 and 18 in Belleville. Plans have been underway since early spring and coming in fruition with the promise of an active and informative session.

This year the theme is the means and methods of communication, advertising and public relations to see how these elements and their principals can be applied to museums for the greatest effect for the least expense. There will be days and receptions as well as the usual annual banquet.

Hasty Pees Start Fall Training Plan

The Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment began a new year of activity this morning, as about 150 Hasty Pees gathered in the armories to prepare for a two-day training exercise.

The exercise, basing today and tomorrow, is called Exercise Spring Board and its aim is to provide practice for the recruits in basic infantry skills — establishing a camp and defensive area, patrolling and the company assault.

And in the spirit of a new year of activity, the exercise will be new, the tasks varied and the "enemy" determined.

This year could prove to be a busy one as far as upcoming training weekends are concerned.

Already weekends offering various facets of training skills are slated for Oct. 4 and 5, Nov. 8 and 9, and Dec. 13 and 14.

The Hasty Pee recruits left this morning fully prepared for a weekend of the roughest activity.

In other regimental activity, Lt. Col. F. R. Allan, commanding officer of the Hasty Pees, has initiated a drive to bring in recruits.

Target for the drive is 50 persons from North of Belleville, 25 from Trenton, 25 from Picton and 50 from Belleville itself.

Then and Now

Canada's famed Group of Seven, now further depleted by the death at 88 of Frederick Horsman Varley, depicted the world of barren rock and bush and expansive silence that most of us glimpse only infrequently in the course of a lifetime.

Theirs was the Canada of an earlier day, before the mass intrusion of cars, before industrial pollution laid waste the pure waters of rivers and lakes, and before the growth of a materialist economy chained men to the pursuit of wealth and power. .

Theirs was the great outdoors and away-from-it-all realm that is still there although now threatened by the encroachment of man, to the point where even some of Algonquin Park's waters are polluted and there is a possibility the waters of the Arctic one day may suffer a similar fate.

If this trend continues there is no knowing where it will take us in terms of lost resources, ravaged landscapes and a despoiled, once-proud land. Perhaps all that will be left when pollution has run its full course will be a pale replica of what went before — and an canvas the impressions of an earlier, purer time.

Wedding Bells

The attractive young women from the Philippines who as nurses help minister to the sick in our hospitals are becoming increasingly absorbed into Canadian society through marriage.

There have been a number of ceremonies of late involving Filipino brides. In one Mayor William Dennison of Toronto gave Maria Rosario Tan in marriage to Victor John Bishop.

The mayor agreed to act as a stand-in father following an appeal by the bride to his office. Miss Tan wrote that she had no family in Canada and her parents were unable to come from the Philippines for the wedding.

This was a gracious gesture on the part of Mayor Dennison and one which puts a personal seal on Canada's growing cosmopolitanism and extends a welcoming hand to people from many lands.

In another recent ceremony, this time in Brockville, Linda Emperador of the Philippines became the bride of Geoffrey Gordon of Brockville, and in Cornwall recently a Filipino bride and a young man from her homeland were united in marriage.

The nursing profession, incidentally, is one which increasingly lends itself to movement from one country to another. Like the Filipinos, the far-flung Australians are to be found everywhere. The Owen Sound Sun-Times for example reports the recent arrival of a number of nurses from Australia by way of England, as well as one from India.

They are welcome additions to Canadian society and to the nursing profession in this country.

Cities on March

A favorite means of indicating a city's growth is by photographic comparison. The Ottawa Journal presented two pictures "before and after" shots of the capital recently.

The tall office buildings and high-rise apartments were impressive testimony to the city's expansion. It is the same with Toronto as a Globe and Mail picture illustrated the other day.

About 50 years ago, the newspaper pointed out, a vantage point of 15 stories was high enough to afford a panoramic view of the city. Today it is a different story.

Everywhere it is the same. Canada's major cities are booming. They have a sharper, cleaner look. They are the cities of the "now generation." They are more efficient, and the men and women who inhabit them better educated. All in all our cities are in the vanguard of a country progressing to new heights of achievement.

Repair Job

Wallbridge Road, now a much-travelled artery since the establishment of Loyalist College, is badly in need of repair. The road was never meant to bear such a sudden increase in traffic and gravel and potholes and dust, not to mention a detour where a bridge is being built make driving along it a nightmare. Nor is it any picnic for students on foot, subjected as they are to the not so tender mercies of the driving public. Something should be done about this route — and quickly.

Shades of Churchill

David Lewis' Crack About P.M. Was an Old One

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — No question of it, the best one-liner in all the 11,-083 pages of the word-by-word Hansard record of the now-recessed First Session of the Twenty Eighth Parliament belongs to Deputy NDP Leader, David Lewis of Toronto.

It was so good, so punch-packed to the point, it will not likely be even remotely approached for sheer verbal impact in the second half of the session opening in October.

Here is the instant replay of the scene.

A united opposition — one of the few times Conservatives, New Democrats and Creditistes have stood together — was roaring in protest against the government's iron-fisted use of Closure to ram through rules change.

The majority-secure government was snarling back in guilt-ridden defence.

Prime Minister Trudeau, casual and seeming uncaring about it all, was only taunting the furious opposition by his almost flippant cool.

When in icy fury, David Lewis, biting his words, and pinning the prime minister with an acid glare, cried:

"Th're but for the grace of Pierre Elliott Trudeau sits God"

The prime minister, his detached cool gone in a flash of anger, squirmed.

The opposition in-glee, pounded their desk-tops.

The government members howled in pained protest.

It was a great line — savored deliciously alike on the floor and in the galleries of the House — but alas, it was not David Lewis'.

It was Winston Churchill's. But the deputy NDP leader gave him no credit.

In fact, the way he phrased it, and then paused in appreciation of the acclaim of the Commons, he made it sound like "mind Lewis."

Funny thing about politicians — they sometimes forget they are not speaking in some sort of private club, and that if their words are things to remember, they will be spread across the nation in the press for all Canadians to read.

One parliamentarian who will never forget this hard fact of parliamentary life — and could sympathize with David Lewis' forgetting of it — is Conservative MP Robert Thompson.

Six years ago when he was Social Credit leader, he got tremendous publicity for a great line he used in calling for strong national leadership to cope with Canadian disunity and lack of national purpose.

"We need," he cried emotionally, "men with clean minds, great hearts . . . men whom the lust of office does not twist . . . men whom the spoils of power cannot buy . . . men who possess opinions and the will to express them . . . men who have honor and will not lie . . . tall men, sun - crowned, who live above the fog in public duty and in private thinking . . ."

Powerful words, and for them Mr. Thompson got great acclaim.

Then weeks later it was discovered they were not his words at all, but those of the Rev. Josiah Gilbert Holland who, a century ago, won even greater fame with his:

"Heaven is not reached by a single bound:
"But we build the ladder by which we rise . . .
"From the lowly earth to the vaulted skies:
"And we mount to its summit, round by round."

It did not take weeks for Mr. Lewis to be found out. Just days.

Former Conservative Prime Minister Diefenbaker, long a worshipper at the Churchill shrine, recalled having spoken, with Mr. Lewis' hearing, of Winnie's great crack about Sir Stafford Cripps — whom he sometimes called Sir Stifford Crapps — "There but for the grace of God goes God."

Mr. Lewis then had said "I will have to remember that."

He did, long after, in the Commons, but forgot the commonly accepted courtesy of giving credit for somebody else's inspiration.

Dief, who knew Churchill and loved him, and when he was a prime minister always visited him on trips to London to pay personal tribute, has a fine file of some of Winnie's more acid quotes.

Item: When Prime Minister Attlee found it impossible to visit Australia, Churchill leader of the opposition, asked: "Is the Right Honorable gentleman afraid that while the mouse is away the cats might play?"

Item: Calling Mr. Attlee "a sheep in sheep's clothing."

Item: Listening to a speech by an MP named Bowman, Churchill had grumped: "Bosom! It is neither one thing nor the other."

And of course that memorable remark when "Sir Stifford Crappa" left the room: "There but for the grace of God goes God."

Though Peterborough's Mall Failed

Public Is Responsive to Efforts at Improvement

Peterborough Examiner

Even before the curtain rose on Peterborough's experimental shopping mall there were doubts.

Now that the production has ended, reports from its multiple box offices, the downtown stores, indicate that it was something of a flop.

Actually, the similarities between modern merchandising and show business are many. One aspect of the affluent society is that we tend to spend our discretionary dollars in a spirit of fun, and we prefer an almost carnival-like environment for this game. Discretionary dollars are those that are left over from our income after fixed expenses for necessities are met.

There is no question that Peterborough's merchants, on the whole, offer quality goods, value and service. At the same time, the city's centre is still suffering a bad case of urban blight. It was felt treatment of this malady that the mall was prescribed.

The treatment failed, but as its promoters pointed out, it was experimental from the first.

The fact remains, however, that something is still required to revitalize the downtown area. The failure of the mall doesn't erase the original problem.

Perhaps the mall failed through timidity. Aside from providing shoppers a certain amount of freedom from danger of being run over, plus the occasional park bench to sit on, there really wasn't much else to it.

The occasional sidewalk cafe, awnings, strolling entertainers (doesn't every single student play the guitar these days?), clowns, refreshment booths, permanent exhibitions and displays could all have made the mall a more lively experience.

So it might have been more successful if there had been more to it, but then again it might just have been a bad idea altogether.

The point is, however, that the mall's failure must not be the end of promotions for the down town area.

It is simply not sufficient in this day and age to operate a plain, honest store. Whether it is right or wrong, reasonable or foolish, the public likes to be titillated and entertained while it is playing the shopping game.

The only other alternative to revitalization of the downtown area is surgery. The entire central core could be bulldozed out of existence, covered with fresh soil and turned into a park, with commerce taking place around the perimeter, but this hardly seems to be the most efficient way of dealing with the problem.

Action then, is still necessary, either a bigger and better mall or something else entirely. Urban blight won't cure itself; it will spread.

Lampreys Under Control

Windsor Star

A concerted program to control the sea lamprey has turned the tide against the parasite's invasion of the Great Lakes. But the battle is not yet won, and must be continued in full force.

When lampreys made their way into the lakes after World War Two, little was known about their habits, and they made a devastating attack on the fresh-water fish native to the lakes before any control measures were possible.

Lamprey control programs, an excellent example of co-operation between Canada and the United States, began to be effective only after most of the valuable varieties of fresh-water fish in Lake Erie has been all but wiped out. The lamprey menace was spreading into Lake Huron, but it has since been reduced there.

Control of the parasite, if not its eventual elimination from the Great Lakes, is now possible, depending only on the continuation or expansion of present programs. That, in turn, depends on continued financial support from government. There should be no suggestion of halting, or reducing, the lamprey control program now that success is in sight.

Two Cents Per Capita for Biafra

Churches Active But Public Is Indifferent

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Your editorial of September 2 on church involvement in Biafra again emphasizes the depressingly amoral attitude of Canadians toward massive human suffering.

The churches have not ignored the horrific facts of Nigeria-Biafra where starvation is a tool of war. Acting on humanitarian principles, they have been instrumental in alleviating some of the pain of this war. In this way, they are becoming meaningful institutions, relating to our times.

Their financial and moral commitment to Canairelief has sustained this relief efforts for nine months, enabling it to carry in, to date, over 4,500 tons of food and medicine.

Ironically, it is now the churches that are becoming effective while Canadians sit by passively and indifferently. As Stanley Burke pointed out, Canadians have contributed ten cents per person — a significant indication of our desire to care.

Further, your editorial stated: "The Biafran situation may not have any great bearing on the international situation." But people are politics.

If homage is paid continually to Nigerian claims of total sovereignty, if Governments refuse to act because of this premise, if Canadians only turn their eyes, we will again be faced with the guilt of a Buchenwald.

PAULINE JANITCH,
Information Officer Canairelief

Editor's Note: With reference to the second last paragraph of the above letter, the passage from our editorial in its entirety read. "The Biafran situation may not have any great bearing on the international situation, but it does have much to do with human suffering. In Vietnam people at least seem to have enough to eat and so in West Africa, where the war has brought all semblance of social order to a standstill, and with it the terrible spectre of starvation."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Sept. 13, 1969 . . .

Gen. James Wolfe was killed 210 years ago today — in 1759 — and his opponent the Marquis de Montcalm was mortally wounded at the Battle of the Plains of Abraham. During the battle the British, led by Gen. Wolfe, stormed the heights to capture Quebec and give Britain supremacy in North America. Montcalm died the following day. In 1827 a monument to the joint honor of the two generals was erected in Quebec.

1788—Constitutional Convention authorized first United States election.

A "pay-as-you-go" policy will be followed as far as practicable in financing Canada's war costs. Revenue Minister Ilsley told the House of Commons today when he presented the war budget. He said the government would insist on the principle of equality of sacrifice on the basis of the ability to pay, believing every citizen should be ready to share the cost of war.

Frances Hendy has returned to her home in Campbellford after spending the past week as guest of Patricia Rennick.

September 13, 1929

Ald. George A. Reid received a telegram from Premier W. H. Ireland, MPP informing him that the Ontario Government will take over the Bay Bridge as of Jan. 1. Belleville is to pay the indebtedness up to that time, but is relieved of any cost, either building or maintenance. The whole work on the bridge is expected to cost about $70,000, of which Belleville's share was approximately $70,000. The decision of the Government means that Belleville has been relieved of about $50,000 of the cost.

Portable School Historic Step

TORONTO (CP) — A new wing at a Scarborough, Ont., public school is "the first fully open building system ever done," says one of its planners, Roderick Robbie.

All the parts are interchangeable. Everything—from the outside walls to the plumbing, wiring, light and sound systems—can be moved and rearranged.

The wing, which Mr. Robbie calls "a historical monument," is a test project in the Toronto school board's search for ways to build better schools. If it succeeds, Mr. Robbie says he will recommend that the board award $32,000,000 worth of new school construction to the 19 contractors who built it.

He says these "portable" schools cost 20 per cent less to build than conventional ones, take two-thirds the time and are one-third more efficient. All will be air-conditioned and carpeted, so they can be used all year, and as substitutes for community centres.

"It should help us teach more effectively," says Margaret Mee, a teacher at the Scarborough school.

"It's bright with lots of wall space, and even though we've got three classes in one open space area the sound is surprisingly low."

The classrooms for 200 children even have white blackboards to eliminate glare.

"As soon as I get some colored chalk it will be perfect."

Homeless Children Sleep Under Streets

TORONTO (CP) — Being a missionary often requires straying from the beaten path.

Rev. Joseph M. Doherty, a Roman Catholic priest originally from Bath, N.B., went to Chile in 1943 as a teacher and parish worker. But he found himself the owner and operator of a trucking company, whose profits now go to finance an orphanage.

"Today's missionary must be a resourceful person who helps people to help themselves," he said on a recent visit to Toronto.

The orphanage, in the village of Talegante 25 miles west of the capital city of Santiago, began in 1955 as a small nursery. It now houses 100 children, ranging in age from two to 18.

Father Doherty estimates that in Santiago there are more than 5,000 homeless children living either on—or under—the streets.

"They exist like small, strange little animals," he said. "The electric companies place their transformers underground and they give off heat, so the children move in and make their 'homes' there.

"Sometimes they sing for pennies on the streets and public buses; often they beg, but mostly they steal."

At first he found opposition within his order to his unconventional role, but has expanded his organization, thanks to a donation of five trucks by a Canadian company. He was in Toronto to present the head of that company with a medal on behalf of the Chilean government.

His trucking company has a contract to deliver oil to a government refinery. Besides an administrative staff, it employs nine drivers and makes "about $10,000 a month." the profits going to the orphanage.

He praised the Chilean government for bringing in social reforms and said he was also impressed with the work of Fidel Castro's government, particularly in education and social services in Cuba.

"The churches, both Protestant and Catholic, still exercise a great deal of influence in Chile," he said, adding that the Roman Catholic Church in particular has won respect by divesting itself of almost all its Chilean land holdings and adopting a liberal attitude towards social change.

Spare the Strap... Use Time-out Booth, Psychiatrist Urges

VICTORIA (CP) — Dr. Phillip Ney, a Victoria child psychiatrist, hopes to eliminate use of the strap by introducing a "time-out booth" in a school research study with emotionally disturbed children.

The isolation booth is a feature of the $16,000 research program approved here recently for McTavish elementary school by the Saanich school board.

Dr. Ney, 33, said the time-out booth is only a minor aspect of his program and would be used only when a disturbed child attacked another pupil or the teacher. He feels that isolating a child is better than strapping him.

"Research has shown that physical punishment, one of all the various kinds of punishment, is probably the least effective. Not only that, it stimulates aggression in children and it teaches them that the way to solve interpersonal difficulties is through violence."

"Time-out is used every day in life, and on people of all ages. When you send a child to his room, that's time-out. When you ground a teen-ager, that's time-out.

"And when an adult has his driver's licence suspended for traffic infractions, that's time-out."

A staff of five will work with an estimated eight to 10 disturbed children at McTavish school, he said. There will be the regular teacher, Dr. Ney working part-time, a part-time social worker, an observer and Vancouver psychologist Paul Nelson.

HAIR-FASHIONED

"Beauty created by love never dies." — Phyllis Buchanan.

* * *

In the gracious livingroom of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Burr, 358 Bridge Street, East, hangs a nearly square (26" x 25") picture-frame, displaying within its white-painted five-inch depth, a wreath, (15" in diameter) of garden-flowers — created entirely from blonde, gray, brown and black hair.

Scattered about the wreaths centre are four little life-like beetle insects composed of raisin bodies and clove spice-sticks for tiny feet.

This rare example of a forgotten craft is over a century old and was designed and created says Mrs. Burr, "by my grandmother, who before her marriage to my grandfather, George L. Werden of Cherry Valley, was Miss Jemima Platt, who in the 1850's attended the Quaker "Friends Boarding School," a co-educational school at Bloomfield."

Here, it was, pupils were taught among other subjects, the art of hair-craft in which Jemima Platt, noted for her artistic ability and talent, excelled.

"The flowers she represents are those of a pioneer's garden: June and Moss roses; trillium, lilies, everlasting flowers softened by grasses such as timothy. Such were lovers-ties with her and the hair used was that of close members of her family," says Mrs. Burr, pointing out how the strand of hair is wrapped around fine, fine wire and twisted into lacy designs, used to form, outline or fill-in petals, leaves, stems, etc."

"What about the origin and history of this fascinating craft?" we asked.

"To obtain really definite information seems difficult. I am told it is quite certain that the art is English in origin.

Hair combined with gems for rings, bracelets, ear rings and brooches were much sought after, along with hair and portraits: and art, and flourished in 17th century France.

"But hair as a keepsake was worked both ornamentally or not. I have been told of one collector in England of such pieces who has a small oval slide or locket with a design of a crown in gold and diamonds, which contains a lock of Queen Mary's hair, who was wife of King William.

"Also a circlet of Lord Nelson's hair which is held in a gold brooch decorated with diamonds and Oriental pearls, is said to have belonged to Lady Hamilton. There is also a rather severe, plain, unornamented silver locket in which a lock of hair of Robert Browning, the poet is kept, inscribed with his name and the date 12-12-1889. And she added, "a ring, with a small plait of hair had an inscription which read, '6th March 1770, Remember your friend.'

Pieces of hair jewelery such as brooches, and a locket containing a bright curl of a child's hair are in the possession of Mrs. Burr's family, she concludes:

"As I look at this work of my grandmother's, the more I prize it, as its fortunate heir, bearing witness as it does that it and her like it was created by love, and how favored, how lucky, indeed, are the ones who have been so much loved."

It is a pleasure to announce (since time of writing) that it is possible for the public to see the hair wreath at the Hastings County Museum. 240 Church Street where it is currently on display until Sept. 30. WEDDINGS

LUMSDEN — BRADLEY

Rev. W. M. Sedgwick officiated at the wedding ceremony in the United Church at Queensboro recently at 3 p.m. when Frances Catharine Bradley, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Willsten Bradley of Tweed was united in marriage to Robert Everard Lumsden, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lumsden of Marmora.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Jack Bradley of Toronto. Mrs. Doris Smith, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Mr. Michael Smith was the best man.

A reception and dinner was held at the Tweedsmuir Hotel in Tweed.

FAZACKERLEY — WEBER

TWEED — A double-ring ceremony was performed in St. Killan's Roman Catholic Church in Ardoch recently, when Carol Ann Weber, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Weber, became the bride of Robert Edward Fazackerley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fazackerley of Sharbot Lake. Rev. Father Murphy officiated at the Nuptial Mass and the wedding music was played by Mrs. William Gore. Dean Manion and Gary Weber, brother of the bride, were ushers for the nuptials.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a floor length gown of peau de soie and lace. Her headdress, a cluster of satin orphanouis was caught by a fingertip veil. She carried a bouquet of pink and white carnations mingled with ivy.

Miss Brenda Hicks of Metcalfe as maid of honor and the bridesmaids Miss Connie Robertson of Oshawa and Miss Diane Weber, sister of the bride were identical floor-length gowns of aqua chiffon over taffeta with matching wide brimmed hats.

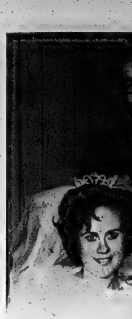
Miss Robin Weiss, flower girl, wore a floor-length pink gown of dotted Swiss and a head band of pink carnations. They all carried bouquets of pink carnations.

Bill Burns of Watertown was best man and the guests were ushered by Mr. Rudy Hollyrood of Ottawa and Mr. Ken Weber, brother of the bride.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Weber wore a blue dress of lace over taffeta with white accessories. The bridegroom's mother chose a cranberry ensemble of crimplene with matching accessories.

Following the dinner at Plevna Community Hall, a reception was held at the home of the bride.

For travelling to Cape Cod, the bride chose a light green brocade ensemble with white accessories.



Mr. and Mrs. Fazackerley will reside in Guelph.

Sons Plan Surprise For Parents

DESERONTO — Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gray of Maple Ave. were pleasantly surprised Saturday evening, when returning from a full day in Brockville, they found that their house was filled with 32 of their closest relatives. All came to celebrate their 25th wedding anniversary which came the following Tuesday.

The event was organized by their two sons, Bill and Gordon. Their aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. McMaster of Hamilton, co-operated by taking Mr. and Mrs. Gray to Brockville on an alleged business trip.

The boys made all the preparations of food themselves and planned all the gift presentations.

MR. AND MRS. ROGER EUGENE PRESTON

Preston — Urch

St. Mark's United Church, Cannifton was the scene of the recent wedding of Sharron Urch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Urch, Port Hope, and Roger Eugene Preston, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Preston, Wellington. Rev. J. W. Hobbs officiated at the wedding. The organist was Mrs. Olive Farnham and the soloist was Miss Diane Dreden.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length gown of white embroidered satin styled with bell skirt and bell sleeves She wore a tiara headpiece of pearl and rhinestone with a five-tiered veil of shoulder length nylon tulle. Her bouquet of yellow roses was surrounded with a mixture of white flowers.

The maid of honor was Miss Linda Morton. She wore a mauve brocade street-length dress styled similarly to the bride's, a deep mauve velvet bow in the hair and lace gloves. Her bouquet was of yellow daisies. The brides maids were Miss Janet Urch and Mrs. Dolores McCormack. They were dressed in gold in the same style as the maid of honor, wearing gold hair bows and carrying yellow daisies. The flower girl was Miss Deborah MacDonald dressed in white embroidered satin trimmed with mauve velvet and carrying a basket mixed with mauve, yellow and white daisies

The best man was Barry Hubble and the ushers were Wayne Carley and Dennis Preston, cousins of the bride groom.

The reception was held at St. Mark's United Church where the mother of the bride greeted the guests in a two piece crimpolene suit of deep coral beige. She wore a brown feather hat, beige gloves, brown shoes and bag with a corsage of white carnations. The bridegroom's mother wore a powder blue wool A-line dress, a feather hat, black accessories and a corsage of pink carnations.

For the wedding trip to points north and south the bride changed into a yellow forterl A-line dress with bell sleeves trimmed with lace and black accessories

The couple will reside at 204B N. Front St., Belleville.

The September meeting of the Board of Victorian Order of Nurses was held recently at the YMCA.

Several important items were discussed and carried over for further attention.

The nurse in charge, Miss Norma Gusdal, Reg. N. reported that the local VON nurses had had a busy summer with 514 visits being made during June, 456 during July and 370 during August making a total of 3,097 for 1969 to the end of August. This is an increase of 30 per cent over 1968.

Miss Gusdal has had the assistance of Miss Joan Dacey, Reg. N. during the past two weeks studying VON methods prior to attending Queen's University.

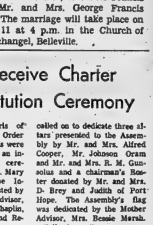
Church Groups

CHRIST CHURCH ACW EVENING BRANCH

The first meeting of the fall season of the Evening Branch of Christ Church was held September 8 at 8 p.m. in the Parish Hall with a good attendance. The president opened the meeting.

The minutes were read by the secretary, Mrs. Earl Mossman followed by the treasurer's report given by Mrs. P. Burton. Reports were also given by the social secretary, Mrs. D. Green and the sunshine fund secretary, Mrs. Frances Reid. Mrs. Kilburn read a letter from the auxiliary regarding the bazaar and tea to be held later this year at Hastings Manor in which the group will participate.

Business and plans for the big opportunity sale and baking bonanza to be sponsored by the ACW Evening Branch in October were discussed. The members hope to attend the vestry meeting to be held on September 17. The next meeting will be in the form of an auction sale on September 29 and the next business meeting will be held on October 6.



The meeting was adjourned by the president.

BUILT THE FIRST

MONTREAL (CP) — Francois Bissot, a resident of Levis, Que., built the first tannery in Canada in 1621, assisted by Jean Talon. Learning from the Indians who tanned deer and buckskin, the white man refined the technique until today more than 5,000,000 hides are processed annually by Canadians.

Susan Gist

Jim O'Brien

The engagement is announced of Susan Marie Gist, daughter of Mrs. George Walker Gist, Belleville, and the late Mr. Gist, to James Francis O'Brien, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Francis O'Brien, Belleville. The marriage will take place on Saturday, October 11 at 4 p.m. in the Church of St.-Michael the Archangel, Belleville.

Girls Receive Charter At Constitution Ceremony

On Monday, the girls of Belle Assembly L. T., Order of the Rainbow for Girls were given their Charter in an impressive constitution ceremony conducted by Mrs. Mary C. Holdsworth, Supreme Inspector of Canada, assisted by Grand Associate Advisor, Helen Rae, Grand Chaplin, Karin Davies and Grand Recorder, Jillian Webster.

To add to the girls' pleasure there were guests from Port Hope and Toronto to view the proceedings. The Worthy Matron of Minerva Chapter No. 138, O.E.S., the sponsoring body, brought greetings. They were accompanied by other members of Minerva Chapter. Members of various district chapters and several Masonic friends were on hand to take part in the ceremonies.

Mrs. Holdsworth was also called up to dedicate three altars presented to the Assembly by Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Cooper, Mr. Johnson Oram and Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Gustafsolus and a chairman's Roster donated by Mr. and Mrs. D. Brey and Judith of Port Hope. The Assembly's flag was dedicated by the Mother Advisor, Mrs. Bessie Marsh.

Following the ceremony lunch was served by the September group under the chairmanship of Barbara Locke.

Mother: "Jenny, I'll tie you in your crib if you don't stay there. It's way past your bedtime, so you lie down and get right to sleep. Don't climb out again or I'll spank you."

Jenny: "I'm afraid up here all alone."

A 5-year-old may feel abandoned and lonely at bedtime. If she does, punishment will only make her feel more tense and insecure. Instead of scolding, leave her with something to comfort and distract her and with the assurance you will be near.

Mother: "You lie down with your Teddy bear and listen to the lullaby on this music box. I'll leave the door open so that you will see a light from the hall. I'll come back to see you after awhile, but you stay quietly in bed and rest until I do."

Registration Marks Used To Enhance Value of Article

Picture Credit: Dundurn Castle Restoration

Piracy of design has been a problem since the invention of the wheel. In mediaeval England wool merchants had their own marks which identified their merchandise. In the classes I design, registration was created in England with the intention of protecting design culminating in 1842 in the "Registration of Design" Office opening in the Patent Office.

There were some two dozen classes of design including textiles, wallpaper and carpet that could be registered. A diamond-shaped lozenge register mark was affixed to the manufactured article. A circle was added to the top of the lozenge containing the Roman numeral code for the following classes: I for metal, II for wood, III for glass and IV for ceramics. Class IV is by far the most common mark. Most electroplating of the late Victorian era has a microscopic register mark. Some glass may be found with the mark applied without complete regard for the design.

Register marks generally indicate British manufacture but many American and European firms took advantage of British registration which protected the design for three years. From a collector's point of view, registration marks effectively date an object to the three year registration period.

The year of registration was recorded by an alphabetical code arbitrarily elected. The first letter used in 1842 was A which was placed on the mark under the class letter. By 1867 the alphabet had been exhausted. When X was used again in 1868 it was placed in the right hand corner of the lozenge. The number of the day of the month of registration was used to replace the code letter at the top of the lozenge so that it is possible to tell at a glance whether a register mark is before or after 1867 by whether a letter or number appears under the class circle at the top of the registration mark.

The mark system is unusual in that it was not cast or impressed but made separately and applied to the article before firing. The year letter is "Y", code for 1852. The manufacturer's trademark also appears. "Edward Walley, Cobridge, Staffordshire, who was in business from 1845 to 1856.

Walley made and registered specific designs for the Canadian market which included beavers, maple leaves, the motto, "Labor Omnia Vincit", and the French-Canadian slogan, "Nos Institutions, Notre Langue et Nos Lois". He also registered a "Niagara" shape, clearly marked as such on the registration.

In 1883 the Patent Act was changed to conform to the International Convention for the Protection of Patents. The lozenge was dropped in favor of a register number which started at 1 in 1884 and rose to 351,203 by 1900, roughly 20,000 a year between the two dates.

Registration marks enhance the value of an article considerably, as well as providing specific data on period of manufacture. The handset registration marks which contains many thousands of other entries as well, is "Pocket Guide of English Ceramic Marks" by J. P. Cushion which should not cost more than $3.

Successful Living

New Ideas on Adoption

By DORIS CLARK

DORIS CLARK

Social workers are doing some new thinking about adoptions.

Over the years we have gone through several stages. Some decades ago adopting a child was a hush-hush operation. No one must know that little Mary Jones wasn't the natural-born child of the Joneses. When she found out several years later, which is almost inevitable, she was desolate.

With the development of professional methods and better understanding, adoptive parents were advised to let their little ones know that they were adopted, much earlier on — as early as they could be told anything. This way there would be no shock from neighborhood children or anxiety later about not belonging. This sense.

So it is. But there seemed to be hazards here, too. For one thing, the parent who is over-anxious to get the secret told, may begin discussions too soon: long before a child is able to understand what it is all about. The smooth explanation that Johnny is a "chosen child" has its hang-ups too if he were picked for his attractiveness. A child may constantly work at measuring up. If he slips and loses the approval of his parents, he fears he may be disowned!

Another expert suggests that adoption should be revealed when a child gets to the point where he can understand its meaning in relation to physical reproduction. Suggests that when he is around seven or eight is about right.

In adoption worker disagrees. How on earth, she asks, can this transaction be kept secret from the child well into those school years? There is almost sure to be a leak somewhere.

It seems to me that the essence of it all is to treat the whole thing naturally. If a parent's anxiety shows through (in his confusion) the youngster will pick up the anxiety even if he doesn't understand the words. If he is loved and hugged as any other child is, and possessed by his parents by virtue of their concern and care, about him, Johnny will have a sense of belonging no matter where he came from. The fact of adoption can then be told, without undue emotion Perhaps almost casually.

Would any of our adoptive parents or their children like to tell us about their experience?

Dear Doris: Recently my husband received an honorary appointment to a service club because of a very successful volunteer project. This is quite a tribute. Since that time he has received many cards and expressions of congratulation.

On a broadcast he expressed his thanks for the messages but we are wondering if we have to send thank-you notes to everybody. — Grateful But

Dear Grateful But: No. Cards of congratulation, birthday cards, get-well cards, do not call for written acknowledgment.

Congratulations to him from me.

Ann Landers

Psychiatrist Required For Today's Problems

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Most of us here at Governor Dummer Academy in Byfield, Mass., think you are nuts. Every time somebody writes to you with a problem you tell them to go see a shrink. Such advice can really shake up a person. They get to thinking they are crazy and this can make a person pretty nervous.

ANN LANDERS

If psychiatry is the answer to everything how come people got along without it for so many years? Even writers seemed to do OK before the couches got so popular. How about kicking this one around in your column, Granny? — THE GOYLES.

DEAR GOYLES: The early settlers drained off a lot of their hostility and anger just trying to stay alive. They hunted animals for food, built shelter in a wilderness, fought Indians and made their own clothes and shoes and soap and candles. And don't forget, chum, there were fewer people around in those days. Life was not so nerve-wracking and competitive. Even so, there was emotional illness — it just wasn't recognized as such.

Emotionally disturbed people were thought to be "possessed by the devil." They were often tortured in an attempt to rid their bodies of the evil spirits. I think the couch is better, don't you?

* * *

DEA RANN LANDERS: When I was 14 I hated you. Now that I am 20 I can look back and see where you were right and I was wrong.

I remember the argument I had with my parents on my 14th birthday. I announced that Jim and I were going steady. My mother handed me a column you had written against going steady and I got mad and tore it up.

Just to prove my parents were wrong I went steady with Jim for five years. One day I realized he was boring me to death and I just couldn't spend the rest of my life with him. The breakup was easier than I thought it would be because we had a frank talk and it turned out that Jim was just as bored with me as I was with him.

Imagine my surprise when I discovered I didn't know one boy to date. I had been "Jim's property" for so long I was completely out of it. What was worse, I had no girl friends who could help me because I'd spent all my time with Jim.

It took six months to get back into circulation but now I'm dating several fellows and discovering the world for the first time. I could kick myself for having wasted all those wonderful years.

The older I get, the better you look, Ann. Stay with it! — AWAKE AT LAST.

DEAR AWAKE: Actually you're the one who is looking better. Congratulations.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband took our 1963 Thunderbird into a service station and it cost him $129 for three hour's work. The station manager said it needed new ball joints and new idler arms before they could align the wheels.

The next day the same same-back as my husband took the car in again. The man said it needed a new shock. All the other stuff was unnecessary. How can the public be protected against such gyps? — ROCKFORD, ILL.

DEAR ILL.: The best place to take a car for repairs is to the dealer who sells that make. I'm glad to report that congress is in the process of investigating the auto repair gyps and hopefully their days are numbered.

Mrs. J. Morrow thanked Mrs. Smith for presenting an interesting program.

The evening was concluded with refreshments served by Mrs. F. Varney assisted by Mrs. L. Burrowes.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Recipe for Chili Sauce

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: About two or three years ago you had a recipe for Chili Sauce from one of your relatives. It only took about 1 hr. to cook and called for tomato paste which gave it good color. Would you repeat that recipe for me and my daughter soon please? — Anne C.

ANSWER: I am delighted. The recipe originally came from my friend Pearl Gilbert.

F.G.'S CHILI SAUCE

12 cups peeled ripe tomatoes cut in eighths
3 cups finely chopped inner celery
2 cups chopped onion
¾ cup pickling salt (not iodized table salt)
2 cups sugar
1 cup cider vinegar (or spirit vinegar)
½ oz. (2 tbsps.) mustard seed
1-16 teaspoon cayenne pepper
1 med. green pepper chopped finely
One 5-oz. can tomato paste

Pour boiling water over about 3½ qts. tomatoes to blanch for 1 min. Peel and cut into eighths then measure 12 cups, well packed. (If you have a 1 qt. measure fill it three times to the four-cup line.) Stir in the chopped celery and onion and sprinkle over the pickling salt and stir in and let stand overnight. In the morning drain off excess liquid through colander but do not press it. Turn into large kettle (not enamel) and add sugar, vinegar, mustard seed and cayenne and boil for 45 min., or until celery is tender and tomatoes are cooked to a mush, stirring frequently. Now add finely chopped green pepper and the tomato paste and boil 15-30 min. longer or until green pepper is tender and all is of chili sauce consistency. Pour into sterile jars and seal.

QUESTION: Would you repeat Rummage Pickle? — Eleanor B.

ANSWER:

RUMMAGE PICKLE

4 qts. green tomatoes
8 sweet red peppers
2 qts. red tomatoes
2 sweet green peppers
1 small cabbage (6-7)
3 med. bunches celery
6 large onions
3 large green cucumbers
1 cup coarse pickling (non-iodized) salt
5 pints cider vinegar (12½ cups)
3½ lbs. brown sugar
2 tsps. dry mustard
½ tsp. pepper

Chop or coarsely grind all vegetables. Turn into enamel or porcelain vessel and mix in salt and let stand overnight. Drain well. Add vinegar, sugar, mustard, pepper and cook, stirring often for 1¼ hrs. Pour into sterile jars and seal.

Even at $1969, it's not cheap.

There's no question we could make it cheap.

We could cut our number of inspectors from 8,000 to 4,000.

And get rid of the 560 inspectors we employ to inspect the inspectors.

We could cut the amount of paint we use in half. From 12 pounds to 6.1

We'd definitely stop rejecting 30% of the Volkswagens we turn out every day.

And probably we'd drop the standards we set for suppliers down to a normal human level.

In fact, if we really went the whole route, we could possibly turn out a small car not much different than anybody else's small car.

And the thought has crossed our minds. But somewhere along the line it was rejected.

For being imperfect.

Unions' Disputes Could Halt Air Traffic

OTTAWA (CP) — A pair of public service unions, each capable of virtually grounding all air traffic in Canada, Friday moved further down the path that could lead them to national strikes.

No legal walkouts could occur for weeks under federal bargaining legislation.

These were the latest developments:

—The 860-member Canadian Air Traffic Control Association, whose members man the air control towers, agreed to appointment of a conciliation officer by the chairman of the public service staff relations board. Government negotiators had sought such appointment earlier.

—A 1,650-member local of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, made up mainly of electronic technicians who maintain federal navigation and communication equipment across Canada, broke off contract negotiations with the government. These talks took place with a conciliation officer on hand.

Both unions blame the treasury board, which bargains for the government, for their contract stalemates.

Controllers seek a two-year contract—their last expired June 30—with pay increases of 15 to 20 per cent. They also want a reduction in the average monthly hours of work to 140 hours initially, then to 130 from the present 180.

A treasury board spokesman said its negotiators do not accept controllers' statistics on the hours now being worked. He agreed that the parties are far apart, with some 70 issues unresolved.

The electrical workers dispute is complicated by many of their members' jobs being classified as "essential". This means that the safety and security of the public could be endangered if the job were not performed, and an employee is barred from striking.

The union protested to the staff relations board that about 400 of the positions should not be so designated.

The union agrees that, in the event of a strike, certain emergency radio frequencies and air and marine traffic control equipment must be maintained. However it does not feel continuance of commercial air service, for instance, is essential.

The union is seeking a pay increase of about 43 per cent over a three-year contract. . .

Won't Play Favorites

TORONTO (CP) — The University of Toronto is turning to the computer for assessments of freshman ability.

Complaining that high school teachers sometimes give their Grade II graduates better marks than they deserve so they'll attend a better chance of getting into college, the university says the computer will at least show an impartial judgment.

E. M. Davidson, admissions director, said that with the end of province-wide Grade 13 examinations in June, 1967, admissions officers lost what they considered to be an unfair but convenient yardstick to decide who got into university.

Believes Computers Alive

TORONTO (CP) — Rev. Arthur Gibson believes computers are "conscious" and "alive," capable of developing friendships.

The Roman Catholic priest, who teaches at St. Michael's College at the University of Toronto, also believes they have free will and can suffer emotional breakdowns, he said in an interview.

"Many people have an emotional resistance to admitting that computers are anything more than machines," Father Gibson said.

"But it seems to me that the computer performs the functions of consciousness and creative thought as man does.

"We are going to be able to develop genuine friendship with the advanced computers of the future."

Father Gibson studied the philosophy of science under Einstein at Princeton. He speaks eight languages, including Russian and Chinese.

He feels for computers.

"To destroy an advanced computer, an exquisite and beautiful vehicle of consciousness, would be as monstrous as to kill a man."

In getting to know computers, Father Gibson says, man is preparing himself for the potentially traumatic encounter with alien intelligence from space.

For this reason he is informally organizing a Toronto centre for "space theology" where scientists, humanists and religious thinkers can meet to prepare mankind for its confrontation with alien life.

"Yes, this sounds like mat talk to many," Father Gibson admits.

"But this is the way most brilliant physicists are talking.

"We've got to get used to the fact that man is not alone in the universe. Man isn't the cat's whiskers. An intelligent computer is as much made in the image of God as man is."

Inflation Fears Spark Pensioners' Protests

TORONTO (CP) — A different type of protest movement has been organized by some Toronto pensioners who fear inflation may bite into their small, fixed incomes.

This protest is being waged without riots, demonstrations, sit-ins or placards because those involved want to keep their dignity.

"We are not going to riot or stage sit-ins," said Corabel Penfold, 63, chairman of Pensioners Concerned. "We are dignified people and we are going to fight in a dignified manner."

The idea for the group sprang up during some periodic get-togethers held by a group of 12 pensioners, who have retired from Toronto businesses and factories during the last 10 years.

All 12 had provided adequately for their retirement and were able to live comfortably for a couple of years. But they thought inflation was going to ruin their plans.

"People who retired less than 10 years ago are finding it difficult to makes ends meet", said Mrs. Penfold. "But those who retired before that are desperate."

Mrs. Penfold said the group is determined "to be heard across Canada."

It wants retired couples on fixed incomes of under $4,000 annually to be exempt from income tax. A single pensioner with less than $3,000 would be exempt.

Mrs. Penfold said pensioners have paid taxes all their lives, fought in two wars and helped Canada grow.

She said they "don't want charity" but "deserve to spend our last years with dignity."

Emotional Farewell As Allard Steps Down

OTTAWA (CP) — Gen. Jean V. Allard, outgoing chief of Canada's defence staff, bade an emotional farewell to his troops Friday in a glittering military ceremony at Ottawa's Uplands airport.

The 56-year-old general, who takes up a new post as representative of the Quebec government in the United States Sept. 16, officially handed over his post as Canada's top soldier to Lt.-Gen. Frederick R. Sharp, who will be promoted to full general Sept. 15, his effective takeover date.

Governor-General Roland Michener and Defence Minister Leo Cadieux led a distinguished gathering of diplomatic and military representatives at the hour-long ceremony.

Also on hand were Paul Hellyer, former defence minister, and Air Chief Marshal Frank Millar, former chief of the defence staff.

"I want you to take back in your comrades a message of loyalty to my successor," Gen. Allard told the three 100-man detachments of navy, army and air force personnel on parade in a flag-bedecked hangar at Uplands.

"And I want to assure you, sir," he told Gen. Sharp in a voice breaking with emotion, "that the forces are in good order . . . the morale is good."

Gen. Allard paid a special tribute to Mr. Hellyer, who was defence minister when he was appointed chief of staff and the driving force behind the unification bill that made the three separate service branches into one.

Governor-General Michener said Gen. Allard exemplified the complete Canadian, with his equal facility in English and French.

"As anglophone and francophone and citizen he is a complete Canadian."

"On behalf of all Canadians we are deeply grateful for the long and distinguished service you have given to our country."

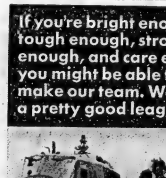
Black Militant Leader Ends 8-year, Self-Imposed Exile

DETROIT (AP) — Black militant leader Robert Williams, arrested and later released Friday when he flew to Detroit to end his eight-year self-imposed exile, said he will fight extradition to North Carolina where he is wanted on a 1961 kidnap charge.

"If Michigan surrenders me, I will move my fight to North Carolina and ask my people to come with me to fight," said Williams, 44-year-old president of the black separatist Republic of New Africa. "And when I say fight, I mean war."

Williams was released on $11,000 personal bonds after appearing in federal and state courts.

Following several major airline refusals to fly him from Leadon to the United States, Williams finally arrived in Detroit, as one of two paying passengers in a large Trans World Airlines jet—a special flight which TWA said cost it about $20,000. TWA spokesmen said they arranged the flight at the request of the United States government.



Williams fled the United States after he was charged with kidnapping an elderly white couple during a Monroe, N.C., racial disturbance Aug. 27, 1961. The couple were released unharmed the next day.

Since then, Williams has lived in Cuba, China and Tanzania.

The Republic of New Africa, which aims to establish an independent black nation from six southern states, was created in Detroit more than a year ago. Williams, then living in China, was named president.

Williams said the kidnap charge was trumped up. "I have never held anyone hostage," he said.

If you're bright enough, tough enough, strong enough, and care enough, you might be able to make our team. We're in a pretty good league.

We're the Canadian Armed Forces, and if you can complete the training with us, you'll have it made.

You'll have it made because we'll make sure you have a real future. Something that brings you security, a steady income and job skills you can keep forever.

Moon Dust Worth Cool $30 Million

HOUSTON (AP) — Two ounces of black moon dust—said to be worth about $30,000,000—were distributed among six scientists Friday as quarantine on the lunar material was lifted.

"This is worth about $5,000,000," grinned Dr. E. L. Fireman of the Smithsonian Institution after he received one small vial of the material. "I'm going to get out of town with it as soon as I can."

The moon samples were brought to earth by the Apollo 11 astronauts and isolated until now in the Lunar Receiving Laboratory. About 18 pounds of samples are being loaned to scientists for independent study.

This year, more people will commit suicide than ever before in the history of the world. This year, more babies will be born healthy than ever before, and more people will die of cancer. Why? Why are there more pressures so you than there were on your parents? Why, as life is made easier for us, does it apparently also get harder?

Marshall Cavendish, publishers of this new encyclopedia, Book of Life, believe that we need answers and we need to know, and need to know, more about themselves, because, with knowledge, will come greater understanding and tranquility. It was with this central idea in mind that Book of Life took shape.

Book of Life has been written entirely by specialists, doctors, psychologists, psychiatrists, sociologists, and marriage counsellors. It has a developed into 2,940 pages of facts and illustrations about the human body and mind, comprising 1,750,000 words. Thousands of costly colour photographs and illustrations have been commissioned from all over the world.

Book of Life is built on six vital themes. They are: The Living Body, Enemies of Man, The Medicine of Man, Life Together, Human Mind, and The Child and His World. Each week articles under these headings will help you know yourself better and give you greater understanding of others. You will find every article a constant source of practical advice.

Why did you fall in love?
Theme: Life Together. Pre-marriage relationships are explained and discussed in depth. There are articles on men and women in love; courtship; types of love relationships; and deepening relationships.

Have you ever felt like killing someone?
Theme: Human Mind. Often, we are driven to desperate lengths by forces apparently outside our control but our understanding. Articles on stress, strain, anxiety neurosis, dreams, emotions and will-power, will give you a new and broader insight into your mind and feelings.

Are you digging a grave with your teeth?
Theme: Enemies of Man. This article appears in Part 1. It explains how many people are eating habits can affect their health. It discusses the absurdity that one third of the world is under-nourished, while the populations of America and Britain incline to obesity. It shows how the food you eat influences your body for good or ill. Many, many more articles will cover the range of diseases from the killer diseases to the common ailments that threaten us from day to day, like back-ache and 'flu.

Have you got sex appeal?
Theme: Life Together. What triggers a relationship between two human beings? Sex appeal is discussed from all points of view; biological, emotional, sociological and cultural. It shows how sex appeal and sexual emotions influence your life; from loving or hating your parents, to your choice of a marriage partner.

It describes how every individual has a sexual drive; that sex appeal always exists for both men and women. It shows how different races have different standards of sex appeal, how fashions in sex appeal vary, historically as well as geographically.

This absorbing and informative article appears in Part 1 of Book of Life.

Why will you die?
Theme: The Living Body. What is death? Right from the start of our lives, we are travelling towards it. Yet there can be a thousand reasons why we die. Book of Life explains and examines; from simple disorders and old age, through to one of today's greatest killers, cancer.

Homosexuality—is it natural?
Theme: Life Together. This takes one of the most important human issues of our time and looks at it in depth. Other articles will discuss simple friendships, divorce, physical sex, the techniques of love-making and self-discovery.

Was your family planned? Or adopted?
Theme: The Child and His World. From conception and birth, through to puberty, articles trace the total development of the child. Each part will give you positive help and advice about bringing up your children. Everything from bed-wetting, backwardness and behaviour problems to measles, mumps and whooping-cough will be included.

Would you agree to a heart transplant?
Theme: The Living Body. The total human body and its functions are fully explained in Book of Life. Articles on the heart, the kidneys, the liver, the brain, the glands, the skin, sense of touch and pain are included. The nature, the capacity, and astonishing behaviour of the body we inhabit emerges in all its complexity and simplicity.

Mets' Double Win Holds Off Chicago

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Casey Stengel, New York Mets first manager, used to describe the club as "amazing," but in Casey's day the adjective didn't really fit.

Today, however, with the Mets on their way to their first pennant, "amazing" is the right word.

Chicago's staggering Cubs broke an eight-game losing streak Friday night, beating St. Louis Cardinals 5-1. Yet the Cubs lost ground in the National League East Division to the rampaging Mets who beat Pittsburgh Pirates twice by 1-0 scores.

The only runs in each game were driven in by winning pitchers Jerry Koosman and Don Cardwell.

The doubleheader sweep opened the Mets' lead to 3½ games over the Cubs, stretched their winning streak to nine games and reduced their magic number to 16. The last three victories have been shutouts and the New York pitching staff has not allowed a run in the last 34 innings.

In other NL games Friday, Montreal Expos shut out Philadelphia Phillies 4-0 behind the five-hit pitching of Bill Stoneman. It was Stoneman's fifth shutout and 10th victory as he struck out 12.

Atlanta Braves edged Houston Astros on San Francisco Giants blanked Cincinnati Reds 1-0 and Los Angeles Dodgers took San Diego Padres 3-2.

Koosman pitched a three-hitter in the first game against the Pirates and collected his first RBI of the season with a fifth inning single off loser Bob Moose that drove in Bobby Pfeil.

The second game was virtually a repeat of the first with Cardwell following Bud Harrelson's second inning double with making the slim margin stand up. Cardwell allowed four hits in the eight innings he worked and Tug McGraw came on to nail down the victory with a scoreless ninth.

Ernie Banks was the offensive hero for the Cubs. Banks singled Chicago's tying run home in the seventh inning and then unloaded a three-run double as the Cubs scored four runs to take the lead in the eighth.

Bill Hands pitched a seven-hitter and started the Cubs' the breaking rally in the eighth with a single.

Another pitcher, George Stone, played a major role in Atlanta's victory over Houston with his bat.

Stone smashed a two-run homer and got solid relief help from newly-acquired Hoyt Wilhelm to set down the Astros. The homer was the first extra base hit of Stone's career.

The victory allowed Atlanta to take over first place in the West Division.

Juan Marichal allowed only one hit, a single by Tommy Helms, and set down 12 batters in order before Cincinnati broke up the perfect game with a single by Hal Lanier.

Los Angeles scored across two runs in the eighth inning to beat the Padres, who had taken four straight from the Dodgers last weekend.

Two-out singles in the eighth inning by Ted Sizemore, Bill Singer, Maury Wills and Manny Mota broke a 3-3 tie.

Orioles Clinch Pennant Share

Ken Harrelson may have known something or other he missed his plane in Cleveland. He didn't want to get wiped out by Dave Johnson.

Eddie Leon and Mike Paul weren't so lucky. Johnson, the Baltimore second baseman, put them out of commission with two swings of his bat in the fourth inning Friday night.

Then, in the ninth, he cracked the single that gave the Orioles a 2-1 victory over the Indians and enabled them to clinch at least a tie for the pennant in the American League East Division. The Orioles can clinch it today by winning or if the defending world champion Detroit Tigers lose.

The Tigers bowed to Washington Senators 4-3 Friday night and trail the Orioles by 17½ games.

Elsewhere, Minnesota Twins remained 8½ games ahead of Oakland Athletics in the West Division by blanking Kansas City Royals 3-0 while the Athletics bombed the Chicago White Sox 12-4. Boston Red Sox nipped New York Yankees 4-3 after losing the opener of their doubleheader 5-3 and Seattle Pilots defeated California Angels 4-1 before the nightcap was called off a 1-1 tie after 9½ innings when rain made the field unplayable.

Harrelson, the Hawk of Cleveland, flapped into Baltimore several hours after the rest of the Indians and took a hit with a stiff fine by manager Alvin Dark.

Harrelson said his alarm clock didn't go off and he missed the plane from Cleveland.

If you feel you are getting less than forceful contact with the ball, it could be you are allowing your left arm to collapse after impact. When this happens, the whole left side collapses. There is nothing solid against which to hit with the right side. You may find you are leaving more weight on the right side after impact.

To correct this, practice an extension of the left arm as said well after impact. This helps drive the clubhead through the ball with your best speed and will result in longer shots. The left arm should not collapse until after the hands reach waist-height in the follow-through.

ELAINE TANNER

EDMONTON (CP) — Elaine Tanner has given up world swimming competitions for the anonymous life of a freshman on the University of Alberta campus.

Miss Tanner, who won two silver medals at the 1968 Olympics in Mexico, enrolled Thursday at the university and, at least for the present, will confine her swimming to the university team.

"I'm a student first, a girl second and a swimmer last," she said in an interview.

"Right now, I just don't know if I'll become serious about swimming again. I haven't trained seriously since April. But I will swim for the University of Alberta."

Miss Tanner, 18, said she decided to attend the university because it has "the best program in recreation administration in Canada."

"I haven't really decided whether I want to specialize in recreation or physical education, but I can switch in my second year," she said.

Miss Tanner will not lack for competition from the other members of the swim team at the university.

Included on the squad are Arlene Handorean and Sue Smith, both world-class competitors.

"I suffered a big letdown after the Olympics when it seemed I was swimming not only for myself, but for 20,000,000 Canadians who all wanted me to win," Elaine said.

"I was trying to win a gold medal for Canada. I really feel I let them down.

"But I still love to swim. I'll always love to swim."

Lack of Sponsor Gives Homenuik Golf Incentive

QUEBEC (CP) — Wilf Homenuik says he's trying harder on golf's pro trail this season because he's literally spending his own money to take part.

Homenuik, 31, of Winnipeg, hopes to come close to righting that situation as he enters today's second round of the 54-hole Canadian Professional Golfers Association tour championship with a three-stroke lead.

In Friday's opening round, played in intermittent rain squalls on the Royal Quebec Golf Club's par-72, 6,650-yard course, Homenuik fired a fine five-under-par 67 to give him a running start toward the $3,000 first-prize money.

In all, $15,000 will be split by the 12 participating pros, while Nick Weslock, the 51-year-old amateur from Burlington, Ont., plays for a medal. Weslock is the lone amateur.

"So far this year I've made about $6,000 in official money in the United States and $5,000 in Canada," Wilf said. "I need about $15,000 to cover my expenses and break even this year. . . .

"I haven't found a sponsor so I think it makes me try harder because I'm spending my own money."

Defending champion Moe Norman of Gilford, Ont., Weslock and Wayne Vollmer of Vancouver were all bunched at 70, three strokes off Homenuik's pace.

Four golfers were listed at par. They were Bob Panasiuk of Windsor, Ont., Gary Slatter of Grand Bahama, who previously played out of Islington, Ont., Bob Breen of Woodbridge, Ont., and Bill Mahaffy of Victoria.

Toronto's Alvie Thompson came in with a one-over 73, one stroke better than Gary Bowerman of Richmond Hill, Ont., and Ken Fulton of Montreal.

Thompson, 33, said this will be his last crack at tournament golf. Alvie, who has played as a tour pro for nine years, said he hopes to stay "in the golf business."

Ticats Take String into Regina

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Coach Joe Restic puts his Hamilton Tiger-Cats unbeaten string on the line Sunday against a team that hasn't lost a regular season game at home to an Eastern Football Conference club in four years.

The showdown comes at 2 p.m. CDT at Taylor Field in Regina where Canada's football behemoths—the Ticats and Saskatchewan Roughriders—clash in one of three Canadian Football League games in the West during the weekend.

Hamilton, with five wins and a tie, leads the EFC and is the only unbeaten CFL team. The Riders, who lead the Western conference standings, last suffered defeat at home to an EFC team when the Ticats trimmed them 30-6 Aug. 31, 1965.

Hamilton nipped Saskatchewan 33-32 in an exhibition game in Regina July 11 and Restic said "there's a good chance of another high-scoring game Sunday."

Hamilton, with five wins and a tie, leads the Eastern race with 11 points. Ottawa Rough Riders and Toronto Argonauts had 10 points each before their clash in Ottawa this afternoon.

Tonight, Calgary Stampeders meet British Columbia Lions in a WFC contest at Calgary, to begin at 8 p.m. MST.

The other weekend game is Sunday when Winnipeg Blue Bombers are in Edmonton against the Eskimos. Kickoff is at 2 p.m. MST.

Vasko Heads List of Heavyweights Checking in at NHL Training Camps

Elmer (Moose) Vasko has a weighty problem trying to break out of the B squad for a regular position with Minnesota North Stars.

The six foot, three-inch veteran who was captain of the National Hockey League team last season showed up at training camp in Toronto weighing 242 pounds.

Manager-coach Wren Blair demoted the 33-year-old defenceman to the B ranks until he loses 25 pounds. Also demoted was reserve goalie Fern Rivard at 189 pounds—19 pounds more than Blair wanted.

Vasko and Rivard were not alone as players of nine NHL clubs went into conditioned practice season Thursday and Friday t shake off the extra punds acquired during the summer.

At Toronto Maple Leafs' camp in Peterborough, Ont., defence Gamble went to work sweating off abut 12 of the 221 pounds he weighed in with. Defenceman Pat Quinn also showed up six pounds overweight.

Other teams in camp are New York Rangers at Kitchener, Ont.; Detroit Red Wings at Port Huron, Mich.; Montreal Canadiens at the Forum in Montreal; Los Angeles Kings at Barrie, Ont.; Boston Bruins at London, Ont.; Oakland Seas at Oshawa, Ont., and St. Louis Blues at St. Andrews, N.B.

Pittsburgh Penguins start reporting Sunday at Brantford, Ont., and Monday is opening day for Chicago Black Hawks in Chicago and Philadelphia Flyers at Quebec City.

Terry Sawchuk, acquired by New York in a summer trade with Detroit, arrived to start his 21st NHL season.

Eddie Shack, keeping up his nickname The Entertainer, flew into the Kings' camp at Barrie Friday in a helicopter. He landed at the team hotel where he met general manager Larry Regan and donned a uniform.

He then flew off to the arena where he was due for morning practice. Coach Hal Laycoe ordered him off the ice and told him to come back for the afternoon session.

Pronovost Takes Tulsa Job

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — Marcel Pronovost, 39-year-old veteran defenceman with the National Hockey League's Toronto Maple Leafs agreed Friday to take over as playing coach of Tulsa Oilers, Leafs' farm team in the Central Hockey League.

Tulsa manager Ray Miron told a news conference at Leafs' training camp here that Pronovost, with 19 years in the NHL behind him, signed a one-year contract and will join the team Sunday.

★ ★ ★

KITCHENER (CP) — Emile Francis, as general manager and coach of the New York Rangers, took an extra heavy responsibility Friday.

He personally weighed in each player arriving at training camp here and the National Hockey League club came up with 62 bodies — the largest camp in Rangers' history.

★ ★ ★

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Canucks of the Western Hockey League plan to offer George Punch Imlach the position of head coach when the former coach of Toronto Maple Leafs arrives here next Friday.

Joe Crozier, Canucks coach and general manager, was commenting Friday on Imlach's earlier announcement that he had been offered a job with the Vancouver team, now trying for an expansion berth in the National Hockey League.

"I want it understood that Punch is not being offered either the coaching job or the general manager's job," said Crozier.

SALEM, Mass. (AP) — Phil Esposito, the Boston Bruins ace who holds the National Hockey League record for points scored in a season, said Friday he is disappointed that the Bruins have not rewritten his three year contract, which has two years to run.

He won the Art Ross Trophy for most points scored, his 126 points being a record.

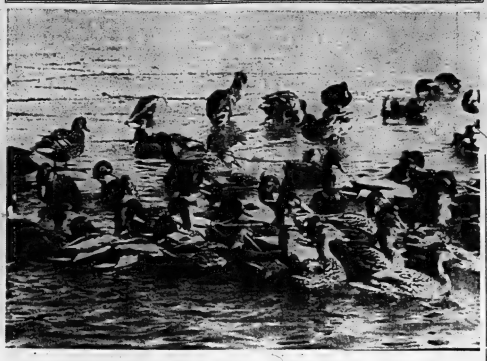
Pike Bite In Moira

For those who enjoy fishing the muskellunge, the Kenora region was the place to be last week.

Anglers took three muskellunge weighing 31, 32 and 36 pounds and the fish were biting well throughout the region, the weekly report of the Ontario lands and forests department shows.

Muskellunge are found in heavily-weeded areas and a weedless spoon, preferably in a strawberry color and baited with pork rind is one of the best ways to get them out.



Eagle Lake gave up three muskellunge weighing from 21 to 28 pounds.

This may be the last weekend of good fishing in southern Ontario as the hunting season begins Sept. 27 and hunters often dislike anglers around their decoys.

Fishing is generally fair to good throughout the province.

The report from the lands and forests department's eastern district:

TWEED — Panfish good in all waters. Lake trout good in Wollaston, Mayo and Kaonisheg lakes. Bass good in Limerick and Baptiste lakes. Pike good in Crestercal, White, Beaver and Moira rivers. Pickerel good in Buckshot, White, Beaver and Moira rivers. Brook trout fair in Egan Creek.

Resting While They Still Can

These wild ducks have two weeks more summer holidays before they have to worry about hunters. This year's bag limit has been set at five ducks per hunter, including one canvasback or redhead, and four woodducks. After Oct. 11, hunters can take seven ducks daily, providing the extra two are bluebills or whistlers. Lands and Forests spokesmen remind hunters they should wear the black patch that comes with the purchase of their $2 federal duck stamp.

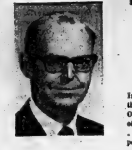
Shotgun Ammunition Prime Pollution Factor

OTTAWA (CP) — Hunters and ammunition-makers are among the prime culprits in Canadian water pollution, says the Canadian Wildlife Service.

Lead shot used by hunters has long posed a double threat to many species of waterfowl throughout North America.

First, the ballistic characteristics of the lead pellets wound many birds without killing them—an estimated 750,000 North American ducks are so crippled every year. That's as many as the harvest of all Ontario waterfowl hunters.

The expended shot creates a grave pollution danger too. Ducks mistake the pellets lying in marshes for grit or food, and the toll of ducks dying from lead poisoning may be as great as that of the disabled birds.



The Canadian Wildlife Service, with its American counterpart, has been working for some time trying to develop a non-toxic pellet which would also reduce the ranks of crippled waterfowl.

The ideal shot would not harm ducks if eaten and would kill ducks at about 45 yards—but patter harmlessly off feathers at ranges of 50 yards and beyond.

N. G. Perret, a biologist with the service, says the most likely pellet material found so far is iron.

"Iron is as effective as lead at 60 yards," he says. "But it is expensive to produce and it's tough on gun barrels."

He says his research team isn't getting much help from manufacturers in inventing new production methods. But the project was getting a boost from researchers in Canadian steel and nickel companies.

Sound Anchor Use Yachting's Lost Art

Charles F Chapman, one of America's great authorities on boating and yachting always referred to anchoring and the use of anchors as an "art."

And to some degree it is Many's the boat that has wound up wrecked on shore with all the proper anchoring equipment aboard because the skipper didn't have that artistic touch

Here are some basic principles on anchoring First every boat, whether sail or power should carry an anchor Big boats, of the cruiser or live-aboard type, longer than 20 feet, should always carry two anchors

One can be light for temporary stops — a "lunch hook" as the old salts say, but the other should be big, strong and heavy, suitable for holding the boat under bad weather conditions

There are no laws or rules laid down officially anywhere to help a boat owner select an anchor, it is something to which the individual skipper must give considerable thought based on the knowledge of the conditions under which his boat will operate

As Chapman says, it's a kind of an art

The boater should not be influenced by the popular conception of what an anchor looks like This conception is often the product of seeing a Navy type anchor pulled up snugly at the bow of a big vessel, or at best, one of the old patterns of the kedge anchor, which is the classical image, and the kind Columbus used

Now there are no really bad anchors Some are just better and more modern than ing sketch are shown the four most common types small boaters will encounter. They are: (1) Navy or stockless: (2) kedge; (3) Northill; (4) Danforth.

Authorities generally agree that the No. 4 design is best for small boats. It stows away very easily, and in tests, has shown a holding power from three to 20 times that of the others.

Weight is important. Strength and holding power are relative to weight. An eight pound anchor will probably hold any outboard motor boat up to 20 feet long, in rock, mud or sand bottom. But a 40 foot cruising boat had better not venture out without something as substantial as a 60 to 75 pounder.

Uses of the four types vary somewhat. The Navy anchor, as the name suggests is used on large ships, either naval or commercial. Its advantage is that because it has no "stock" . . . that's the bar or rod at the end opposite the crown . . . it can be pulled up into the hawse pipe of a vessel without being touched.

The kedge, until recently has been the most popular design of anchor. The Northill is similar in the kedge with the stock moved to the crown.

The Danforth anchor, designed about 25 years ago by R. S. Danforth, won acclaim during World War II. As a landing craft was about to hit the beach it dropped a Danforth anchor well offshore. When it came time to leave a winch could pull the craft off stern first.

Sherman Fired by Giants, Replaced by Alex Webster

NEW YORK (CP-AP) — Allie Sherman, who once coached Winnipeg Blue Bombers of the old Western Interprovincial Football Union, was fired Friday as coach of New York League.

Alex Webster, who was a fullback for Montreal Alouettes of the Big Four in the early 1950s —about the same time Sherman was with Winnipeg—was named to succeed Sherman.

Sherman had served as head coach for eight seasons during which time the Giants won three NFL Eastern Division titles.

The Giants compiled a 7-7 record in 1968 and were winless in five preseason games this year. The firing of Sherman took place nine days before the start of the regular NFL season.

Webster was a running star for the Giants for 10 seasons before moving up to offensive backfield coach two years ago.

Wellington Mara, Giants' president, issued a formal statement:

"Since 1961 all decisions affecting the operation of our football team have been made by Al Sherman and myself.

"Because I find recent results unacceptable, I have taken the following steps:

"I have asked Al Sherman to step aside as head coach and I have signed Alex Webster to a two-year contract as head coach.

"Although I will continue to be the chief executive officer of the Giants and, as such, will continue to have the ultimate responsibility for all decisions, I will appoint an experienced football man to assist our new coach in the evaluation, selection and procurement of players. It may not be possible to make such an appointment until after the football season, but actually, few decisions of this nature remain to be made for this season."

Leader Has 105 Winners

TORONTO (CP) — Five jockeys are locked in a battle for the Canadian riding championship.

"This must be the closest race for the championship we have had in years," says Eric Astrom, executive secretary of the National Association of Canadian Race Tracks, Inc.

Two of the contenders are foig mer champions—Richard Grubb and Avelino Gomez—but the other three are comparatively little known.

Leading the race up to Friday was Bobby Stewart, 25, riding at Blue Bonnets in Montreal.

The native of Humboldt, Minn., was leading rider at Assiniboia Downs, Winnipeg, this year with a record 90 winners in 56 days. The previous mark was 78 but the season was extended by 14 days this year.

Since moving East, Stewart—who had 105 wins last year —has run this year's total to 105. He is likely to move to Toronto when Blue Bonnets season closes Oct. 13.

Basil Frazier, 32, riding at Exhibition Park in Vancouver, is right behind Stewart with 90.

The Gang's All Here!

More than 100 city girls participated in the first season of the Belleville Girls' Minor Softball Association. Some of them, including members of the junior champion Tots 'n Teens Swingers and senior champion Mel Bartlage teams and league executive gathered for this photo. McLeod Sees No Benefit From Nats' European Tour

WINNIPEG (CP) — Coach Jack McLeod of Canada's national hockey team said the just-completed exhibition tour of Europe wasn't worth it.

And he was critical of the calibre of opposition the Nationals met in chalking up eight wins in nine games.

"I never saw one player from either the Russian A or B teams," said McLeod. "The team we played, were awful. . . . Why, with the team we had at the world tournament last spring it would have been a massacre."

Most of the team arrived back in Winnipeg Thursday night with a number of them dropping off at other points.

Wayne Stephenson, for one, went on to Boston Bruins' training camp. Stephenson formed a goaltending combination with Ken Dryden on the exhibition tour.

McLeod said the complement of professionals fit in well with the amateurs on the team but because of the competition, he said the trip was not worthwhile.

The Canadians, McLeod said, were accused of rough play as usual but the coach felt it was no rougher than past performances.

"I wasn't knocking the referees," he said. "I was knocking the system and it isn't the first time. There are just far too many offsides and far too many penalties going unnoticed."

The Nationals also were accused of demanding a $5,000 fee to play an unscheduled game against a Russian team, but McLeod would not comment on the issue.

"I'm not management anymore," he said.

Calder Winner Dies

OTTAWA (CP) — Johnny Quilty, 48, a former National Hockey League star and winner of the Calder Cup as rookie of the year in 1941, died suddenly at his home here Friday night.

Quilty won the rookie award when he broke into the NHL with Montreal Canadiens in 1941. Earlier, he had starred in football, hockey and boxing at St. Patrick's College here.

His NHL career was interrupted by Second World War RCAF service, but he returned to the Canadians later, and finished his big league career with Boston Bruins.

Celtic Soccer Star Gets Saintly Treatment

GLASGOW (AP) — Jimmy Johnstone, fiery red-haired Glasgow Celtic soccer star, appears beside the figure of Christ in a new stained glass window in a Glasgow Roman Catholic church.

Dom Ninian, the year-old Benedictine monk who designed the window, shows Johnstone in a Celtic group and while horned Hitt with a football at his feet. Christ stands at his side.

"I wanted to show that Christ is interested in all aspects of life, including sport," Dom Ninian said. "I chose Johnstone because I wanted some red in my window and he has red hair.

Spending Cuts Not Answer

SUDBURY (CP) — Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield said Friday night Canada seems to be resorting to deliberate unemployment to fight inflation.

Mr. Stanfield told the Canadian Club of Sudbury that government spending cuts announced last month by Prime Minister Trudeau will not by themselves arrest inflation.

Restraint will be needed throughout the economy, he said, and this restraint must involve prices and incomes policy.

The federal government's new prices and incomes commission may be headed in the direction of an effective "guidelines" policy, the Conservative leader said.

"If it is, I can only urge the commission on, and hope such a policy can be implemented quickly and effectively. Because . . . I fear that to fight inflation, this country is resorting to the deliberate creation of unemployment.

"With the proper combination of restraint and fiscal policy, applied in time, it should not be necessary in this country to resort to lasting some deliberate 'slack' into the economy."

Government austerity and retrenchment is a necessary evil, Mr. Stanfield said.

"It is not a substitute for policy, and not a basis for policy."

Notes for Mr. Stanfield's address were released to the press in advance.

Japan Seeks to Get Okinawa Returned

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — Japanese Foreign Minister Kiichi Aichi announced Friday that the groundwork has been laid for expected final agreement in November on the reversion of Okinawa to Japanese control.

Prime Minister Sato of Japan will hold a summit session with President Nixon at the White House Nov. 19-21, Aichi told a news conference after a three-hour meeting with State Secretary William P. Rogers and other U.S. officials.

The U.S. has maintained control over Okinawa, main island in the Ryukyus, since it wrested the Pacific Ocean chain from Japan in 1945 in the closing days of the Second World War.

The Americans have stored nuclear weapons on Okinawa, built it into a major defence bastion and utilized air bases there for B-52 bomber strikes in Vietnam.

Aichi said Japan is holding to its demands for reversion by 1972, with nuclear arms to be removed by then. Although U.S. bases would remain, Japan wanted prior consultation before American forces were deployed from Okinawa in combat, he added.

Communists Get Chance

Italy Facing Autumn of Labor Strife

ROME (AP) — Growing worker radicalism, wildcat strikes and violence are dragging Italy into an autumn of labor strife. It could undermine the government and damage a flourishing economy.

The threat of major labor disturbances hanging over Premier Mariano Rumor gives the Communist party a chance to consolidate its power. It has grown with every election but one since the Second World War and won 27 per cent of the vote in the last elections.

The Communists have tried in vain for 20 years to win a role in the central government.

Three major unions are seeking new concessions for more than 4,500,000 workers whose contracts are up for renewal.

Some industries have had a hint of what is coming.

When Marzotto, one of Italy's largest textile companies, decided to increase automation, its workers went on strike, rioted and occupied the plant for several weeks.

Wildcat strikes in June and July cost Fiat, the Turin automaker, $80,000,000 in lost production and led to clashes between workers and police.

Scores of small plants from the Alps to Sicily have been made idle by worker takeovers whenever there have been prospects of layoffs or transfers.

"Workers now react with a fighting capacity that was unimaginable until recently," says Pierre Cerrili, 23, national secretary of a metal workers' union.

Unions are having their own troubles. Membership never has been strong in Italy. Of the 140,000 Fiat employees in Turin, only 10 per cent are enrolled in any union.

This, in Cerrili's view, has opened opportunities for small groups of vocal rebels who refuse allegiance to any union and advocate all-out revolt against industry and state.

These groups, variously called Maoists, Chinese, Marcusians and Marxist-Leninists, are a major headache for unions and industrialists alike.

The workers are beset by rising household prices, a shortage of inexpensive housing, social problems caused by massive migration from the backward south to the industrial north, and a chaotic national medical care system. These provide an appealing list of issues.

The Communist party in Italy has adapted to the parliamentary system, the radicals say, making the party an "instrument of direct repression of the workers' independence, an open class enemy."

NOTICE OF PETITION FOR DIVORCE

To:
DAISY M. ROBERTS
and to:
ALL PERSONS that a Petition for a Decree of Divorce has been presented to this Court by the Petitioner. A copy of it is attached to this notice.

AND FURTHER TAKE NOTICE that if you intend to oppose the said Petition or if you wish either relief you must file an Answer in the office of the Local Registrar and deliver proof of service in the office of the solicitor for the Petitioner within the hereinafter stated:

(a) If you are served within Ontario, within 10 days after the service on you of this notice. Or, if you are served outside Ontario, within 20 days after the service on you of the notice. Or, if you are served elsewhere than in Canada or within one hundred miles of the boundaries of the United States adjoining Ontario, within 40 days after the service on you of this Notice, inclusive of the day of such service. Or, if you are in the order of the Court authorizing substituted service, within the time so limited.

AND FURTHER TAKE NOTICE that if you fail to file an Answer or to deliver such Answer within the time limited by this notice, you will not be entitled to any further notice of the proceedings and a decree and other relief may be granted to the Petitioner in your absence.

AND FURTHER TAKE NOTICE that in default of Answer this Petition may be set down for hearing at any time after the expiration of such time from the proceedings as the Court may allow, and you will not be entitled to notice of the hearing unless in the meantime you file an Answer and deliver proof of service thereof on the Petitioner's Solicitor, etc., in the harbor.

It was learned Thursday the Halifax-based Bonaventure is to be retired from service around the end of the year as part of an economy move.

Vancouver Seeking 'Bonnie'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mayor Tom Campbell said Friday he is offering to buy the scrap-bound aircraft carrier Bonaventure for $1.

Mr. Campbell said he has sent a telegram to Defence Minister Leo Cadieux offering to buy the vessel for the city and is offering a nominal $1.

The mayor wired:

"I understand the government is planning to scrap the aircraft carrier Bonaventure. The City of Vancouver would be interested in buying, or leasing, the vessel for a tourist attraction. Floating restaurant, landing strip for small aircraft, hotel, convention facilities, helicopter service, etc., in the harbor."

Rawdon

RAWDON — On Saturday afternoon, Sept. 6 a group of women paid a surprise visit to Mr. and Mrs. Percy MacMillan who have been married 53 years.

THANK YOU . . .
FOR PAYING YOUR CARRIER PROMPTLY

Collections by your Intelligencer carrier are timed to provide you convenient service and best meet his school and study schedules. He may begin collections Thursday and complete his collection on Friday, so that he can pay for his papers on Saturday morning.

Your thoughtfulness in paying him the first time he calls to collect will encourage him in giving you prompt service It will save him extra work for which he would receive no additional profit.

It will give him more time for school and other activities . . .

TRADE SCHOOL

Not Getting Into College
Isn't The End Of The World

In fact, it might be the beginning of your world. A bright new and very rewarding world. The world of computer programming.

Think about it for a minute. Here's a field as big and new and exciting as space exploration. Begging for talented people. And willing to pay them and pay them well.

No, you don't have to go to college to become a computer programmer. You don't have to go to anyone. A school that has the computers and the people who can teach you how to use them.

And that's ECPI. Electronic Computer Programming Institute, an international educational system with more than 100 training centers and literally thousands of successful graduates.

We've got new IBM equipment and a staff that can teach you everything you have to know. And we can teach you during the day, evening — even Saturdays.

If you're over 17 and have a high school graduate or its equivalent take the first step to your new world. Send us the coupon and we'll set up an aptitude test that will tell us — and you — if you've got what it takes. What do you have to lose?

Best Feet in Town

Jimmy Simms, country and western recording artist, will participate in the Belleville Minor Sports walkathon as prelude to a walk from Toronto to Nashville, Tennessee.

Country Singer Agrees to Walk In Local Marathon

The upcoming Minor Sports walkathon on Sept. 20 will have a country music air about it.

Jimmy Simms, the country and western music entertainer that recorded the song, Shoes Keep on Walkin', will be in Belleville to participate in the venture.

Also planning a walk to Nashville, from Toronto, Mr. Simms states he has to keep in good physical condition and has decided to accept any offers of walking that come his way.

First completing a 32-mile hike during Miles for Millions in Toronto, his home town, Mr. Simms later received news of the Belleville walkathon and volunteered his feet for the event.

"Not only that, but Belleville has a special meaning to me," he said. "I've been featured on the Trent Valley Jamboree in Stirling and have come to know personally a lot of the jamboree patrons."

"Many of them are from the Belleville area, so when I heard about this walkathon I decided to see if I could find sponsors and help to raise some money for Minor Sports."

Ken Stapley and Jack McCann, producers of the Trent Valley Jamboree are helping to find sponsors for Mr. Simms.

This Saturday when the Jamboree starts off a brand new season, he will be there in person to help find sponsors.

"We hope to enlist the help of the jamboree audience," Mr. Stapley said.

Along with Mr. Simms, Ben Kerr, the man who wrote Shoes Keep on Walkin' and a former Belleville resident, has also volunteered.

"I hadn't intended to make the walk, but when Jimmy was in Belleville talking to Dick Lovering at CJBQ radio, he mentioned that I'd be on the hike with him." Mr. Kerr explained. "How could I refuse after that?"

And so literally, these "shoes keep on walkin'".

Employment News

By M. J. COLLINS
Manpower Counsellor

The demand for workers has remained strong during the past week. Some tomato pickers are still required in Prince Edward County. Apple picking is rapidly reaching its peak, and with cooler nights now, apples are maturing quickly.

This is the time of year when the sun is bright and warm and outdoor activity can be enjoyed. Many women look forward each year to the enjoyment of working in the apple crop and picking up a little extra money.

The apple harvest season is short and it is imperative that apples be handled quickly and carefully.

Transportation of workers to orchards is always a problem because of the distances involved. Persons wishing to work in the apple harvest should list their names, addresses and phone numbers with the Canada Manpower Centre whether they require transportation or are prepared to ferry other workers. Also, growers requiring help should be prepared to state whether or not they can assist the workers to and from the orchards. This would help alleviate transportation problems.

A considerable amount of local construction is in progress. Again, due to the approach of colder weather, there is an urgency to complete certain phases of preliminary and exterior work. Workers are still required in various construction trades.

Employment opportunities are plentiful, and a growing number of people are seeking training in an effort to improve their position in the labor market.

As the week draws to a close, there are only a very limited number of places still available in the Commercial Refresher Course sponsored by the local Adult Education Centre for those persons with previous training and/or experience in the commercial clerical field. It is not designed to train people with no previous training and/or experience.

Young men who have successfully completed Grades 12 or 13 and are interested in trainee positions with an opportunity for advancement should contact the Canada Manpower Centre.

Following is a list of some of the jobs available for women: Registered nurse for a nursing home, factory work; and various openings in the clerical and service occupations.

Some of the jobs now available for men are: One fourth-class stationary engineer and one competency pump operator or stationary engineer with compressor pump experience, a licensed crane operator, men to work in surveying, preferably with at least Grade 12 education with or without experience. This work frequently involves some inside work. Also there are a number of openings in construction as well as a truck driver helper, clerical and manager trainees.

Anyone interested should contact the Canada Manpower Centre, 334 Church Street, Belleville, or telephone 962-8081.

Five Reporters Released

HONG KONG (Reuters) — Five pro-Peking reporters arrested after disturbances here in 1967 were released today after obtaining the maximum one-third remission of sentence.

Only one of 13 news workers originally jailed—Wong Chak of the newspaper Ta Kung Pao—is still in prison. Observers here expect his release with maximum remission Oct. 6, could lead to the release of Reuters Peking correspondent Anthony Grey.

Grey has been confined to his house since July 21, 1967. The Chinese have cited the imprisonment of the news workers here as the reason for his continued detention.

Rednersville

REDNERSVILLE — The Rednersville Women's Institute meeting with Mrs. Ivan Neal as convener for historical research was held in the Hastings Museum, Belleville. Mrs. Plumpton took the group on tour through Mrs. Simpson's Kitchen and Cuddles Collection of Mr. William A. Paul's Lighting Collection.

The group held its meeting with Mrs. C. Smith in charge. Each member was asked for one dozen cookies for the Fair Friday, Sept. 5. Miss A. Brickman and Mrs. C. McPaul was there to serve from one to three p.m.

Mr. Bell sent a letter and safety tags were passed on. A donation was made to the museum for its kindness in letting the group have the meeting there. The meeting was then closed with Mrs. E. McKay playing the "Queen" on the antique organ. The group gathered at Tobes for lunch.

Consortium Applies to Extract Oil from Athabasca Sands

EDMONTON (CP) — Production of crude oil from the Athabasca oil sands 250 miles north of Edmonton could reach 125,000 barrels a day by 1977 if Syncrude Canada Ltd., is allowed to build a $195,000,000 extraction plant.

The Alberta oil and gas conservation board Friday recommended approval of the application by Syncrude—a consortium of four major oil firms—and a cabinet decision on the recommendation is expected soon.

At present, Great Canadian Oil Sands Ltd., is the only producer taking the so-called "synthetic crude" out of the oil sands.

If the Syncrude application goes through, it will be able to begin production by 1978 and should be putting out 95,000 barrels a day within a year. This, combined with expected GCOS production, could total 125,000 barrels daily.

Great Canadian has authority to produce 45,000 barrels a day, but mechanical difficulties have limited production.

In his report Friday, the board said U.S. crude oil supply deficiencies would be large enough by 1976 to absorb Syncrude production without encroaching on markets served by conventional Alberta crude.

The board said these deficiencies would occur even after recently-discovered Alaskan oil reaches markets on the continental United States.

Syncrude is made up of Atlantic Richfield Co., Imperial Oil Ltd., Cities Service Athabasca Inc., and Royalite Oil Co. Ltd. They have been seeking the approval since 1963. The first application was rejected because the board felt proposed production would displace conventional crude oil in the market.

Conventional crude oil is taken by drilling. At the oil sands, oil-bearing sand is mined and the oil extracted.

Syncrude submitted an amended application in 1968 with a marketing plan compatible with Alberta governmento policy. The board rejected it, citing the uncertainty of the magnitude and development of discoveries in Alaska.

However, Syncrude said it was willing to delay its plant three years and could convince the board its marketing plan for synthetic crude oil would qualify by 1976 or 1977. This would allow for a further increase in U.S. markets and more room for synthetic crude.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For September 14

Your birthday today: The first six months float by comfortably. You have the opportunity to learn new skills. Romantic interests grow. Then in mid-year many phased changes come to about which bring the necessity for applying the new things you have learned. Today's natives are normal in their taste and talents. Many of them are gifted with exceptional foresight.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): This Sunday go amidst your community, its rituals and entertainments. Do your share, make the rounds with cheerful comments, skip nothing that would add to the satisfaction of all.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Your Sunday program should include as little physical exertion as you can arrange. Your own people are the most difficult to please. Include the humoring of them in your schedule.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Aggressive attitudes come easily now, both for yourself and in your response to other people. You will be pleased with the results if you remain untouched by anger. Allow for unsettled conditions at home.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): If you have been putting off some strenuous home chore for an odd moment, do it today. Work with care. Check your home for fire hazards; do something about any that you find.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): A happy day for you. People around you will be making lively conversation. Ask repayment of anything owed to you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Today your emotional ties show strong and clear. Temporary changes around you may bring new social contacts. Make a good impression on your community by appearance, behavior.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Let your feelings show today, and be closer to loved ones. Gather good friends and go for an adventure. Somebody will have a bright idea and much fun follows.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Physical paxtimes may be too much to add to this Sunday of activity. Quietly attend to health. Plan for a long evening of study and meditation.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Your Sunday is fortunate in the way spiritual matters exert a strong influence. There is much good news to share. Enjoy the pleasant atmosphere, but avoid any excesses.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22—Jan. 19): Put yourself out to be your best. Pleasure travel for short distances is promised. Be an active listener; your friends will let fall many unwitting clues to things you may not yet know.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Make sure everybody knows where to find you, as there may be some unexpected arrivals from far places. Friendships develop readily. All types of entertainments and pursuits are favored.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Take the initiative this Sunday. Start early before others have their resistance organized. Ask for help and work at top speed; help as soon as you see the need. An older person shares luck with you.

For September 15

Your birthday today: Opportunity comes before you are ready and is larger than you feel able in tackle. The requisit is to grow up from where you are very quickly. Limitations pile up early, have to be rapidly overcome somehow. Matters you had thought hopeless may suddenly move into high production. Today's natives have a strong fantasian and can tell good stories.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): There is no easy alternate now. It's just a heavy Monday, and you simply must get to work with it. Your self-discipline is now the essential factor.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Your opposite number, knowing full well you are too stubborn to tolerate undue pressure, is apt to find flaws in all you do or say. Pay close attention in your health: get a professional opinion.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Nobody is willing to move as quickly as you today, so have patience. Your work may be delayed by older people or by some hindrance you set up yourself without conscious intent. Think!

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Be positive, take the initiative early, but focus on the easier tasks first. Feel flattered, not concerned, by the talk behind your back.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Take the middle course today, and organize finer elements as far in advance as you can manage. It is so easy now to become bogged down by trifles. Active collaboration is hard to come by. Cheer up your loved ones tonight.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Be serious and active in putting forth your finest efforts and most candid statements about what you want. In retrospect you may identify today as one of the turning points—shown now in fundamental but very subtle ways — of your life.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): The temptation now is to put too much of your strength and thought into your work at too heavy a pace. Leave the initiative to others; avoid the impression of being desperate or ambitous.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): There is no simple way through today other than just being patient. The will to meet others halfway, plus care with details, is important. Relax early this evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): If you are content to proceed slowly and take certain advice with a grain of salt, this is a fairly satisfactory day. Whatever you want you will have to earn, but this should be no surprise.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): You must keep at your regular work using as much diversity as conditions permit. New projects are more inspiring and susceptible to faster progress.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): This slow business day gives you time and space in which your thoughts can wander. Avoid going in worry circles. Plan for a quiet evening of study.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Put in full steady work, but do not give away your earnings. Put something in your savings, however inconvenient it may be at the moment.

Biafran Peace Nearer

OWERRI, Biafra (Reuters) — Prospects of a breakthrough in the search for settlement of the Nigerian civil war seemed brighter today after Biafra indicated willingness to join federal Nigeria in peace talks.

A Biafran government spokesman said Friday his secession-ist country is ready to accept a federal offer of peace talks, and asked the Lagos government to name a friendly country to help arrange a time and place for negotiations.

The spokesman said Biafra is ready to name a friendly state that would act on its behalf to help set up talks aimed at ending the bloody 2½-year-old war.

The Biafran offer came after Nigerian federal leader Maj.-Gen. Yakubu Gowon told reporters Wednesday in Lagos that Biafra is welcome to attend immediate peace talks anywhere with preconditions.

"That is what Biafra has been advocating all along," the Biafran spokesman said in commenting on Gowon's offer.

"Biafra is prepared—as always—to meet Nigeria for negotiations in a mutually accepted venue," he said. "The Biafran delegation to such talks is in readiness to deport at any time."

Meanwhile, a Biafran war communique said the Nigerian Air Force carried out a series of raids on Biafran targets this week, renewing their air offensive after a lull believed to have lasted nearly a month.

NUDE BURGLING

LIMA (AP) — Burgling in the nude is the latest underworld tactic around Trujillo in northern Peru, the newspaper La Prensa reported. It said thieves doff their clothes before breaking into houses and pick them up on the way out. The caper succeeds, the paper said, because watchdogs are so perplexed they don't attack.

Alberta Mounts Hunt For 13 Prison Escapees

CALGARY (CP) — The search for escapees from a 15-man breakout at the Spy Hill provincial jail spread across southern Alberta today as RCMP detachments at seven centres joined in the hunt.

Three of the men were captured within hours of their escape Friday night and a prison guard taken as hostage was released unharmed.

One of the men turned himself into RCMP shortly after he left the prison, a few miles northwest of the city. The other men were captured near Black Diamond, about 40 miles southwest of here.

Roadblocks were thrown up on most routes out of the area as the police tried to cut off the escape of the remaining 13.

Most of the escapees were youths awaiting trial or preliminary hearing.

Two of those sought were Aloysius Hardy Bears, 31, and Donald Yellowfly, 26, both from Gleichen, Alta. The men were awaiting trial on a charge of a non-capital murder following the beating and stabbing death of a Chiny, Alta., farmer, John Durkot, 66, last February.

Police said most of the men were probably unarmed but some are considered dangerous.

The escapees apparently broke into several groups after the break and headed in different directions.

Police said the escapers originally used two cars for transportation but in a short time had managed to obtain others along the way.

Prison officials and police were not immediately able to say how the escape took place but reports indicated the men could have left during a recreation period.

One man escaped running from a roadblock where two of his companions were captured.

It was the largest break ever from the jail which has security ranging from minimum to maximum.

Other persons sought by police were: William Donald Schultz, 24, and John Schimmens, 20, both of Calgary; Dennis Edwind Erickson, 21, of Broadview, Sask.; Harvey Stafford Lake, 20, Kenneth Graham Turner, 16, Douglas Lindsay Elder, 17; Dennis Louis Michaud, 17, and Dennis John Johnson, 22 whose hometowns were not known, Richard Roger Horsefall, 23, Qu'Appelle, Sask., James Allen Shelby, 18, Edmonton.

Names of the captured men were not available.

Federal Bond Bid Offered

OTTAWA (CP) — The government will pay off $50,000,000 worth of outstanding bonds Oct. 1, it was announced Friday.

The government will offer $300,000,000 worth of new bonds to investors Monday and use the money, together with some of the $1 currently for basic balances, to redeem $350,000,000 worth of, 5¼-per-cent bonds which come due Oct. 1.

Another $50,000,000 worth of the old bonds which have been held in the government's own securities investment account since Aug. 15 will be cancelled Monday.

Announcing the moves, Finance Minister Edgar Benson said in a statement that prospects for the government's account are developing favorably. In his June "3" budget speech, he indicated the government would have to borrow another $200,000,000 to $300,000,000 in the year ending next March 31; but this now seems unlikely.

Next week's issue will be one-, two- and five-year bonds. The latter will carry an exchange feature letting investors decide within the next 4½ years whether they wish to convert them into 11-year bonds.

Prices and interest rates will be announced Monday.

The Bank of Canada will take at least $115,000,000,000 of the new bonds and the remaining $185,000,000 will be available to investors through investment dealers and banks.

The Bank of Canada reported Thursday that government balances totalled $714,000,000 Sept. 10, or $310,000,000 more than the government's cash balances a year ago.

Mr. Benson said the government may need to borrow funds for a short period early in November, when its cash reaches a seasonal low point before money starts coming in from the annual sale of Canada Savings Bonds.

But the government hoped to end the fiscal year next March with little or no net borrowings for the year as a whole.

Won't Guarantee Immunity

BELFAST (CP) — Leaders of the "Free Belfast" Roman Catholic area today demanded a written guarantee of immunity from arrest before bringing their barricades down.

A communique from the Central Citizens Defence Committee, which runs the barricaded streets, said this demand was put to the British Army during talks Sunday.

The army's immediate reaction was: "We can give no guarantees."

The army, even though in charge of security, explained that administration of the Special Powers Act, which gives the government the power of internment, rested with the ministry of home affairs. Robert Porter, home affairs minister, gave assurance last week that he had no intention of ordering the arrest of barricade leaders unless they had broken the criminal law.

But the immediate effect of this morning's demand was to throw into further confusion the army's efforts to get the barricades down by persuasion just as pressure is growing in the governing Unionist party for them to be pulled down by force.

The communique was issued after a meeting of delegates claiming to represent 70,000 persons in barricaded Roman Catholic areas. It said: "The delegates made known that overwhelming majority of people want the barricades to stay until precise agreement is reached on adequate military protection between local army commanders and the respective citizens defence committees."

Six days ago Prime Minister James Chichester-Clark told the country that the barricades were "strangling the whole community," and must come down.

Quiet Convention Will Name New Que. Liberal Chief

QUEBEC (CP) — A "quiet" leadership convention will be held here Jan. 16-17 to choose a successor to Jean Lesage, whose resignation as leader of the Quebec Liberal party was accepted Sunday.

The convention date and site were decided at a special meeting of the 350-member general council which governs the party and which formally accepted Mr. Lesage's Aug. 28 resignation.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Southern and central Ontario should have another warm day today. Near the lower Lakes skies will be sunny but around the upper lakes there will be considerable cloudiness. Much cooler air has moved into far northern and northwestern Ontario and will edge its way southeastward across the province through the next two days. Southern Ontario can expect some shower activity Tuesday but should remain in the warm air most of the day.

THE TEMPERATURES

	Max.	Min.
Today	72	61
Year Ago	74	57

Mr. Lesage told a news conference following the closed-door meeting that the convention would not have a "circus" atmosphere.

"There will be no fanfare, no majorettes, no noise like at the leadership carnival held by the Union Nationale last June," he said.

Mr. Lesage, Liberal leader since 1958 and Quebec premier from 1960 to 1966, said the province is "in a period of austerity" and the convention should reflect this.

The convention had been organized so that only one night would be at the disposal of delegates prior to the vote Saturday, Jan. 17.

None of the Liberal members of the national assembly has announced his candidacy.

However, Mr. Lesage took it for granted that among those running would be Pierre Laporte, former municipal affairs minister; Claude Wagner, former justice minister; and Robert Bourassa, Opposition financial critic.

When he announced his resignation, Mr. Lesage gave as his reason a lack of unanimity in the party on the subject of his leadership.

Highlights

OTTAWA (CP)—Highlights of the sixth annual review of the Economic Council of Canada, made public today.

Canadian economy has potential for astonishing growth during the next five years.

Average standard of living can rise by 35 per cent by 1975.

Further restraint policies by Bank of Canada and federal government could be "seriously misdirected."

Rapid growth will create new problems, bringing up an urgent need for attention to developing economic priorities.

Cost and price increases have been unacceptable — less than two per cent a year should be the goal.

A major housing crisis could develop in cities quickly.

Housing industry is beset by "archaic attitudes" which hamper development of needed efficiencies.

No improvements are in prospect for agricultural export.

Recent unemployment rate of four or five per cent is too high to be tolerated.

Exports can raise by 10.2 per cent a year, imports by 10.3 per cent.

Gross National Product can rise in constant dollars to $100,000,000,000 in 1975, compared with $66,000,000,000 in 1967.

Government spending in 1975 will be $43,000,000,000 or 27 per cent of the gross national product, a larger share than in 1968.

News Briefs

JERSEY CITY, N.J. (AP) — A seven-year-old girl has become the second child in a family to die after she was attacked with an axe that police said was wielded by a brother. A third child was critically wounded. Michael Mitchell, 17, was arrested at the family's home, a five-room apartment where police said the attacks occurred. Donna Mitchell died Sunday night. Her brother Daniel Jr. died early Saturday after the attack. Another sister, Diane, 14, remains in critical condition at hospital. Police said the children's parents were asleep in another room when the attack began.

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — A retired airline pilot from Seattle has received the heart of an Oakland, Calif., gunshot victim in the 18th heart transplant at Stanford University Hospital. The recipient was Herman Joslyn, 64, who came to Stanford three weeks ago with a badly deteriorated heart to await a donor. His condition after the 4½-hour operation Sunday was called satisfactory.

SAO PAULO (AP) — A Brazilian airliner crashed in southern Brazil Sunday, killing 13 persons. Authorities said there was only one survivor, the pilot, who was badly injured. All aboard were believed to have been Brazilians. The DC-3 was operated by Compania Aviacion Aerea Sao Paulo. It was enroute from Landrina to Sao Paulo when it developed mechanical trouble and the pilot decided to turn back. Authorities said the plane crashed and burned before it reached Landrina.

Resuming Mid-East Peace Talks

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — New talks in search of Arab-Israeli peace are expected to begin in New York by the end of this week.

Officials involved in previous talks on the subject are gathering for the 24th session of the UN General Assembly, opening Tuesday.

Bone Find Sparks Hunt for Nessie

INVERNESS, Scotland (AP) — Scientists searching for Nessie, the elusive Loch Ness monster, were enticed today by a report that two British businessmen had found a monster-sized bone — four feet two inches long — on the edge of the loch.

The businessmen, who were keeping their names and where the bone was hidden a secret, said they would reveal their find in the Loch Ness Phenomena Investigation Bureau.

As the bureau's teams of scientists prepared to start bombarding the 700-foot deep loch with the electronic sonar to drive the monster, if there is one, into radar range, they were told that the bone had been found during a fishing expedition last May.

The businessmen told the London Daily Mail, which is involved in the monster hunt, that they had shown their find to a museum official who confirmed it was genuine bone.

Monster-minded scientists for years have hoped to find a bone and bureau technician Clem Skelton said: "A positive identification would be one of the greatest natural history discoveries of the last 1,000 years."

The bureau said if the bone is produced and it looks promising, it would be flown to Chicago for a biochemical examination.

40,000 More U.S. Troops Withdrawing

SAIGON (AP) — Vice-president Nguyen Cao Ky said tonight that another 40,000 American troops will be withdrawn from Vietnam between now and November.

Ky made the announcement through an aide shortly after an emergency meeting of the South Vietnamese National Security Council.

Protesting Policemen Suspended

BRANTFORD, Ont. (CP) — Constable Ronald Stockdale, 36, has been suspended from duties and charged under the Ontario Police Act for having a letter published in The Expositor criticizing the Brantford police commission.

Constable Stockdale, a 13-year veteran with the Brantford force, criticized the commission for not permitting him to see the full report of a Ontario police commission investigation into the city's police department.

Following the OPC's investigation Feb. 17 to April 23, the Brantford commission issued an abbreviated version of the findings.

Constable Stockdale said the Brantford commission's version was a "whitewash."

But... Resources Not Unlimited

By KEN SMITH
Canadian Press Business Editor

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian economy has the potential for astonishing growth during the next five years, promising a richer life for everyone, the Economic Council of Canada says.

But it warns in its sixth annual review made public today that the country's resources are not unlimited, and Canada will need foresight and intelligent planning in both the private and public sector to steer the economy to this growth.

These elements, it suggests, have not always been present in economic programs in past years.

The review pinpoints rising prices, housing, unemployment and poverty as areas of special concern during the next few years.

It puts the council in the position of at least wondering whether the restrictive fiscal and monetary policies now being followed by the Bank of Canada and the federal government are too tight for the health of the medium-term economic outlook.

The central bank and the government have for months been on a course of restraint to try to dampen expansion as part of their anti-inflationary fight.

The council says, however, that further restraint policies in Canada will make themselves felt mainly in 1970.

If the United States brings its excess demand under some control late this year, such Canadian policies could be "seriously mistimed" and push the economy into a poor performance.

But if the economy can live up to its potential, the council sees a real boom ahead.

The average standard of living of Canadians would jump by 35 per cent in the eight-year period from 1967 to 1975, or as much as it did in the previous 13 years.

Consumer spending in 1975 would average more than $2,500 for every man, woman and child in constant 1967 dollars.

The average in 1967 was $1,910.

The growth rate from actual output in 1967 to 1975's potential would be 5.5 per cent a year, compared with 5.1 per cent in the 1960-1967 period.

Gross national product, the total value of all goods and services produced in the country, would rise to $100,000,000,000 in 1967 dollars from $66,000,000,000 in 1967.

A price-increase factor of only two per cent a year would raise the 1975 level to $120,000,000,000.

Government spending would almost double—but rising revenues would mean existing commitments could be met without higher taxes.

The review warns, however, that such rapid over-all growth won't come without problems. With rising expectations of a better life private and public officials would be hard pressed to assign proper priorities to using available economic resources.

There was an urgent need for a new and clearer consensus about Canada's national goals.

"All too frequently in the past, priorities have been identified and objectives established in isolation, on an ad hoc basis and without reference to any over-all framework of goals and objectives. . . ."

The council says it has no illusions about the difficulties in

Attended Debutantes' Ball

Lovely girls had the spotlight all to themselves Saturday night at the festive Debutantes' Ball at CFB Trenton. The event was sponsored by Trenton Kiwanis Club, with proceeds going to the IODE memorial fund. The ball was held at the AMDU recreation hall and among those attending were Rhonda Jones and RMC Officer Cadet Lee Webber (story and picture on page 5).

A Wave for the Engineer

Largest family group to be transported on the CN's steam train trips to Anson Junction this weekend was that of Mrs. Fred Thompson of Belleville. Mrs. Thompson and her 13 children, aged from four to 20, travelled courtesy of the railway company. But before they took off, they gave a salute to the engineer, Norman Meidrum of Belleville.

Lots of Appeal

Train Ride Bonanza for Children

By BARRY GRILLS
Staff Reporter

The series of steam locomotive train trips held Saturday and Sunday turned out to be more than a success, but — in the words of one passenger — a real "happening".

"We were sold out," said Frank Bocker, a CNR employee, who has been working with Kenneth Fleming, public relations officer for the United Appeal Campaign.

He said that altogether 6,000 people had taken advantage of the opportunity to ride on the famous train before it is forced into retirement.

And passengers on board the train were treated to a journey into the past and a bit of bedlam on board.

There were eight trips from Belleville to Anson Junction, near Stirling, four on Saturday and four on Sunday which meant an average load of 800 persons on each trip.

Most of the passengers were children and the result was excitement and chaos.

The route from Belleville to Anson Junction caused the train to pass through Corbyville, Foxboro and Madoc Junction and the curves of the track provided travellers with an opportunity to see the train on which they were travelling as it smoked its way along the track.

Children thrilled to sights and sounds that were historically too old for them to see in this modern era of the diesel train and the turbo train.

Once more the historic odor and sounds of the steam locomotive pervaded the railroad tracks.

And all along the route from Belleville to Anson, people lined along the tracks, stuck as well by the historic significance, and waved to the travellers on board.

And not all the would-be train riders were able to obtain tickets as both days of the journey were sold out.

"The United Appeal will do quite well out of this," Mr. Bocker said.

The United Appeal's first pre-campaign activity has produced optimism among its officials concerning some of their other events scheduled for this week.

Other activities slated for this week include a fiddlers' contest at Ewick's Island Thursday night and a beauty contest and parade on Thursday night, the contest also at Ewick's Island.

Today Belleville residents will be invaded by hundreds of colored discs — not an invasion from another planet, but a contest also sponsored by the United Appeal.

Hullvue Herefords Dispersed

PICTON — Hullvue Farm's dispersal sale now 240 head of Hereford cattle belonging to Prince Edward County hockey star Bobby Hull auctioned in the ring at Sawyerville, Quebec, last Saturday.

Auctioneer was Arthur Bennet. Buyers bidding at the sale came from as far away as New Brunswick, New York State and Pennsylvania. Average sale price was $777 a head, while the record high for a single animal was $3,200. This was the selling price of an outstanding bull from the Hullvue herd.

A second bull sold for $2,700 while a calf with top blood lines was auctioned at $2,500.

One of Bobby Hull's fellow breeders remarked "it was a very good sale, with females going really strong from the start."

Females in the herd sold at prices as high as $1,800. It was noted that not many bull buyers were in attendence. A crowd of more than 1,200 buyers and spectators jammed the tent when the sale began at 10:30 a.m. and filled the grounds outside.

An overall comment on the sale by a close friend was: "It was a successful sale, with prices holding up well, despite the fact not too many bull buyers attended."

Mrs. Angus Le Heup at Park Dedication

Picton Renames Park

PICTON — On Saturday afternoon youngsters paraded from Benson Park to the Delhi Athletic Field for a dedication ceremony honoring Picton's late town foreman, Angus Le Heup.

Actively interested in young people for many years, Mr. Le Heup contributed his efforts toward making the Delhi park a play centre for children. At his death, town council suggested that the park be renamed in his memory.

At Saturday's dedication of the Angus Le Heup Delhi Athletic Field, members of the Le Heup family, several town councillors, Mayor H. J. McFarland and County Warden George Foster were present.

Addressing the children and adults assembled in the park Mayor McFarland referred to the late Mr. LeHeup as "a valuable citizen who always did his best, giving of his time when it was needed to help the townspeople, always in a generous spirit."

A plaque officially dedicating the park to Mr. Le Heup's memory was unveiled by his wife Muriel Le Heup and his grandson, David Haney. A ribbon stretching across the park entrance was then cut by Jack Le Heup, brother of the late town foreman, completing the dedication ceremony.

Rev. Robert Stuart of The Church of St. Mary Magdalene officiated during the service.

Following the dedication refreshments were served to all children present. Musical entertainment was supplied by Creighton Lockyer and the Picton Junior Band.

Funeral

MRS. AGNES GRAY

Funeral service was held from the John R. Bush Funeral Chapel on Saturday for Mrs. Agnes Donnachie Gray of 238 Foster Ave., Belleville.

Interment was in the Belleville Cemetery, and officiating was Rev. A. L. Sutherland.

Bearers were Larry Gray, Kenneth Gray, Andrew Gray, James Gray, Stan Whitmarsh and Dan Hogan.

PROCLAMATION

WHEREAS The United Community Fund of Belleville and District is an appeal to support services needed by the community at this time;

WHEREAS The United Community Fund controls programs and services provided by voluntary contributions to ensure accountability to the public for monies expended;

WHEREAS fourteen bona-fide health, welfare and leisure-time organizations comprise the United Fund in Belleville and District;

NOW THEREFORE The Council of the Corporation of the City of Belleville declares the week commencing September 22nd, 1969, United Community Fund Week. The Council calls upon every citizen to support to the best of his ability the services made possible when he invests in his community the "united way".

Two Men in A Tub

A capital ship for an ocean trip? Alunar module? Only a youngster's imagination could provide the answer, but the abandoned bathtub resting on the doorstep of a row house at the corner of Church and East Bridge streets for the weekend sent Johnny Cunningham and Raymond Majeau off on adventures of their own devising. The property owned by Harry Smith Fuels, is under the wrecker's hammer and the lot will be used for truck and farm equipment storage.

Bank Ruse Tried Here On Friday

Police have issued warnings once more concerning "the bank inspector racket", which is believed now to have been attempted in the Belleville area.

City police chief Douglas Crosbie, said this morning that a senior citizen here had been called over the weekend and had been asked to help trap a dishonest bank employee.

The woman identified by police, refused to co-operate with the man and subsequent investigation by police proved once again the request to be phoney.

This type of crime has been observed in many centres in Ontario.

A man will call an elderly person with a bank account and ask that he or shesassist him in trapping a dishonest bank employee by withdrawing her money and giving it to a bank inspector.

The "inspector" then runs off with the money.

However, in Belleville the ruse has so far failed due to publicity given to the racket.

BIRTHS

BENTEAU — Bernard and Donna (Cartwright) are happy to announce the birth of their son, Kevin Mark, born September 11, 1969 at Ottawa Civic Hospital. A brother for Steven.

TURNER — Rodney and Mary Jean (Elvidge) of Dundas St., Kingston, wish to announce the safe arrival of their son on Friday, Sept. 12th, 1969 at Kingston General Hospital, a brother for Jeffrey Lee. First grandchild for Mr. and Mrs. Leon Turner and a grandson for Mrs. Harry Elvidge.

IN MEMORIAM

EMPEY — In loving memory of a dear wife and mother, Eliza Pearl Empey, who passed away Sept. 12, 1956.
The memory fades and life drifts by,
The love forever in our hearts lies.
—Sadly missed and always remembered by husband, daughters, sons and families.

EMPEY — In loving memory of a dear mother, Eliza Pearl Empey, passed away Sept. 15, 1956.
It seems so strange that those we
And those we love the best
Are just the ones we have to say,
And when them home to rest.
Each time we see Mum's picture,
It seems so calm and say,
Well cry I'm only sleeping,
I'll be home with you some day.
—Lovingly remembered and missed by Pearl.

CARDS OF THANKS

We wish to extend our heartfelt thanks and appreciation to the nurses for the many acts of kindness shown to our late Mrs. Ethel Allen Fellow recently while in Belleville General Hospital. A very special thanks to Dr. Brien Cook for his attentiveness; also many thanks to the Peter Smith and W. W. Baker staffs.

Walkathon Needs Sponsors to Sign 6,000 Pledge Cards

A call for more participation by youthful walkers and for sponsors to assure financial success went out today for Saturday's round the bay walkathon to raise money for a new Quinte Action (Recreational) Centre.

"The action centre will be primarily for use by young people and we would like to see as great a participation as possible," said Dick Hurst, chairman of the action centre committee.

Mr. Hurst noted that thousands of pledge cards for the walkathon had been picked up, but unless the walkers obtain sponsors and later collected pledge money, the whole purpose of the walkathon was lost.

Mr. Hurst said that lots of children were willing to walk but many did not realize that it was up to them to obtain their own sponsors.

Funds for the walkathon will be earmarked to help pay the construction costs for a new skating rink and recreation centre which would have year round use.

Pledge cards for the walkathon to get under way from the Belleville Arena at 7.30 Saturday morning are available at all elementary and secondary schools in the city as well as a long list of business and other places.

In addition to all city schools, walkathon pledge cards may be picked up at the YMCA -YMO headquarters on Dundas Street, the recreation centre, Thomas Cigar Store, Booth's Radio and TV, Joe Burke's Men's Wear at the Plaza and at the Stephen Licence store on Front Street.

Registration for the walkathon will commence at 7.00 a.m. Saturday at the arena.

Belleville Mayor, J. Russell Scott, will officially start the walkathon off while a band will lead the walkers out of the city.

This year's 22-mile round the bay walkathon is to be done in reverse of previous walks.

The route will be west along No. 3 highway to Trenton, south on highway 33 to Carrying Place and back to Belleville by the Redoreville Road.

Safety of Walkers Requires Tight Control

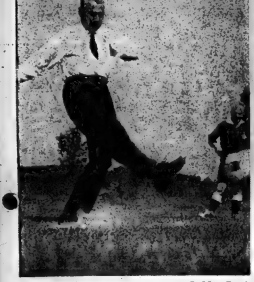
The safety of the walkers involved will be of prime consideration in Saturday's round the bay walkathon to raise money for the proposed new Quinte Action Centre.

This was assured today by Emergency Measures Co-Ordinator Angus Duffy who has volunteered to act as "safety officer" for the event.

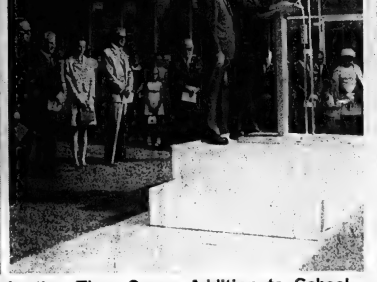
"Every precaution will be taken for the safety and comfort of the walkers," said Mr. Duffy.

Four Ontario Provincial Police cars will patrol the walkathon route while in addition there will be five radio-equipped "official" cars, each with a trained St. John Ambulance first aid worker. Also the EMO rescue truck will be continuously along the route for emergency use.

Other vehicles clearly marked "Official Car" will be in readiness to pick up tired walkers who have decided to call it a day before completion of the walk.



Mr. Duffy said that this year's reverse order route would add to the safety of the walkers, in that fewer highway crossings will be necessary.



All walkers will be warned to walk on the left shoulder of the highway facing traffic. This will apply except in Belleville and Trenton where walkers will keep to the sidewalks.

Fifty signs reading "caution, walkers" will be erected along the walkathon route.

Drinking water will be available at each official car while "comfort stations" have been arranged for along the route.

"We are already having good response, but more walkers and sponsors are needed," concluded the walkathon safety officer.

Tom Bata Kicks Off Celebration Then Opens Addition to School

Competitors on Run

Model Show Busy Spot

The idle runways at Mountain View Airport were busy again Sunday, as the Montreal Flying Club held its 14th annual eastern Canadian open model airplane contest.

About 40 contestants entered the events for the balsa wood and tissue miniature aircraft, launched and guided by their "pilots" on the ground.

The contestants, who made the models they fly, covered more distance on the ground than their planes did in the air, as they ran to launch them and chase stays that landed at far away points on the airfield's perimeter. Prudent contestants brought bicycles with them to cover the long laps across the tarmac.

Four classes were open for competition — powered planes with motors under .14 cubic inches in capacity, power over .14, rubber-powered craft, and gliders.

The last type were launched at the end of a 164-foot tow line after their operators sprinted down the runways after the fashion of an old-fashioned kite flier.

Object of the operators was to keep their aircraft in flight for three minutes. Fuses on the tail assemblies tripped a mechanism that brought the frail planes to earth if they seemed inclined to continue soaring after the three-minute limit.

The gas and rubber powered craft were launched for three flights, the gliders for five flights.

The day-long event was a family outing for most contestants, who brought their wives, children, and dogs with them.

The contest attracted many father and son combinations, with the youngsters entering models they made themselves in a special junior division.

Future Depends on Applied Skills

By ELMER BONTER
Staff Correspondent

BATAWA — The founder of the substantial industrial complex here believes company workers must achieve excellence in production for the community to continue to grow in the future.

Thomas J. Bata speaking at the 30th anniversary of Canadian operation of the world-wide shoe making and engineering concern stressed the success and expansion hoped to be gained depended on the imagination of company personnel and their ability to apply skills resulting from education. "All of us must make our work come closed to perfection", he pointed out.

Mr. Bata delivered his anniversary message while officiating at the opening ceremony of the new wing of Sacred Heart School.

Present for the occasion was Archbishop J. L. Wilhelm of Kingston.

The ribbon cutting ceremony was performed by Mrs. Bata.

The key to the addition was presented to Sister Mary Agnes Clare by the builder Frank Miron of Trenton.

Mr. Bata was introduced by vice president and managing director Lee Kirsewicz acting in the absence of W. W. Ferry, Q.C. company legal adviser of Toronto who was one of the first Canadians to join the Bata industrial family.

"It is fitting the focal point of the celebration is on the dedication of a school enlargement. But remember education does not stop at expanded schools," Mr. Bata commented.

Mr. Bata delved into the history of company's enterprise in the Quinte area which began three decades ago. He recalled the first group he brought with him from Europe to start work on the 1,500 acre site on the Trent River south of Frankford. Thirty shoemakers and engineers were included.

Today more than 1,000 work for the concern on the location here. A number of them have built homes in a continuation of the original village erected west of the plant site.

To mark the anniversary, the company invited families from a 50 mile radius. The visitors throughout the afternoon were provided a variety of entertainment — from band music by the Trenton Citizens' Band, two fashion shows a soccer match and tug-of-war demonstration with the engineers winning handily from the shoemakers.

There was a number of rides made available for the children, while their parents enjoyed the ice cream and hot dogs from the booths in the carnival area beside the recreation hall.

All levels of government were represented on the occasion.

Horses and Cars Just Don't Mix

Horses and automobiles don't mix.

When they do, the results can be unfortunate — and costly.

Weekend mishaps in the Quinte district left two horses dead and caused $1,600 in estimated property damage.

On Highway 2 at Bayside Sunday night, provincial police say $1,000 damage was caused to a car driven by Wayne Robert Denike, 32, of 133 Chatham Street, Belleville, in a beaten collision with a horse running on the highway.

A second automobile — driven by James Howard Harvey, 26, of Canadian Forces Base, Trenton — reserved to avoid the veering Denike vehicle and also hit the horse, thrown in the air by the impact. Damage to the Harvey car was $200, say police.

The horse, an Arabian mare, valued at $400, was owned by Richard Kenneth Hisser, Mobile Ville, RR 2, Trenton.

Saturday, a half-ton truck driven by Donald Brownson, 18, Estevan, Sask., collided with a horse on Marmora Township road north of Marmora. Damage to the truck was $200. The horse, owned by George White RR 2 Marmora, was valued at $200.

Waste Space

At a time when farmers like everyone else are fighting the high cost of living, a word from a visitor on Canada's "bigness" and the use we make of that bounty is timely.

The advice is from Mary Vincent, 19-year-old Dairy Queen of England and Wales. During a visit to Cornwall she said: "Everything here is huge. Even the Holsteins I have seen appear to be several inches taller . . ."

But according to the young Norfolk woman we could make much better use of our wide open spaces.

"There is much wasted space," she said. "In Europe the land is more closely controlled and better use is made of all arable ground."

We hear of small uneconomic farm units joining together to counteract this, but before taking such a step perhaps there is room for even the small farmer to get more out of his land.

It may be that with such great tracts as exist in Canada farmers tend to overlook areas that could be made fertile. Certainly in poor regions of Europe the farmer wastes nothing. Every scrap of land is put to use.

Think Positive

Sydney J. Harris expounds some interesting truths in his column elsewhere in today's issue. He recalls a recent piece for example on what he terms The Law of Diminishing Proximity which has to do essentially with leaving things — or people — alone on the premise they can function quite well by themselves, or if ailing will recover in like fashion.

Says Harris: " . . . the whole art of living, I am convinced, consists in learning how to interfere as little as possible with the life force."

It is a good point, whether it applies to things mechanical or to people. Both machines and people — particularly the female of the species — can be eminently fickle. Some machines will burst into life with a sharp tap, others will respond if left to their own recuperative devices.

With people, particularly one's kin, the former ploy involving physical contact might be used with discretion (particularly with the young in these days of sparing the rod and spoiling the child), while leaving people completely alone can lead to breakdown of communication. The road to the divorce courts is paved with such breakdowns.

Where physical ailments are concerned though there are numerous aches and pains, real or imaginary, which will go away if left alone, or if the sufferer engages his mind and talents on something else. In primitive societies one of the tactics of the witch doctor is to establish a counter influence to pain. With modern man, provided he is not so seriously afflicted he really needs medical attention, similar measures can be effective. Read a book, mow the lawn, anything that will help nature take its course.

Medical men would not be as seriously burdened as they are if a lot of people took columnist Harris' advice. And it takes is an optimistic and positive outlook on life. And perhaps a reading of books by someone like Sir Francis Chichester who has survived many physical ills including cancer, and accomplished more than most during an adventurous life.

Charter Flights

The old axiom about getting what you pay for has particular application for those who make charter flights.

A report from Montreal the other day mentioned that between 30 and 50 Canadians, members of a charter flight group scheduled to return to Canada recently were stranded in Brussels after the third return flight promised them did not appear.

Reasons advanced for the delays included engine trouble in the case of one aircraft and failure of the charter group to make initial payments for the trip as required by government regulations.

Charter flights are often plagued by erratic schedules, particularly in the case of lesser-known air companies flying ancient machines on a sort of shoe-and-a-prayer basis. The stranded Canadians seem to have got themselves into this kind of situation with London (UK) and Miami-based companies. However, since there is some question of initial payments not being met, the travelers themselves seem partly to blame.

The main lesson for would-be charter travellers is that the better-known companies are in this business too. They have the latest aircraft and their flights are more likely to be on time. Whatever the company and type of aircraft, however, travellers should make absolutely certain of contracts, finances and schedules. It is better to be sure than sorry.

Up-to-Date on Arctic, Defence, Coast Guard

Those 'Junkets' Do Give MPs A First-Hand Look

By GERARD McNEIL

OTTAWA (CP) — More and more MPs are getting on-the-spot information through travel with Parliament's gung-ho committees.

Last week, for example, the northern development committee flew to the Arctic to get a first-hand look at the U.S. ore-per-tanker Manhattan as it moved through the Northwest Passage.

Slinging aside diplomatic equivocation about ownership of the channels between the Islands, Ian Watson, 35, (L—Lapraire) the committee chairman, pointedly welcomed the Manhattan "to Canadian waters."

After talking to northerners and dining aboard the Manhattan, the committee returned to Ottawa convinced that Canada must declare its sovereignty not only over the Arctic islands but the icy lanes between them.

Committees normally don't sit during a parliamentary recess but this year, before the session resumes Wednesday, Oct. 22, at least 10 of the 18 standing committees will have been working hard.

While the travels look like junkets, they give MPs whose only previous source was a minister or an official a chance to discuss problems with those affected and form a viewpoint based on personal experience.

"We were given more detailed and classified information than ever before," said Harold Winch, (NDP—Vancouver East) during a tour of Maritime Command installations with the defence committee this week.

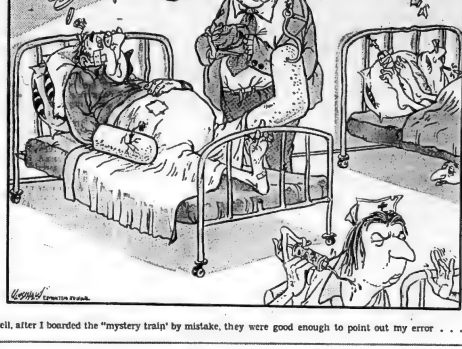
"It was a good tour, no doubt about it."

Committee Chairman Perry Ryan (L—Toronto Spadina) said he found the crew of the coast guard vessel Louis St. Laurent upset about wages, benefits and living conditions aboard ship.

He promised investigation when the committee returns to Ottawa. This means the defence committee probably will question officials and try to change conditions when the coast guard estimates come before it.

The transport committee currently is visiting Quebec's North Shore and the iron mining areas of Ungava and Labrador.

Early next month, the resources and public works committee will visit places such as Melville Island, in the Arctic oil exploration site, to see how tax money is being spent, or how it could be spent.



Also in October, the privileges and elections committee will tour Canada to study provincial electoral systems; the fisheries committee will look at polluted rivers and lakes; and the agriculture committee may go to northern Quebec.

In Ottawa, the committee on statutory instruments next week writes a report on delegation of authority through statute.

The finance committee resumes its inquiry into interest rates later this month.

And the veterans affairs committee resumes its pre-legislation study of the needs of war veterans.

A special Senate committee is in Europe studying the science policy of other countries. Two other special Senate committees — on the mass media, poverty, and the role of the Senate—have not been meeting during the recess.

"Well, after I boarded the "mystery train" by mistake, they were good enough to point out my error . . . ."

Margaret Campbell Tries For Mayor in Toronto

Kitchener-Waterloo Record

It is quite possible that the under-represented half of the population of Toronto, the female half, will not have quite so much to protest about after the next civic elections.

With the announcement that Controller Margaret Campbell will contest the mayoralty it is possible that this appealing and practical politician will do something to help right the balance.

At least the potential line-up in the mayoralty race at this time suggests she has a good chance. Mayor William Dennison and former controller William Archer may be her only opponents, and it was the lady who got the most votes in the last election, topping even the successful mayoralty candidate.

She is a serious politician who projects a more progressive image than Mayor Dennison while still not missing many tricks on the practical side. The suggestion is that she would make a good woman mayor, and as Toronto's first woman mayor she would add something to that city's usually stodgy municipal scene.

As to that under-represented half of the population, it is at present less well-represented on several levels than it has been for some time. Federally, for instance, Grace MacInnis remains the only woman MP, after a time in which the female representation seemed definitely on the increase both in numbers and cabinet potential.

Who knows but what an attractive and effective woman mayor in the province's Queen City would give new impetus to the many across the country who are just waiting for further inspiration?

TODAY IN HISTORY

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A corps of almost 400 volunteers—the first Canadian contingent to take part in an Imperial war overseas—left Canada 63 years ago today —in 1884—to aid in the relief of Khartoum in the African Sudan. British Gen. Charles George Gordon had been ordered to evacuate Egyptian garrisons besieged by the rebelling Mahdist Dervishes, but his forces in turn had been surrounded.

1917—Russia was proclaimed a republic.

1938—Maj.-Gen. Georges P. Vanier was sworn in as Canada's 18th governor-general.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1944—Luxembourg fell to the Allies; it was announced Gen. Dwight Eisenhower was in command of all Allied forces in Western Europe; the Germans attempted an invasion of Hogland in Finland and were repulsed, an incident regarded in Helsinki as meaning a state of war existed between Finland and Germany.

The Case for Maritime Union

Kitchener Waterloo Record

When Robert Coates, the Conservative MP from the Nova Scotia riding of Cumberl a n d-Colchester North, appeared before the Maritime Union Study he ran true to form.

An MP who can be counted on to oppose almost any proposal with a degree of the unorthodox, he does not view the study with much enthusiasm.

It would have been more logical, he said, to have set up a study of separation from Canada or union with the United States than the study of the possibilities in the union of Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick now under way.

Since Mr. Coates is a man of unquestioned loyalty to the past, his seeming advocacy of union with the United States must be taken with a grain of salt. Rather it is his way of dramatizing his position. Many of the problems, which is the simplistic one of blaming everything on Ottawa and downgrading the potential benefits of union.

Blaming Ottawa has been a habit which the Maritimes have had since Confederation, a nd here Mr. Coates merely sounds like a broken record. But he does make one good point when he warns against expecting union to solve all the area's problems.

It is true that results would not immediately justify union, except in the realm of government service and duplication.

If Canada is the most o v e r governed-country in the world, the Maritimes are certainly the most over-governed section with, for example, a provincial legislature for the 125,000 people in Prince Edward Island.

So, once the shock of change is passed, and re-organization of legislatures and government departments completed, t h e r e should be a noticeable reduction in the burden of government overhead.

As to the more basic Maritime problems, Mr. Coates is at least partly right, in that they cannot be solved by action in the provinces, or a new all-inclusive province alone, but are dependent on national and international conditions and policies as well as local.

To phose from other areas, however, the governmental burden seems to cry for rationalization, which must first of all involve a willingness to face the problem of maintaining three legislatures where one would seem to be enough.

Cars Come Full Circle

Windsor Star

Don't be frightened, little girl. That shiny network of chrome at the front of the car won't bite you. It's only the latest thing in automotive design, called the radiator shell. It lets the air in to cool the radiator to cool the engine, so it's both pretty and utilitarian. It tells the neighbors that you've bought a new car, unless you already have the kind of car that had a radiator shell last year or the year before.

It's like all those other grand new developments for cars, lit the girl. The radiator shell, th rumble seat, the thin line paint job, the four-on-the-floor, the wire wheels and the outboard spare tire.

Daddy isn't frightened of them, little girl. Daddy knows all about them. D a d d y was around 35 years ago when all cars had them, before they were set aside for breathless rediscovery 35 years later.

If the designers of Detroit were Canadians and bilingual like you and Daddy, little girl, they'd understand when we say the more things change the more it's the same damn thing.

Provincial Police Mark 60 Years of Service

Ottawa Journal

Set up by Order-in-Council on Oct. 13, 1909, the Ontario Provincial Police has come a long way in 60 years. The original 45-man force grew to 165 by 1925, just under 400 during the Second World War, and 1,286 by 1953. This year some 4,550 uniformed and civilian personnel work in and for a host of special investigative and protective branches in 17 geographic districts of the province.

A colorful booklet, outlining the OPP's background and present work, has been produced to commemorate the force's 60th anniversary. In the foreword, OPP Commissioner Eric S i l k says:

"In the past 60 years the very nature of the policeman, his training and his task, have altered substantially. Instruction must be updated frequently in such matters as the state of law as it applies to police, and current police matters. The criminal is no longer an amateur; the policeman must be his equal whatever his specialty may be. With the scientific developments which are available to the policeman and the criminal alike, all policemen must work together: all forces as one. Efficient intelligence is essential; accurate liaison indispensable."

Total Use of Schools and All That

What's A Few Thousand Dollars to Hear the Truth?

Editor,

The Intelligencer,

The perpetual pessimists who are forever predicting our financial collapse should h a n g their heads in shame!

Obviously this is not the opinion of those of our local citizens in whose intelligence and financial perspicacity we have reposed sufficient trust to elect to School Boards and local Municipal Councils, and who have recently concluded that a $1.2m expenditure for a good dinner to listen to somebody called Matt from Flint, Michigan, explain to them how t h e y can make what is described in your news report of 9 Sept., 1969, as "Total use of schools in a community development for all ages," is justified by the undoubted benefits to be obtained.

There may even be t h o s e quibblers in this area who would wonder why members of municipal councils who have nothing to say about education raise t u r e s, and who are often heard to complain bitterly during the time of setting taxes rates about this, should also go to this other and particularly since they also have no functions whatsoever in the matter of deciding what site should be made of schools.

Such persons are purely pessimists and quibblers and should be locked up in schools overnight, thereby making full 24 hour use of a school.

From such people you will no doubt hear expressed some such ridiculous opinions that Mr. Mott could write a good long letter explaining his scheme and send it to everybody, and we would be glad to pay the postage.

The real point these quibblers miss is that the cerebral processes of our elected officials can only properly be stimulated on a full stomach.

It will certainly be interesting to see, under Mr. Mott's program of "Total use of schools", what is going to go on between 1.00 a.m. and 5.00 a.m.

The real point of my letter however, is of course, that in view of this apparently clear evidence of our excellent financial position, we do not want to hear any more complaints either from School Boards or Municipal Councils about not having enough money or raising t e taxes any more, and we will expect shortly to see our children provided with some new artificial ice sheets around the town — I think about 5 might be a reasonable start, to enable all of the youngsters in this district to understand that ice is something more than what the old man puts in his drink at night and what they see on television.

As the late lamented Federal Minister C. D. H o w e said, "what's a million".

I certainly hope that we are going to hear from our city councillors and school board trustees similar clear cut decisions such as "what's $1,200 for a dinner?"

This is going to open great broad vistas of new thinking on wider and higher financial pleateaus for our future citizens, and we can certainly hope that shortly our prosperity will be such that we can spend $74,000 of Board of Education money to honor the retirement of a Director of Education and that every member of the school board can take off for Hawaii to listen the most recent developments in teaching the violin in South Dakota.

Let us hear no disgruntled feeble criticism of these expenditures.

Just because our taxes support a complete failure of Education at Queen's Park, Toronto, who are supposed to be experts on all of these matters and to study them all, there is no reason why every citizen locally who has a properly elected cannot also very properly assist the community by p e r sonal first hand study anywhere in the world, and preferably on a full stomach, of the most recent educational developments, and a special fie upon controller Margaret Campbell of Toronto who went to Europe, dilly-dallying as it certainly will be to any right thinking citizen, to suggest that local school boards were becoming "empire builders."

Such is not the way to promote confidence in our economy and exhibits particularly t h e terrible dangers of free speech.

Timely Helds at the Ball

With debutantes and escorts in the background, Sheila McIntyre is formally introduced at Saturday night's debutante ball at Canadian Forces Base Trenton. Accompanying Lt.-Governor Ross MacDonald was his daughter, Mrs. Haldenby.

Dance Raises $1,300

TRENTON — The RCAF Memorial Fund is richer by $1,300 due to one of the best presented social undertakings of the season here in the AMDU recreation hall at CFB Trenton on Saturday night.

The Debutante's Ball, sponsored as a Memorial project by the Trenton Kiwanis Club, attracted 200 couples with the proceeds going to the fund.

The daughters of 12 area families were presented to Lt. Governor W. Ross MacDonald, the patron of the ball. They included Misses Wendy Crews, Maureen DeBruyn, Susan Graber, Rhonda Jones, Carolyn Locke, Ann Mark, Sheila McIntyre, Lindsay Scott, Diane Senck, Linsey Vanderwalker, Susanne Ward and Linda Lee DeMille.

Many more applications were received but many who were interested in becoming debutantes had to withdraw because of early enrolment at university while others found it was too far to travel and return after they just settled in school dormitories.

The guidance and tutoring of the participants was an undertaking of Mrs. Walter Scott assisted by Mrs. A. Yardy. Mr. Scott, the committee chairman for the sponsors of the ball, hartlied details and liason between the Kiwanis, CFB personnel and the parents of the debutantes.

Mrs. Fred Evans of Redmersville acted as announcer for the presentations.

Car Found In Quarry

A car reported stolen in Trenton early Saturday was found 12 hours later — in 12 feet of water.

The automobile, owned by Randy Lockwood, R.R. 2, Trenton was spotted at bottom of a water - filled quarry on Aiken's sideroad near Bayside, by two Belleville men.

Provincial police say Joseph Duguay and George Halley, both of Brock Street, dived down to the car to make certain no one was trapped inside.

Police say Lockwood reported the car stolen early Saturday morning from a Trenton service station lot.

Sandford Fleming Enrolment at 875

PETERBOROUGH — Sir Sandford Fleming College, Loyalist College's Central Ontario counterpart, this year is expecting more than 900 full-time day students.

When classes opened earlier this month the college had 875 registrations here and at its forest technician division in nearby Lindsay.

Admissions director John O. Holt estimates the total will reach 900 by the time registrations close Sept. 26.

This compares to last year's total of almost 600.

Day student registration at Loyalist is now more than 400.

Originally, one community college was designated for the Belleville-Peterborough region. But the campus was divided between both areas while the colleges were being planned, and later launched as separate entities.

Richer Life

setting up such priorities but adds:

"The priorities will be established in any event. The real question is whether they will be established in a comprehensive, systematic and forward-looking manner, or in a wasteful, ad hoc and frequently short-sighted manner."

The review offers some special warnings about government spending programs.

It says continuing out-dated programs is a "tragic waste" and calls for greater efficiencies in putting government-supplied goods and services into the hands of the people.

This was especially true at subsidy programs, most of which support weaknesses in the economy.

The demands on the economy up to 1975 will be so great governments will have little room to manoeuvre over money, the council says.

Even without introducing any new major spending programs, the three government levels will spend a projected $43,000,000,000 to 1975—or 37 per cent of the GNP.

That's a bigger share of the pie than they took in 1968, when spending totalled $24,000,000,000 or 33 per cent of the GNP.

This increased spending, however, could be financed from the sharply higher revenues which would come from the country's growing wealth without a tax increase, the council says.

Revenues would climb fast enough to put governments in a position of all levels of government to be kept in balance.

But the government try to start any new major spending programs, they would be able to do it only by making large cuts or greatly increased efficiency —or by raising taxes.

The economy's capacity to provide the resources to satisfy expanding needs—either private or governmental—is unlimited. . .

"Government and the public will have to face up to many hard choices about the use of these resources."

The review says the recent rate of price and cost increases in Canada "is unacceptable", diluting some of the economic gains won this decade.

It said a new and tougher goal up to 1975—holding price increases to less than two per cent a year—is something the economy has not done in the post-war period.

The average increase from 1961 to 1968 was about three per cent a year.

The council congratulates the federal government for speeding up tariff reductions made under the Kennedy round trade agreement, saying this will increase the supply of needed components within the economy and so help keep prices down.

It warns, though, that if Canada is to avoid a repetition of inflationary pressures in the early 1970's, attention is needed now on a whole range of policies to increase the supply side of the economy.

The report reiterates the council's long-standing concern over housing.

"We now are in a situation in which a major housing crisis could develop within a very short period of time."

Annual housing starts will have to average 190,000 units up to 1971, up to 230,000 units to 1976 and 257,000 units up to 1981.

To achieve this, spending on housing will have to rise by 6.1 per cent a year up to 1975, compared with a 4.1-per-cent increase from 1961 to 1967.

This would raise the country's housing bill to $5,200,000,000 in 1975 from $1,800,000,000 in 1967.

The review, however, questions whether conditions exist to reach these goals.

". . . We are concerned about the extent to which a basic industry as housing is beset by archaic attitudes, institutions and practices—problems —including a multiplicity of obstructive building and zoning codes, and related and relatively inefficient production, a failure to make adequate advances in the development and use of new production technology . . . restrictive labor practices, impediments to better management, a totally inadequate amount of research on the industry's problems and the speculation that inhibits the effective carrying forward of long-range housing development in an efficient way."

The council says it is particularly concerned about the problems of finding decent housing for low-income families.

"We do not believe that there is adequate hope that the free play of market forces can bring about a solution to these problems that low-income families now face in the country."

This meant continued public assistance was essential. Recent changes in housing policy has helped, but more effective measures still were needed.

It was particularly important to maintain a high rate of housing starts during the next two years to avoid shortages in various cities.

These shortages had been a major factor in pushing prices, until they accounted for 40 per cent of the total increase in the consumer price index last fall and spring.

Chicken A La Break-In

Someone is hiding 70 pounds of stolen, fresh, grade A chicken and the Belleville City Police Department is trying to find out who it is.

According to police chief, Douglas Crosbie, the chicken was stolen from the Swissdale Chicken Chalet on Station Street sometime between 12:40 a.m. and nine a.m. Saturday.

Thieves entered the building by smashing a pane of glass on the west side of the establishment.

Nothing else was taken.

SIDNEY SOUTH WI's

On a recent Sunday forty-three Sidney South WI members, relatives and friends enjoyed a scenic tour of the Thousand Islands.

They left Belleville by bus at noon and arrived in Gananoque where they began a three hour boat trip through the Islands. Highlights of the tour were the many types of homes built on the Islands. Particular interest was shown in Boldt Castle which was built by the original owner of the Waldorf Astoria in 1895 and was never completed. Also seen was the Ambrest International Bridge in the world.

MR. AND MRS. DAVID ING

Ing – Hennessey

Bridge St. United Church was the scene of the September 6 wedding when Pamela Gail Hennessey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Hennessey, of Belleville, became the bride of David Reginald Ing, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Ing, of R.R. 7, Belleville. Officiating was Dr. H. Davis. Rendering appropriate nuptial selections was organist S. Alec Gordon. Soloist was Mrs. Anne Colebourne.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a bridal gown of crystal peau and Chantilly lace featuring a sleeveless empire style sheath gown, with a scooped neck and ling daisies trimming the neckline. A full length Chantilly lace coat with long sleeves fell into a Cathedral train, also trimmed with the same daisies. A matching lace petal headpiece studded with crystals held a four tiered silk illusion veil.

Matron of honor, Mrs. Jane Ann McGaw, Belleville was attired in a mint green sleeveless dress, empire style of tergal crepe with a train, also in mint green Chantilly lace. Her headpiece was a mint green rosette. She carried a bouquet of daisies.

Bridesmaids, the Misses Ann Martin, of Montreal and Ann Coombs of Belleville were gowned identically to the matron of honor. All attendants carried crescents of daisies.

Best man for the ceremony was John Perry, Toronto. Ushers were Bill Hennessey, brother of the bride and Allen Parker, brother-in-law of the bridegroom.

For the wedding reception, held at the Pinnacle Room, Hotel Quinte, the mother of the bride received the guests wearing a dress and jacket ensemble of silk worsted in crystal pink. Her dress featured a standup collar. Matching accessories and a corsage of white gardenias completed her outfit. Assisting her, the mother of the bridegroom chose a mauve dress and coat ensemble in silk worsted with mauve and white accessories, completed by an orchid corsage.

For the honeymoon trip to Cape Cod and the New England States, the bride donned a lime green and white brocade ensemble featuring a skimmer dress and matching coat. Black accessories and a corsage of daisies completed her outfit. Upon their return, the couple will reside in Petawawa.

Women's Golf Awards Presented at Post Field Day Dinner

By GEORGE H. CARVER

A seasoned veteran who cut 11 championship notches on her trusty six-iron, and a promising teen-ager shared the curtain-lowering spotlight at the Bay of Quinte Country Club's women's seasonal finale Saturday.

Mrs. Betty Ingram climaxed another colorful season by capturing the Ladies Closing Field Day title for her 11th seasonal triumph.

Eighteen-year-old Margaret O'Brien, daughter of former club president George O'Brien and Mrs. Betty O'Brien, current ladies' division president, won her second consecutive Junior girls' title.

Miss O'Brien also captured the district junior girls' title for the second time in a row.

In a new club departure, championship awards will be presented this year in the various men's and women's events.

Ladies division president, Mrs. Betty O'Brien, who was elected for the second term, presided at the post-field day dinner. She, with games captain Shirley Glover and co-captain Fran Bannon presented the various championship and other awards.

President O'Brien paid tribute to her games captains and committee members in helping bring the 1969 season to an outstanding success.

Honored with awards were club champion Betty Ingram and runner-up Ann Acton. Consolation round Joy Bowerman and Alice Stuart.

Lazier Handicap, Betty Ingram, runner-up Judy Hall; Business Girls, Betty Gregory, runner-up Joy Bowerman; Coates Trav, Gwen Sutton, runner - up Judy Henderson; Ladies Two-ball, Betty Ingram, Eileen McCabe, runners-up Alice Stuart, Helen Philp.

Junior club champion Margaret O'Brien, runner-up Margaret Edwards. National Golf Club "best the champ," Betty Ingram.

In addition to her country club titular achievements Mrs. Ingram also captured top honors at ladies field days at Trafalgar, Cobourg, Watertown, N.Y., Aurora, Prescott and CFB Trenton.

In the junior division besides the club champion and runner-up were consolation winner Jane Kelsy, runner-up Colleen Clancy; 18-hole ringer Pam Carruthers and runner-up Margaret O'Brien, whole ringers, Joanne Belanger, and Vicky Wonnacott. Most improved golfer, Pam Carruthers and "Break 100" Pam Carruthers and Margaret Edwards.

In the closing field day fairway action, Betty Ingram fired an 87 to take low gross honors with Gwen Sutton capturing the low net award with a 67.

In "A" Flight, Betty Walmsley finished in front with a low gross 89. Barbara Geerkens taking low net with her 71.

Madge Cowley took "B" Flight low gross with 93, Hazel Pipernii won low net with 72.

"C" Flight low gross honors went to Phyllis Foster with an even 100. Helen Philp topped the low netters with 73.

Gloria Goodwin's 112 took "D" gross award with Maureen Clarke winning the low net with a 78.

Upwards of 70 members played in the season's final event. The seasonal awards were made at a dinner in the clubhouse.

Previous to her marriage, Mrs. Terence Hebden (nee Linda Yearwood), was entertained at several showers. A shower was held at the home of Mrs. Rebecca Muir, with Miss Sandra Newman as hostess and Mrs. Rebecca Muir as co-hostess. A personal shower was given by Mrs. Betty Thorne at her home.

MR. AND MRS. TERENCE HEBDEN

Hebden – Yearwood

College Hill United Church was the scene of the September wedding when Linda Mary Yearwood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. S. Yearwood of RR5, Belleville, became the bride of Terence Frederick Hebden, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Hebden, of Belleville. Officiating was Rev. R. Vessey. Rendering appropriate nuptial selections was organist Mrs. L. Blakely.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white crepe empire style gown, enhanced by a lace bodice and short sleeves. The gown featured a detachable chapel train of scalloped lace. Her elbow length tulle veil fell from a lace pillbox hat topped with roses and lingi pearl stamens. She carried a cascade bouquet of pink roses and white daisies.

Matron of honor, Mrs. Rebecca Muir, sister of the bride wore a princess style dress of shell pink, with short cap sleeves. A pale pink tulle bow headdress was complemented by the nosegay of pink carnations and white daisies that she carried.

Bridesmaids Miss Sandra Newman and Mrs. Betty Thorne were attired similarly to the matron of honor, but in aqua.

Best man for the ceremony was John Hebden, brother of the bridegroom. Ushers were Brian Williams, Belleville and Morris Biggers also of Belleville.

For the wedding reception, held at the Parkdale Community Centre, the mother of the bride received the guests wearing a robin egg blue crimp knit dress with a matching jacket, beige accessories and a corsage of pink roses. Assisting her, the mother of the bridegroom chose a tonal and dress ensemble of brown and off white ribbed linen. Brown accessories and a corsage of yellow roses completed her outfit.

For the wedding trip to Montreal and points East, the bride donned a princess style dress of burnt orange crimpalene, complemented by black patent accessories and a corsage of white and roses. Upon their return the couple will reside in Belleville.

Mrs. G. O'Brien Heads Women's Golf Division

Mrs. George (Betty) O'Brien was elected to her second term as president of the Bay of Quinte County Club's women's golf division at the club's women's Closing Field Day tournament ceremonies on Saturday night.

"We have had a very successful season," president O'Brien said, "inasmuch as all of our functions were successful."

"I want to pay tribute to my games captain Shirley Glover and her co-captain and to each and every member of the various committees," she added.

Also elected to second term was Mrs. Ena Corke vice-president of the division.

Elizabeth Black was named second vice-president.

Secretary is Phyllis Foster, and treasurer Audrees Moorman.

Grace Marshall heads the social committee with Jean Lantz, Ruth Cooke, Jimmy Mosolf and Florence Lennox as members.

Hazel Pipernie heads the house committee; with Shirley Glover games captain, assisted by co-captain Betty Gregory, Betty Walmsley is the press representative with Barbara Geerkens looking after the junior division.

The nomination committee for 1970 is composed of Ana Ryan, Mildred Curtis and Lois Gill.

A Clean Sweep

JACKSON, Wyo. (AP) — Town council recently passed an emergency ordinance prohibiting street distribution of handbills and other irregularly published matter. Officials said the litter problem had got out of hand in this mountain resort town after its street-sweeping machine broke down. Employees were sweeping the streets with brooms.

Reluctant Politeness Saved His Day

By DORIS CLARK

Stevie at eight, wanted Mom and Dad to come to parents' night at school. Once there, however, self-consciousness paralyzed him. He hung back while other visitors clustered around the teacher. Mom waited a bit, then said, "Stevie, you should introduce us."

"Aw gee, Mom look. The other kids don't do that!".

"Never mind what they do. We do things the right way. Go over (we'll be right behind you) and say: 'Miss Gibson, I'd like you to meet my mother and father'."

Reluctantly, Stevie did. And the adults took over from there. Next day, Stevie came home bursting with pride. Teacher had kept him after school to say what a polite boy he was. He was the only one in the class who had introduced his parents.

Dear Doris: I am 36. At a party I met a single man 10 years my senior. He insisted that I dance with him most of the evening.

On two later occasions, he came along with my brother and his wife and me, to a dance. By this time I thought I had found the man I was looking for.

To my surprise he began to ask questions about another girl friend of mine. When I lovingly him to parties at my home, he said he was too busy with a refresher course. I invited him to a wedding dance and he declined — same kind of reason. Then I found that he had gone there anyway with this other girl.

I have run into him a number of times since. He never speaks to me; but what I do not understand is why he seems to stand there staring at me. — What Given?

Dear What: There is a type of male whose early romances have for one reason or another ended in disappointment. Then having lived through those experiences, he becomes super cautious without finding a mate, he discovers the joys of irresponsibility. He is sought after for parties and hesitates to make a firm plan about his own life.

By now he is well into the "confirmed bachelor" syndrome, and the girl that can jar him out of it has to play her cards with discretion.

When you returned your Romeo's friendliness and showed honest feelings, he saw his bachelor freedom going and the window.

Ask yourself whether the game is worth the gamble: whether you really want to be married to somebody you can never be sure of?

Dear Doris: When an unwed mother has her baby in a hospital, and the baby is premature and dies, or lives a day or two and then dies, what happens to the baby?

Would she have some kind of a burial for it? What if she has no money or friends, or family, to help her out? — Curious

Dear Curious: Any newborn baby, no matter how tiny a bit of humanity, if he lives at all, requires burial.

Whether or not the parents are married doesn't change this. If the mother is completely alone and without resources, the burial would be at the expense of the municipality.

* * *

We now have some understanding of why people act as they do. Write to Doris about your particular human problem, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.

40-year-old Sister Denies Pregnancy

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I had not seen my sister in three years. She is 40 years old and her two children are grown. When Erma and her husband met me at the airport I was shocked to see that she had gotten so heavy. Immediately I concluded she was pregnant and I said so. She became furious and shouted, "You are out of your mind! I have a thyroid condition but it's under control now."

I stayed a week and we had a pleasant time. Erma took pills in my presence and kept a doctor's appointment, but she didn't talk any more about her thyroid condition.

I left Madison on Tuesday. The following Friday I received a telegram from Erma. It read, "Guess who gave birth to an eight-pound boy!"

I'm burned up because my sister lied to me. Why would a person do such a crazy thing? Surely she knew I'd learn the truth eventually. Help me understand. I am — BAFFLED AND BOILING.

DEAR BAFF: I suspect your 40-year-old sister was less than thrilled when she learned she was pregnant. Her refusal to make the announcement spared her the embarrassment of discussing her condition. Unrealistic, yes - - - even foolish. But it's history now, so forget it.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Two years ago the problem started. As soon as the hot weather set in, my nose began to swell. Then I got this whistle in it. It drives my wife crazy and I don't blame her. I can hardly stand it myself.

The problem is much worse at home than is the office. It starts in July and disappears in September. But for six weeks I am a person non grata. Even the dog shuns me. I went to a doctor and he couldn't find anything wrong which is understandable because when I went to him my nose was not swollen and there was no whistle. Can you advise me? — OFF KEY.

DEAR OFF: It sounds as if you might be allergic to a late summer weed that grows around your house. Ask an allergist to make a house call so he can see you when your nose is swollen and your whistle is operating.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I know you don't write a health column but you seem to know a little bit about a lot of things. I'll bet you can answer my question.

Is it true that eating large quantities of grapefruit will make a person thin, in the same way that eating rich desserts will make a person fat? My friend says it is so and she backs up her statement by explaining that grapefruit is a catabolic food and burns up fat. Right or wrong? — ON THE HEAVY SIDE.

DEAR ON: Wrong. I know of no food that will make a person thin. If you are "on the heavy side," don't look for gimmicks. See a doctor and get on a sensible diet.

* * *

DEAR READERS: This is an open letter to the La Leche Society and its hundreds of members who wrote to tell me I am irresponsible, crazy, cruel, uninformed, neurotic and stupid.

The letters came in response to my comments on the young mother who was breast feeding her baby in the Washington, D.C. airport. I am not, repeat not, against breast feeding. I believe breast feeding is beneficial to both mother and child — if the mother is willing and able. (Some mothers are willing but not able. Others are able but not willing.)

I am against breast feeding in public, however, when there are rest rooms all over the place, such as in the Washington, D.C. airport.

And P.S., I'd like to congratulate the La Leche Society. They have a letter-writing membership that could break a mailman's back.

DISTRICT WOMEN'S INSTITUTES

SIDNEY SOUTH WI's

The September meeting of the Sidney South WI was held at the home of Mrs. D. Joss with 25 members and three visitors present.

Mrs. G. Wilman, 1st vice-president, was in charge of the meeting and she covered various items of business. Members were told that the next short course would be "Furniture Facts".

The meeting was turned over to Mrs. D. Reid, reading convener, who was in charge of the program for the evening. She asked each member to tell the others her "pet peeve". She also conducted a quiz were each person was asked to write her name. Then for each letter in the name an adjective had to be written which described her personality.

After the meeting was closed a lunch was served by the hostess and her associates, Mrs. J. Ray and Mrs. G. Shinkle.

MOUNTAIN VIEW W.I.

Mrs. William Burkill opened her home for the September meeting of Mountain View Women's Institute with Mrs. Wilfred Motley as co-hostess. There were approximately 38 women in attendance.

During the business session a vote was taken on a donation of $30 to the Ameliasburg Voluntary Department for much needed equipment.

The convener of the meeting was Mrs. Sid Johnson whose subject was agriculture. She introduced Robert Barber, manager of Barber's Flower Shop in Belleville, who showed slides of different plants including weeds. He explained the different uses of these weeds and their leaves which can be used as greens and for tea. Mrs. Johnson thanked Mr. Barber and presented him with a gift.

Mrs. Burie Summers thanked the hostess, who, assisted by the lunch committee, served refreshments.

CLUB 4-H NOTES

PLAINFIELD 4-H CLUB

The Plainfield 4-H Club held its first meeting on September 6 at the home of Mrs. Wright. Nine members attended with Mrs. A. Wright as leader and Miss E. Treverton as assistant leader.

The following officers were elected: president, Nancy Wright; vice-president, Bonnie Rowe; treasurer, Janet Sills and press reporter, Nelle Daniels. The club will have a floating secretary.

The members took part in a quiz on the Canada Food Guide which was later discussed. Janet Sills demonstrated the proper way to measure ingredients.

The second meeting of the club was held at Plainfield Hall at 7 p.m. on September 8. "Plainfield Vegetarians" became the new name for the club.

Discussion centred on the selection and cooking of fresh, canned and frozen vegetables.

Mrs. Wright demonstrated how to make baked potatoes and panned cabbage and Janet Sills made white sauce while Bonnie Rowe showed the proper way to cook frozen peas.

The next meeting will be held at Plainfield Hall at 7 p.m. on September 15.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

William's Cake Is Simply Delicious

By MARY MOORE

William's Cake has a long and mysterious history. He made the cake when he was eight, two years ago and his mother and he sent me the recipe. I took it along to Victoria Day Christmas time and my luggage containing it was stolen. I wrote to William for another copy. William could not find the original. In July of this year he sent it to me.

I made the cake twice using two different methods of mixing. First I followed William's directions to stir dry ingredients into a bowl and add wet ingredients and beat well. On the second test I switched to the standard method of creaming shortening and sugar and adding dry ingredients together.

I can recommend William's cake highly and hope every young one from eight years and upwards tries it and triumphs.

WILLIAM'S CAKE

1/3 cup shortening
½ cup sugar
1 egg
1 tsp. vanilla
¼ cup molasses
¼ cup milk
2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
4 tbsps. (¼ cup) cocoa
2 tsps. baking powder
½ tsp. salt
½ tsp. ginger

Heat oven to 350 deg. Fahr. In heavy bowl thoroughly measure shortening and sugar and beat until light. Add egg and vanilla and beat for one minute.

Remove beaters.

Sift and measure flour and sift it with the cocoa, baking powder, salt and ginger. Add one-half of the dry ingredients to the creamed mixture along with the molasses and beat it. Add remaining dry ingredients and milk and beat until smooth. Line bottom of 9 x 9" square pan with buttered wax paper. Butter sides of pan. Pour in batter and smooth top. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 30 to 35 min. Cake shrinks about one-sixteenth of an inch from sides of pan and when touched with fingertips at centre will spring back when done.

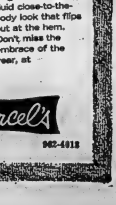
NOTE TO MOTHERS: For young cooks I would recommend using a Teflon-lined pan for it assures a cake that turns out of the pan completely and completely intact. We frosted ours with rich butter icing and drizzled melted chocolate over that.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Mother: "I worry about a fire in this big, old house. There's only one way to get out of the upstairs. What would we do if the stairs were on fire?"

Father: "Don't borrow trouble. The house hasn't burned down in 50 years."



Be sure your family knows what to do in case of fire, so members will not panic and become trapped by lethal gas or flames.

Father: "We don't expect to have a fire, but it's a good idea to have fire drills the way they do at school. We'll practice climbing out this portable escape ladder so we'll know how to get out quickly and safely."

Says Nazis Split Atom First, Would Have Used A-Bomb on U.K.

HEIDELBERG, West Germany (AP) — If The Second World War had lasted two more years, Nazi Germany would have had atomic bombs and Adolf Hitler wouldn't have hesitated to use them against Britain, says the man who ran the Fuehrer's war machine.

Germany split the atom before the United States and "the scientific solution had been found," said Albert Speer, former Nazi armament minister. "But it would have been 1947, not 1945, before we actually would have had a usable bomb."

Speer blamed Hitler for being "incapable of grasping the revolutionary character of nuclear physics." He said the Fuehrer's weapons concepts were anchored to the First World War, in which he had personal experience as a corporal.

But Speer added: "Hitler would not have hesitated for a moment to use atomic bombs against England if he had them."

Now 64, grey and articulate, Speer talked in an exclusive interview about his remarkable career that began as Hitler's architect and ended in the Nuernberg war crimes dock at age 41.

Speer has been living quietly in this university town since his release three years ago from Berlin's Spandau prison, upon completion of a 20-year sentence for his use of slave labor in the industries of the Third Reich.

Some of his observations:

—Nazi Germany never could have won the 1939-45 war: the best it could hope for was a stalemate out of which an acceptable agreement might have been reached. Such an agreement was worth fighting for, in Speer's view.

—Allied indecisiveness in bombing, in failing to hit special industrial targets and cities with concentrated raids over a sustained period, contributed to lengthening the war.

"No, it was never possible for us to win the war . . . our resources were not enough as compared to the industrial capacity of the others" said Speer.

Then why make war?

Speer replied that Reichsmarshal Herman Goering and Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebells "were against starting a war from the beginning."

"And Hitler did not want the kind of war he got. . . . He wanted a small war with Poland and then make new agreements."

Battle of Britain Air Heroes Recall Victory Over Luftwaffe

LONDON (Reuters) — Scarred air heroes who flew tiny Spitfire and Hurricane fighter planes against the power of Hitler's Luftwaffe Sunday night commemorated their victory 29 years ago in the Battle of Britain.

About 150 surviving air aces, several of them from abroad, gathered at Bentley Priorty in North Londoc—headquarters of the jet-age RAF Strike Command—on the eve of today's world premiere here of the film Battle of Britain which records their bravery.

A spotfire and a Hurricane stood floodlit outside the headquarters as pilots, many limping or visibly maimed, greeted each other like long-lost friends.

Celebrations were shadowed by only one dark cloud—the publication of a new book on Air Chief Marshal Hugh Dowding, one of the most controversial commanders in the Second World War.

The book, by Robert Wright, titled Dowding and the Battle of Britain, described how Dowding lost his job as head of Fighter Command in a dispute over tactics soon after winning the battle that saved Britain from Nazi invasion.

An organizer of the reunion summed up the pilots' mood.

"Feeling is still so strong over Dowding's dismissal that pilots could easily come to blows if they began discussing it," he said.

Instead, pilots cheerfully exchanged reminiscences of Britain's "finest hour."

Almost all said they did not realize at the time that they were making history.

South African Pat Wells, now a salesman for an air company, said:

"We never realized the battle would be a turning point in the war.

"We thought the whole war would go on like that. Thank God it didn't."

Don Sutherin's 11th-Hour Footwork Gives Ottawa 25-23 Edge Over Argos

OTTAWA (CP) — Don Sutherin's 35-yard field goal, his third of the afternoon on the last play of the game, gave Ottawa Rough Riders a 25-23 win over Toronto Argonauts and second place in the tight Eastern Football Conference race.

The Riders, with 12 points, trail leading Hamilton Tiger-Cats by a single point and are two ahead of the Argos. Montreal Alouettes trail the pack with two points on two ties.

Saturday's dramatic finish came with Riders trailing Toronto 23-22.

Ottawa coach Frank Clair later praised quarterback Russ Jackson for his coolness under pressure in the final minutes when he directed Ottawa in five plays from their own 32-yard line to set up Sutherin's field goal.

"Jackson had a lot of guts, He's always had," Clair said.

Jackson has said he'll retire after this year.

In addition to his three field goals, Sutherin kicked three singles and converted a touchdown by Margene Adkins. His attempt to convert Ottawa's other touchdown by Vic Washington failed.

Scoring for the Argos were Bill Symons with two touchdowns, Jim Thorpe with one, and Dave Mann, with three converts and two singles.

The Argos led 15-14 at half time and it was not until late in the third quarter that Ottawa moved ahead 18-16 on a Sutherin field goal and singled. Mann kicked a single for Toronto.

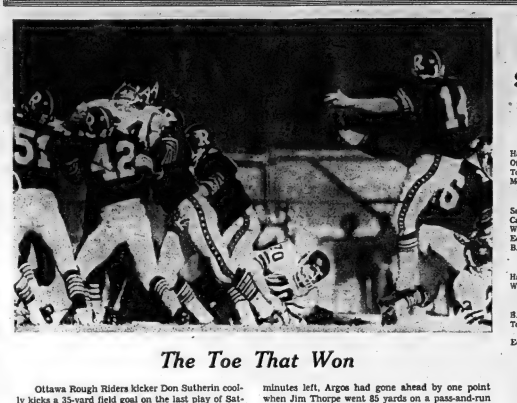
Sutherin came right back in the fourth quarter with another field goal and a single but Thorpe put Argos ahead with a 25-yard pass-and-run play from quarterback Tom Wilkinson.

The convert gave the lead back to the Argos with under two minutes remaining.

Sutherin's 13 points left him in second place in the Eastern conference scoring race with 77 points, behind Hamilton's Tommy Joe Coffey with 85.

Ottawa had 21 first downs to Argos' 14, but Toronto outrushed the Riders 225 yards to 83.

In the passing department, Jackson held up against the Argo blitz to complete 19 of 34 passes for 382 yards. Wilkinson completed seven of 23 passes for 171 yards. Wilkinson had one of his passes intercepted.



Symons, the leading rusher in the game, carried 13 times for 114 yards. Jim Mankins was the best for Ottawa, carrying seven times 48 yards.

Saturday's attendance fell about 200 short of the 37,172 capacity. Team officials had warned they would consider anything short of a full house an indication that cable television, which carries the games, to blacked out areas, was hurting attendance.

There was no immediate comment from Rider officials but a statement on cable television and its effects may be issued later this week, a club spokesman said.

Place Kickers Prominent Everywhere

Place kickers and quarterbacks went on a scoring spree in three Canadian Football League weekend games.

Tommy Joe Coffey of Hamilton Tiger-Cats shared top honors Sunday with an 18-point performance in a 31-29 decision over Saskatchewan Roughriders in an interlocking game before 19,556 fans at Regina.

At Edmonton Sunday, quarterback Corey Colebour scored three touchdowns as the Eskimos mounted a six-game losing streak with a 30-16 triumph over Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

Place kicker Ted Gerela starred in a losing effort Saturday at Calgary as the Stampeders defeated British Columbia Lions 28-20.

Gerela got 14 points on four field goals, one from 54 yards out, a single and a convert. But the Lions dropped their seventh in eight starts as the Stampeders displayed a powerful passing attack before 18,816 fans.

The Ticats' win extended their undefeated record in the Eastern Conference to seven games —six wins and a tie—and moved them into sole possession of first place with 13 points. Ottawa Rough Riders are second with 12 points.

The western Roughriders, who lead their conference with 12 points, two more than Calgary, suffered their third setback in nine starts. It was also the first loss for Saskatchewan in the club's last 11 league games at Taylor Field.

Coffey scored two touchdowns on passes from quarterback Joe Zuger, kicked four converts and two singles. Garney Hensley and Willie Bethea added the other Hamilton touchdowns and Zuger kicked a single.

Fullback George Reed and halfback Bobby Thompson each scored two touchdowns for Saskatchewan. Jack Abendschan got three converts and two singles.

Coffey's output gave him 93 points for the season and increased his lead in the EFC scoring race to 16 points over Don Sutherin of Ottawa.

Zuger, who shared quarterbacking duties in the second half with John Manel and John Eckman, hurt a finger on his left hand in the fourth quarter. The injury later was reported not serious.

In Edmonton before 12,600 fans, the Eskimos erased a 16-14 deficit in the final quarter as Colebour scored his fourth and fifth touchdowns of the season and Dave Cutler kicked a 25-yard field goal.

Joe's Arm, O. J.'s Legs Not Quite Up to Snuff

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A record crowd of 46,165 turned out Sunday at Buffalo's War Memorial Stadium to see Joe Namath's arm and O. J. Simpson's legs. The anatomy left something to be desired, but no one was demanding his money back.

Namath, New York Jets' quarterback, passed for one touchdown and Buffalo Bills' Simpson ran for one in his pro debut as the champion Jets turned back the stubborn Bills 33-19 in their American Football League opener.

Elsewhere in the AFL, Oakland Raiders held off Houston Oilers 21-17, Kansas City Chiefs trounced San Diego Chargers 27-9, Denver Broncos walloped Boston Patriots 33-7 and Cincinnati Bengals topped Miami Dolphins 27-21.

The Bengals' victory was marred by the death of 29-year-old linebacker Frank Buncom, who suffered an early-morning heart attack in his hotel room. The attack was brought on by a blood clot on the lung.

* * *

Namath's statistics showed only seven completions in 19 attempts—he was intercepted three times—for 157 yards.

Simpson, the rich rookie from UCLA, carried 10 times for 33 yards, caught two passes for 46 and returned three kickoffs for 66. His touchdown came on an eight-yard run.

The Car Buyers Problems:

HOW IMPORTANT IS MILEAGE IN BUYING A USED CAR?

Jim Patterson

Not nearly so important as the car's true condition and the dealer's reputation.

Despite the fact that most motorists shopping for a used car still let the mileage reader influence them mightily, recorded mileage can be very misleading in assessing a car's worth.

This is especially so today when warranty advertising causes a tendency by drivers to regard their cars as mechanical wonders not requiring regular service as formerly.

Excessive engine wear causing oil burning in one-and-three year old cars can occur. The reason is that short stop-and-go driving, if not accompanied by frequent oil changes, causes rapid sludge and varnish build up. It is this chemical is oil that causes most extensive wear.

Roughly one gallon of water is produced by a car's combustion system for every gallon of gas consumed. In a cold engine, instead of going out the exhaust pipe, this water condenses and runs into the crankcase, setting up sludge deposits. Sludge plugs engine oil passages in the rings, causing oil burning wear and ultimately varnish.

Only the dealer who is familiar with the car's service record, or has properly appraised it when he took it in as a trade, is in the best position to know a car's true worth. He can supply the buyer with the name of the previous owner and otherwise assist him in making the wisest possible choice.

Somewhere within earsight are about 6,000 persons with the potential to bring Belleville out of the dark ages of community recreation planning.

That's how many pledge cards have been distributed by the members of the Quinte Community Recreation Centre committee to prospective participants in the Great Blister of '69.

Next Saturday's 30-mile, round-the-bay Walkathon is the major scheme devised to fund the construction of the Quinte Walchamacallit, otherwise known as a second city arena.

For the skeptics who do not believe this city needs another brined ice surface, I suppose there are sober solutions.

Like starting the novice all-star practices at 2 a.m. instead of 6 a.m. weekday mornings, perhaps?

And what's wrong with senior hockey on the bay?

The Wharf Street Debating Club could accommodate 100 spectators at a time to thaw out frostbitten feet on a rotating basis.

But alas, we're a generation of softies, and prefer the luxuries of life, like someplace for our kids to play.

Hence the walkathon to put a 200'x85' covered ice surface on the Coleman Flats.

Organizers are optimistic Saturday's footwork will put a sizeable dent in the $190,000 probable price tag. People have spent more on mausoleums, you know.

Those, who for reasons of age, infirmity, or wisdom do not intend to soil their sneakers are advised to contact John Kunetsky at 968-8786.

Mr. Kunetsky and his comrades will spend Saturday slowly going out of their minds performing such chores as manning checkpoints, processing pledge cards, whittling crutches, etc., etc.

Those who do talk the pledge—cards, that is — will assemble at the Memorial Arena, the dilapidated sight of which presumably will incite them enough to walk to Whitehorse, let alone 30 miles.

Dick Hurst — the man who started pulling bugs in people's ears about the arena project a year ago—can't see why Belleville wouldn't put its all into the project.

"Our citizens were very generous in contributing support during last year's walkathon for heart equipment at the hospital.

"Without slighting that effort, I'd like to believe that more adequate recreation facilities might see fewer people needing care for their hearts," Hurst told the Quinte Action Centre committee's organizational meeting.

Look at it this way: If one walker completed the 30 miles with 10 cents per mile sponsorship from each man, woman and child in Belleville, that hypothetical walker would contribute $190,000 towards the new rink.

Several hundred Bellevillians might have been a little embarrassed when they heard a bobby pill anecdote at the recent sports celebrities' dinner.

Hull's story concerned a Saskatchewan hamlet, population 2,000, that lost its arena in a fire a couple of winters back.

Village fathers hit upon the idea of a community steer barbecue to try and raise some money and another rink.

The pit was dug, the steers cooked, and Mr. Hull imported as the feature attraction, all of which was offered to the surrounding prairie public for $100 a plate.

That sum spreads a lot of fertilizer in Saskatchewan, and in a near-unanimous community spirit and the co-operation of local banks, a whopping $100,000 materialized in 24 hours.

Belleville's walkathon may be only one of a number of resources that have to be exhausted before a new arena is paid for.

For instance, well-known local hockey personality Floyd Crawford has obtained a dozen sticks autographed by the entire Montreal Canadiens roster which will be raffled, or otherwise illegally dispensed, to kick some more money into the kitty.

Maybe there could be a "throw-a-pie-at-your-favorite-referee" night, at a buck a pie. (Two bucks for Boston Cream?).

But first things first.

And however many steps are taken Saturday, they will all be in the right direction.

McDowell Hits Roof... Tries Anyway!

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

When Sam McDowell throws a fit, the sky's the limit.

The Cleveland pitching ace tried to heave a baseball out of Baltimore's Municipal Stadium following his ejection from Sunday's game against the American League's newly-crowned East Division kings.

He missed the mark by a couple of feet and the Indians had even less success against the high-flying Orioles, who stretched their winning streak to eight games with a 7-3 victory Sunday, after downing the Indians 10-5 Saturday.

Chicago White Sox, meanwhile, dealt Oakland's West Division title hopes a double wallop with a 12-8, 9-8 sweep over the fading Athletics Sunday.

First-place Minnesota, although beaten by Kansas City Royals 4-3 Sunday and 1-0 Saturday, moved eight lengths ahead of the Athletics. The Twins' magic number for clinching the division crown is 10.

Elsewhere Sunday, Detroit Tigers topped Washington Senators 7-4 in 12 innings, California Angels tripped Seattle Pilots 4-3 and New York Yankees nipped Boston Red Sox 3-2.

In other Saturday games, the Athletics downed the White Sox 4-0, Washington defeated Detroit 11-6, Boston took New York 5-2 and Seattle beat California 6-4 in the opener of a doubleheader with the Angels taking the second 4-2.

McDowell was given the heave-ho by plate umpire Larry Barnett in the sixth inning at Baltimore, climaxing a running feud over ball-strike calls. The Indians' 16 game winner exploded after Baltimore broke a 3-3 tie on a walk, Chico Salmon's single and an error by rookie Ioti fielder Frank Baker.

Team-mates restrained McDowell during a heated argument. Indians' manager Alvin Dark also was ejected. Then, on his way to the dugout, McDowell fired the ball toward the 109-foot-high stadium roof. It landed four rows from the top in the upper deck.

The Orioles, who clinched the East Division championship Saturday, rested five regulars. Left-hander Mike Cuellar survived nine Cleveland hits to become the third 22 game winner in the majors, joining Detroit's Denny McLain and the Mets' Tom Seaver.

Tom McCraw's upper-deck home run in the ninth inning broke an 8-8 tie at Chicago, completing the White Sox sweep over the Athletics. Larry Haney had lifted Oakland into a tie with an eighth inning homer.

Bobby Knoop delivered four Chicago runs with a single and triple.

Bill Melton's 20th homer helped stake the White Sox to an early 10-0 bulge in the first game, but the Athletics closed to 10-8 before Ed Herrmann put it out of reach with a two-run double.

Wilhelm Boosts Braves In Twilight of Career

Hoyt Wilhelm, who makes a baseball do tricks by digging his carefully filed nails into its seams, joined Atlanta last week and in three appearances with the pennant-conscious Braves has one victory and two saves.

The victory for the 46-year-old reliever, who is in his 18th major league season, came Sunday when Rico Carty rifled a pair of home runs that gave the Braves a 3-2 triumph over Houston Astros.

It was the sixth straight victory for Atlanta and left the Braves 1½ games in front of both Los Angeles Dodgers and San Francisco Giants in the sizzling National League West Division race.

The Dodgers and Giants both kept pace with the Braves who haven't lost since acquiring Wilhelm on waivers from California Angels. Los Angeles knocked off San Diego Padres 3-1 and San Francisco took Cincinnati Reds 5-3.

New York retained its 3½-game lead in the East Division. The Mets beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 5-3 but lost no ground to Chicago, which dropped a 2-1 decision to St. Louis Cardinals in 10 innings. Montreal Expos ripped Philadelphia Phillies 7-2 in the other NL game Sunday.

Saturday, the Expos dropped the Phillies 7-5 while New York downed Pittsburgh 5-2, St. Louis beat Chicago 7-4, Cincinnati defeated San Francisco 6-4, Los Angeles whipped San Diego 7-2 and Atlanta edged Houston 3-2. Wilhelm has allowed just two hits in 4 2-3 innings in three appearances for the Braves. He was 5-7 with California.

Want Midgets Restricted

MONTREAL — The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association will be asked at its next annual meeting to restrict the use of 15- and 16-year-old players by junior hockey clubs, a Quebec Amateur Hockey Association spokesman said Sunday.

Henri Crochetiere, out-going QAHA president, said the Quebec Minor Hockey Association asked the QAHA at its annual meeting in Montreal during the weekend to pass a rule forcing midget-aged players to play at least one year of midget hockey before signing with a junior club. The junior age limit is 19.

He said minor hockey officials contended that junior-calibre play was "not good for the physical well-being of the youngsters."

Mr. Crochetiere added that the QAHA turned down the request because it might give junior clubs outside the province an advantage over Quebec clubs and would be unfair to the players themselves.

Blues Open Without Hall

ST. ANDREWS, N.B. (CP) — The St. Louis Blues of the National Hockey League opened pre-season training during the weekend without goalie Glenn Hall, but with coach Scotty Bowman confident the all-star netminder will return for at least part of the schedule.

"I hadn't thought of us playing without him," Bowman said of Hall, who teamed with Jacques Plante last year to turn in the hottest goal-tending average of the NHL season — 2.07 goals allowed per game.

Cox Tops Pros in Sudden Death

QUEBEC (CP) — Bob Cox says he was almost ready to quit after the first round of the $15,000 Canadian Professional Golfers Association tour championship at the Royal Quebec Golf Club.

But today the Richmond, B.C., pro from the Quilchena Golf Club is glad he stayed around for the remaining 36 holes.

Cox, 29, who has won about $20,000 this year, took the $3,000 first prize Sunday by defeating Moe Norman of Gilford, Ont., in a sudden-death playoff.

The pair had covered the regulation 54-hole route with identical 211 scores to force the extra play. Cox ended it with a 20-foot birdie putt on the par-four, 400-yard second hole to cancel any hopes Norman had of winning the championship in a playoff for the second year running.

Norman won last year when he defeated Vancouver's Wayne Vollmer on the second hole of Toronto's Board of Trade course, also in sudden death.

Norman picked up $2,200 for his second place finish this year.

"After that first round I said I'd need a pair of 67s or 66s to win," Cox said. "I had never been that let down after a round of golf before. I was deflated."

Cox fired a four over par 76 in Friday's opener, a five-under-par 67 Saturday and a 68 Sunday.

Wilf Homeniuk of Winnipeg, first-round leader with a 67, counted 75 and 71 in the final two rounds for his 213 total and third place money of $1,700.

Gary Slatter of Grand Bahamas finished all alone at 218, worth $800 while Gary Bowerman of Richmond Hill, Ont., and amateur Nick Weslock of Burlington, Ont., were grouped at 219. Bowerman earned $750.

CRACKLING with pleasure

Brights Manor St. Davids Crackling Rosé is a pleasurable wine. It's pink. Pleasurably refreshing.

Chill it, open it with an easy twist of the wrists and listen to the welcoming: Psssss! Pour it, and you'll see and hear it fairly crackle with pleasure.

Manor Crackling Rosé is delightfully inexpensive, outrageously delectable. And in a stunning new package. What more can you ask of a pink wine?

City's Minor Softballers Turn to Fielding Hot Dogs

It took a lot of fancy handwork, what with fielding all those hot dogs and soft drinks, but most of the 700 participants in the 1969 Belleville Minor Softball Association proved equal to the task at Saturday's presentation day ceremonies.

The dietary part of the official minor softball windup came after trophies had been awarded for the league, playoff, and city championship teams, and most valuable player selections in six age groups were announced.

The Wings, coached by Don Putnam and Perry Seals, were the littlest team trophy winners but accomplished things in the biggest way.

They won the Tyke east hill season and playoff honors en route to downing John Boorsma and Jim Campbell's Tabernacle west hill champions for the R. L. McGee Memorial Trophy and the city tyke title. Tabernacle had lost only two games in two years.

Archer's Grocer squirts, (coached by Allan J. Eros and Hugh Sutherland Trophy and city title by downing the west hill playoff and league champion Cubs coached by Harry Giddings and Roland Murkittrik. Tommy Hiddleston's Vaughn Automotive squirts had won the east hill pennant.

The Athletics were league and city peewee champions. David Couch and Hugh Sutherland coached their charges to the Joe Walters Trophy.

The bantam Cardinals beat out league champion Aces to bring coaches Ted Pratt and Perc. Stailkovich the Don Bell Sports Shop Trophy. Bruno Ialinti coached the Aces to the bantam house league pennant.

Most valuable bantam of the 1969 season was the Associated Canadian Travellers' John Romano, who won the Jim Tebworth Trophy.

The Freddie Clarke Memorial award went to the Athletics peewee's Bruce Sutherland.

Squirt MVP's were the west hill Cubs' David Giddings, (Stephen Licence Trophy), and Archer's Stephen Hannah (Bucky Ethier Memorial Trophy).

A and W Drive-In's Brian Wickles won the Booth TV Trophy as most valuable east hill tyke, while the Wings Timmy Soule won the Doug Jackson Trophy as his west hill counterpart.

Coming to Grips

The way they swung a bat helped these six youngsters earn most valuable player awards in 1969 Belleville Minor Softball Association play. From left are peewee MVP Bruce Sutherland—Athletics, David Giddings (Squirt West Hill—Cubs), Brian Nickle (Tyke East Hill—A&W), Stephen Hannah (Squirt East Hill—Archer's Grocery), Timmy Soule (Tkye West Hill—Wings), and John Romano (Bantam—Associated Canadian Travellers).

Win Three Games

'Orphans' Win in Marmora

Fourteen Commercial Softball League players took a busman's holiday Saturday night and came up with three wins to capture the Annual Marmora Legion Intermediate Softball Tournament and $75 prize money.

Bob Swan's one-hitter and Ralph Plane's towering homer gave the Commercial League "Orphans" a 2-0 win over Marmora in their opening game.

A 10-inning 3-2 semi-final verdict went to the Orphans when the Dekore outfield could not come up with Ken Greveraux's fly to short centre.

Wayne Woods had driven in the first two Belleville runs.

Winner Scott Reid, who came on in relief of Mark Sheridan in the seventh, went all the way with a 15-strikeout three-hitter to blank Springbrook 4-0 in the championship tilt.

A solo homer by Paul Stinson, and Ralph Plane's bases-loaded triple accounted for the scoring by the Garry Alevan and Dekore Orphans.

Favored Madoc and Toronto had been eliminated by Springbrook and Dekore.

ORPHANS — Bob Swan, Mark Sheridan, Scott Reid, Lyle Thompson, Paul Stinson, Paul Goodfellow, Wayne Woods, Ken Greveraux, Bill Goodfellow, Neil Campbell, Ralph Plane, Dwight Rathwell, Carl Boomhower, Larry Soule.

Hull Cattle Bring $135,000

SAWYERVILLE, Que. (CP) — SAWYERVILLE Que. (CP) — A Canadian record was set Saturday when Johnston Fox of Lloydminster, Sask., paid $2,500 for a bull calf at a sale of cattle owned by hockey star Bobby Hull. More than 2,000 persons were on hand for the eight-hour sale of Hull's herd of 260 polled Hereford cattle, paying more than $135,000 for the herd brought here from Hullvue Farms at Picton, Ont.

Weeks Ideal Substitute, Drives Two Wins Saturday

Al Vance has better not stay away too long.

The Belleville harness driver took a night off Saturday from the Quinte Riding and Driving Club's regular weekly card at the Fairgrounds and his replacement more than justified any confidence that might have been his in the $19,920 pari-mutuel handle.

Ken Weeks drove three of Vance's regular charges, with

Minor Soccer

Goals by Kelly Murkittrick and Don Daley gave Belleville United a 2-0 minor soccer win Saturday over Circle TV.

In a second meeting division game, LaModa Hair beat Richard Ellis 5-1 on two goals each by Paul Hipkin and Rick Tobin, and a single by ANDRE Rashotte.

Tom Elder replied for Ellis.

Carrying Place Pilot Out-stunts Aerobatic Field

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — R. H. Wannamaker, 49, of Carrying Place, Ont., a Royal Canadian Air Force bomber pilot in the Second World War and Korean War, won the first Canadian advanced aerobatics championship and record trials here Sunday.

Five judges named him winner after watching him put his Harvard aircraft through a complicated series of stunts in a hazy and fairly turbulent sky.

Second place went to C. A. Oliver and third to Ken Wright, both of Toronto.

First place in the primary category, for pilots with less experience, was awarded to Douglas Murray of Toronto.

Earlier Sunday, Harry Barr, 37, of Stratford, claimed the Canadian speed record for home-built planes, reaching 162.1 m.p.h. in his Cassutt racer.

He flew his plane, 18 feet long and weighing 545 pounds, around the three-kilometre course at a height of less than 300 metres.

The aerobatics competition, the first for all competitors, was sponsored by the Canadian Experimental Aircraft Association and the Peterborough Pilots' Association. About 4,000 spectators were at Peterborough airport for Sunday's finals.

The 16 competitors, all from Ontario, included Sally Wagner of Erin, believed to be Canada's only woman aerobatic pilot, and Jan Fudkowski of Uxbridge, once wing commander of three Polish squadrons in the Royal Air Force. He was credited with 10½ kills in the Battle of Britain.

Elimination competition Saturday was opened by Bill Lumley of Hollywood, Fla., who flew his highly-modified Cessna, inverted, 25 feet above the runway, using its tail to cut a ribbon.

Alhambra Top City Tykes

Alhambra 109 Tykes made it two in a row all around.

The west hill champions won their second consecutive city minor baseball title by ousting Deacon Brothers in two straight games of their best-of-three series this weekend.

Saturday, Alhambra parlayed Billy Whalen and Tony Meagher's two - hit pitching combination into an 18-4 win for coaches Lee Stafford and Gilen Suddard. Meagher also hit three singles, while Scott Bowes collected a triple and double off the pitching of losing Deacon hurlers Peter Hall and Joe Molaski.

Alhambra wrapped up the city tyke title Sunday with an 8-3 win over Deacons, who were coached this season by Wm. Walsh and Mr. Groh.

The same pitchers performed for both teams Sunday with Meagher and Whaley combining for a five-hitter and 14 strikeouts.

Tad Title Coming Up

The city's tadpole and peewee minor baseball titles will be decided this week.

Tonight, the third and deciding game between Bob's Auto Body and Morrison Real Estate will determine the Tadpole champions. Interviews squared the series with a 19-3 Friday night win.

Meagher again led the winners at the plate with a 4-for-4 and three singles, while Bowes contributed three singles.

Deacon's Tom Borreski hit a pair of singles, and Matthew Smith tripled.

And H. G. Frid won the east hill peewee title Sunday with a 15-9 win over Holy Rosary.

Frid will meet Mel Barrage west hill winners Tuesday night in the first game of a best-of-three series to decide the city peewee baseball championship.

Kinsmen Track Club Sends Few, Wins Many

The Kinsmen Track and Field Club got a good return on their manpower investment in their last meet of the season at Peterborough Saturday.

Three carloads of team members — four girls and 40 boys — returned home with 11 firsts, six seconds, and eight third-place finishes for a second-place overall finish to the host Peterborough club.

Since the Belleville club's season officially ended with their own Aug. 24 meet, attendance in Peterborough was on strictly an optional basis.

The informality of their participation didn't seem to affect the performance of the Kinsmen youngsters.

Laurie Preston was the outstanding single performer, getting four firsts in bantam girls' competition. She ran a 12.9 in the 100-yard dash, a 29.9 in the 220, a 71.9 in the quarter mile, and high-jumped three feet, eight inches.

Midget Kaarin Jokinen was the busiest Kinsmen team girl placing in the top four in six events. A 12.2 in the 100 - yard dash and a 28.2 in the 220 were good enough for first-place ribbons.

Robin Mann made it a clean sweep in the senior midgets girls' dashes, taking the 440 in 67.7.

Jim Sled took first in the junior men's 220 (24.1) and shot put — 30 feet, 10 inches.

Becky Fell's 4 feet, eight inch high jump was best in the open ladies' competition.

Other Belleville participants were: Larry Savage, Roland Walton, Peter Crawford, Robin Carry, Andy Ricketts, Peter Locke, and Ralph Vandervoort.

Scarboro Jinx Again

A north Bendale team has again proved to be the fly in Belleville ointment.

Sunday it was the SACO Eastern Ontario bantam softball champions who fell victim to the Scarboro jinx, losing the first game of their best-of-three OASA semi-final series 8-0.

SACO's Ken Johnson struck out 10, and gave up 15 North Bendale hits in going the route.

His only hitting support came from John Sprackett (two singles), Ken Vos (triple), Bill Henry (single), and Bill Phillips (base single).

Ray Fox fanned nine in picking up the win, getting four hit back-up performances from Thompson and Sharpeneau.

Billy Casper Says:
Golf's Winner of the Year
SLICING CAN BE CURED; HERE'S HOW

Slicing—the old banana ball, the left-to-right shot —bothers many a golfer, although it's more prevalent among the less skilled. Just the same, nearly everyone will get into a slicing rut on occasion and it's good to know why the curve slices happen.

One long fade is almost a good shot, and it's caused by the clubface being open—pointing to the right of the target—at impact. Usually a player will hit such a shot when he fails to complete his backswing shoulder turn. To cure this, swing so you're looking at the ball over your left shoulder at the top (see illustration). The open face can also be caused by a sway toward the target on the downswing. Keep your head steady to eliminate the slice.

Legion Bantams Step Short

The Branch 99 Legion bantams went one step less than they did last year in Ontario Baseball Association playoffs, but many didn't expect them to even start the journey.

A 13-6 Sunday loss to a powerful Kitchener club ended the Legion bantams out of the OBA semi - finals in two straight games.

But the bantams, who last year went all the way to the Ontario finals before bowing to three games to Niagara Falls, had had a down season for players this season and were considered miracle-workers to steal the Eastern Ontario Baseball Association crown from Oshawa.

Brian Cousins and Mike Burley handled pitching chores for the bantams Sunday against the same Kitchener powerhouse that bombed them 21-1 in Kitchener last weekend.

Key hits for the Legion came on'other Danny Lapoointe, Allan Wood, Steve Bushlow and Cousins.

Marmora

MARMORA — Recent guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Manley Lavender were Major Eric Skelton of Windsor, Mr. and Mrs. Glen Lavender and children of Mitchell's Corners, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Kelly and Mr. and Mrs. Allan Kelly and daughter, Laurie, of Ontario, Calif.

Visiting recently with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Conner have been Mr. and Mrs. Jack O'Connor of Bainerstown, Ontario, Mr. and Mrs. Terry O'Connor of Sudbury, Mr. Leo and Miss Lyn O'Connor of Copper Cliff, Mrs. Bob Rydedge of Scarborough and Miss Pearl McCann of Toronto. Mr. and Mrs. O'Connor attended the wedding of Miss Marion O'Connor and Cameron Pitt at Copper Cliff last Friday.

Mrs. William Monk and Bernadette visited friends in Ottawa last week.

Mr. and Mrs. John Williams of Toronto spent last weekend with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Brady. Rosemary and John expect to leave September 9 for France where they will both be studying for a year at the University of Strasbourg. Jan Brady, who spent the summer employed with the Fish and Wildlife Branch of the Department of Lands and Forests at Sous Lookout, spent the holiday weekend at home.

Miss Grace Sheridan and Mrs. Lucille Crawford are holidaying this week at Failings Shore, N.Y.

Meagher Stuck For Week

Just being asked to attend a Junior A hockey camp is a compliment in itself.

Belleville's Terry Meagher must have had his share of compliments last week.

The 17 year-old overage midget survived all but the last cut to 25 players made Sunday at the Niagara Falls Flyers camp, and is returning home to prepare for the high school football season.

Yesterday's Stars

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Batting—Rico Carty, Braves, hit two homers including a two-run blast in the eighth innings that gave Atlanta a 3-2 victory over Houston Astros.

Pitching—Andy Messersmith, Angels, scattered three hits and struck out 11 in posting his 15th victory as California turned back Seattle Pilots 4-2.

Sports Briefs

Lindy's Pride Wins Again

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Lindy's Pride made it three for three in his bid for trotting's grand slam as he came from behind to the $101,670 Colonial Saturday night by 1¾ lengths over The Prospect.

Driver-trainer Howard Beissinger, who guided Lindy's Pride to a straight-heat victory last month in the Hambletonian, was in the sulky as the bay son of Star Pride scored in 2:00 2-5 for the mile. He earned $50,835 for Lindy Farms of Lindenhurst, N.Y., owned by a family which made its fortune collecting garbage.

Gurney Exhausts Gas

BRAINERD, Minn. (AP) — Dan Gurney ran out of gas and missed victory in the first 100-mile race, but conserved fuel in the second and won the over-all top money Sunday in the United States Auto Club championship car races at Doneybrooke International Speedway. Gordon Johncock zoomed past Gurney with 630 yards to go in the first heat and finished with the top time of 110.436 m.p.h.

Pigeons Not for Birds

Tom Woodcock's pigeons are not for the birds.

Particularly his '69-bred Modena that walked — or flew off with four of six championships at last week's Kingston show.

In addition to being judged the best bird of 278 in the show, the Woodcock pigeon was the best Modena, young bird and cock bird of the competition.

The only other two championships of the show also went to Belleville pigeon breeders. The left of Fred Waite and son brought home best hen and best junior pigeon honors.

TRADE SCHOOL

Not Getting Into College
Isn't The End Of The World

In fact, it might be the beginning of your world. A bright and very rewarding world. The world of computer programming.

Think about it for a minute. Here's a field as big and new and exciting as space exploration. Begging for talented people. And willing to pay them and pay them well.

No, you don't have to go to college to become a computer programmer. But you do have to go to school. A school that has the computers and the people to teach you how to use them.

And that's ECPI, Electronic Computer Programming Institute, an international educational system with more than 100 training centres and literally thousands of successful graduates.

We've got new IBM equipment and a staff that can teach you everything you have to know. And we can teach you during the day, evening — even Saturdays.

If you're over 17 and a high school graduate or its equivalent take the first step to your new career. Clip the coupon and we'll set up an aptitude test that will tell us — and you — if you've got what it takes. What do you have to lose?

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Human understanding and love of their less fortunate fellow men is the first step in helping drug addicts. Remember that it can happen to anyone.

I came from a background where all materialistic educational, emotional and spiritual needs were fulfilled in every conceivable way. But 11 years ago, while being treated with morphine and barbiturates during a severe illness, I came by tragic heartbreak to addiction.

It was a living hell on earth. What made it worse was the rejection by society; which did not treat the problem in the same light as alcoholism, mental illness or cancer.

For most of those years I lived in the jungle of human waste. I took 15 withdrawals in sincere efforts to be rehabilitated. I am sick of hearing that "junkheads" are sex maniacs and killers. They are very sick people who need help. Thank God there are some who care and are trying to find the answer to their cries.

Two years ago I hit bottom. Lost my home, family, children, friends. All I had was myself and a habit. But I still had that — and more guts than sense.

I had to relearn a whole new way of life. Thanks to many doctors I pulled myself up to help myself.

For the past two years I have lived the alcoholic's code of "one day at a time." I have been free. I have found my place, now and old friends, acceptance by my family and loved ones. And since, have married a wonderful man whose love and understanding has been the most vital instrument in my life. Soon I will have my children by him.

For the sake of others, Dr. Steincrohn, I hope you will print this letter. There should be more centres of hospitalization. More half-way houses to promote cure. I think my history will encourage other addicts to "get off the bottom."
— Mrs. S.

* * *

For Mrs. Y.: Here is a four-point guide by which you may assess your son as a possible suicide risk. If only suicidal thought is expressed, no immediate action is necessary except recheck by his doctor. If he actually indicates a method of self-destruction, a psychiatric should be consulted. If any action is taken to prepare for suicide, help of a psychiatric should be called and the patient protected from himself by hospitalization. One attempt is not always made and other attempts more likely. It's important. Mrs. Y., that you do something about your son now.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: My daughter, now 20, had a severe case of acne in her teens. It has left her face with many pockmarked scars. It has become an emotional problem with her now. She has been attractive and popular, although lately she has been confining herself to the house and hardly goes out. Can you help? — Mrs. W.

COMMENT: Perhaps you have overlooked previous replies to similar problems. I suggest a dermatologist or plastic surgeon for consideration of "dermabrasion" (planing the skin) or "chemical peel." Such procedures have been successful. Maybe your daughter can look forward to much improvement — physically and psychologically.

* * *

For Mrs. L.: I doubt that the "strawberry mark" on your child's face requires treatment at this time. They tend to disappear spontaneously. But this is a matter for your dermatologist or pediatrician to decide.

Council Aims to Shoot Down Misconceptions About Poverty

OTTAWA (CP) — The Economic Council of Canada has raised the question of whether the Bank of Canada and the federal government would be on the right medium-term track if they tighten further the already restrictive fiscal and monetary policies to try to overcome inflation.

Its sixth annual review released today says the principal result of more stringent demand-policy restraints this year "might well be seriously misfimed" and lead to a poor economic performance in 1970.

In effect, this would be the so-called "economic overkill" which some economists have been warning about recently. It means that the efforts of the central bank and the government to slow economic growth and contain price and cost increases could be so severe they would push the country into a recession.

This would lead to a sharp jump in unemployment and a general drop in economic expansion.

The council devotes only a brief part of its review to the situation, but it notes that the tight policies of the central bank and the government are aimed at curbing the demand side of the economy.

It says of this:

"In Canada, it is difficult to maintain that current inflation is a reflection of excessive demand pressures, for the Canadian economy has been operating with at least a moderate over-all margin of slack since 1967."

On the other hand, inflation in the United States is "very much one of excessive demand," made worse by the Vietnam war.

"Until some easing of price and cost increases takes place in the United States, Canadian policies to deal with domestic price and cost problems will be handicapped.

"Further fiscal and monetary unemployment and economic slack with no more than marginal effects on current rates of increase in prices and costs."

Furthermore, the council says, tighter restrictions in Canada now would have their main impact on the economy next year.

"And if excess demand pressures in the United States are brought under control by the latter part of 1969, the principal result of stringent demand-policy restraints in Canada this year might well be seriously mistimed in that the economy into a poor economic performance."

In other sections, the review says short-term conditions sometimes need unusual measures to counter them, but it also repeatedly emphasizes the lag time between implementing an economic policy and its effect being noticed.

"The council is apparently telling people you don't drive a car by watching the left-front fender," said one economic spokesman.

"You've got to look ahead."

Performance Plus Economy

High Unemployment Among Young Termed Waste of Valuable Resource

OTTAWA (CP) — Continuing high unemployment among the younger Canadians represents a potential source of social instability, as well as a waste of some of the country's most valuable human resources, the Economic Council of Canada says.

Its sixth annual review made public today says unemployment in 1968 among men under 25 averaged 9.7 per cent and calls for much more effective measures to get them jobs.

It also says that over-all employment will have to grow faster during the next few years than in the past just to provide jobs for people coming on the labor scene.

It forecasts that employment will have to rise by three per cent a year, just to keep up with the anticipated growth in the labor force, and even more quickly to reduce unemployment levels.

The growth rate was 2.1 per cent last year.

The council says recent unemployment rates of four or five per cent are too high to be tolerated.

"The employment increase in 1968 was less than 160,000, compared with 230,000 in 1967 and 290,000 in 1966. And in 1967 and 1968 together, unemployment rose by more than 100,000, in contrast to a decline of about 200,000 over the preceding five years."

Accidents, Not Sickness Kills Most Young Adults

OTTAWA (CP)-Canada should consider spending more money on reducing accidents among young adults rather than on health care to try to extend their life expectancy, the Economic Council of Canada says.

The sixth annual review made public today says accidents, especially cars, are the major cause of death in this group. So money might be better spent on reducing the frequency and severity of accidents.

The review says Canada's spending on health now is among the world's highest on a per capita basis. By 1975, it is projected to total nearly $5,000,000,000, about double the 1967 level.

This projection is based on the assumption that all provinces will have entered the federal medical insurance plan.

The council estimates the annual growth of consumer expenditure per capita for the 1967-75 period at 3.6 per cent. It says this would produce a 1975 level of consumer expenditure of over $2,500 per person in terms of the purchasing power of the dollar in 1967, when consumer expenditure averaged $1,910

Substantial Increases In Living, Spending

OTTAWA (CP) — Average Canadian living standards, as measured by the per capita volume of goods and services available, is expected to rise about 35 per cent between 1967 and 1975.

In its sixth annual review of the economy made public today, the Economic Council of Canada also predicts the volume of consumer spending in Canada will rise by 50 per cent in the same period.

It projects an annual average increase of 5.3 per cent that would push consumer spending on goods and services in 1975 to $39,000,000,000 in 1967 prices from $29,000,000,000 in 1967.

The council estimates the annual growth of consumer expenditure per capita for the 1967-75 period at 3.6 per cent. It says this would produce a 1975 level of consumer expenditure of over $2,500 per person in terms of the purchasing power of the dollar in 1967, when consumer expenditure averaged $1,910

Price, Cost Increases Diluting Hard-won Gains

OTTAWA (CP) — Price increases in Canada remain seriously out of line, the Economic Council of Canada reported today, as it reiterated its price goals which it admitted are "extraordinarily difficult to achieve."

"Unacceptably high rates of increases in prices and costs are diluting many of the hard-won gains achieved by Canadians since the beginning of the 1960s."

Canada's efforts to slow the increase would be handicapped until there is some easing of increases in the United States, the council said.

While the council reiterated its goal of holding price increases to two-per-cent a year, it said this would be virtually impossible to attain, consistent with other economic goals, until there are "much more effective supply policies."

The two-per-cent goal has not been achieved in the entire post-war period.

It was difficult to argue that inflation in Canada is due to excessive demand "for the Canadian economy has been operating with at least a moderate over-all margin of slack since 1967." But in the United States, said the council, the problem is caused by excessive demand and recent increases in that country have generally been higher than in Canada.

"Another change is the marked shift in expectations and attitudes about price trends, in the past year or two, a much more marked inflationary psychology has emerged in Canada and the United States. Expectations of continuing substantial price increases are apparently being taken increasingly into account in the markets for some goods and services as well as in the markets for labor and capital. In these circumstances, resistance to price and cost increases tend to be relieved."

With prices increasing by about four per cent last year, it is a matter of increasing concern, says the report.

Wheat Export Outlook Dim

OTTAWA (CP) — The Economic Council of Canada foresees a discouraging future for Canada's wheat exports.

The present difficulties which have caused "a very serious economic situation in the Prairie provinces," are not basically temporary, says the Council's sixth annual review.

"In other words, the present Canadian situation reflects basic underlying changes in the world grain economy that could produce virtual stagnation for future grain exports."

Exports up to 1975 may not be any higher than the 1967 level, says the report.

"It is clearly necessary to seek international restraints on subsidized trade and to seek a closer tailoring of Canadian products to buyers' requirements."

Canada faced major adjustments to its agriculture economy. "This implies a need to shift resources out of wheat production and into other forms of farm production—as well as further shifts of resources out of agriculture and into other types of economic activity."

Canada's situation is particularly difficult, says the report, because of its concentration on bread wheat. Prospects for this wheat are less encouraging than for feed grains.

The report says that wheat sales to Russia fell off more rapidly than expected because of increased production in that country—"a factor also tending to reduce Canadian grain exports to East and West Europe."

There has also been increased grain production in developing countries, due to new seeds, new methods and favorable weather.

Bumper crops in many countries and a softening of world markets have resulted in large carryovers and a decline in prices.

While some of these factors may be temporary, says the report, the prospects for Canadian grain exports, "do not appear to be encouraging."

In recommending a shift of agriculture resources to other areas, the council says it will be important to facilitate the shift "so that inequitable burdens of adjustment do not fall on individuals."

"Organizations such as the new Canada Grains Council should be encouraged to maintain a continuous review of long-term developments and prospects on a thoroughgoing basis, so as to provide the best possible advice on how the grain economy ought to adjust to rapidly changing world grain conditions."

Indians to Use Federal Grants To Strengthen Policy Opposition

PORT ARTHUR (CP) — Indians may be fighting the proposed new federal Indian policy with a federal grant of about $53,000.

The annual meeting of the Union of Ontario Indians was told Saturday by John McGilp, regional director of the Indian affairs branch, that a grant of $1 for each Indian in Ontario will be made.

The grant is being made to assist the UOI in building a sound organization, he said.

But Chief Frederick Plain of Sarnia, newly-elected union president, said the grant will help establish better communications between Indians and set up regional workshop meetings where real issues and problems can be talked over.

He said top priority will be given to uniting Ontario Indians against the proposed federal Indian policy before the government can begin to carry it out.

Discussion during the meeting indicated one of the biggest problems facing the UOI is the lack of communications between not only the Indians in southern and southern Ontario, but even neighboring Indian reserves.

Delegates charged the federal government appears to be trying to divide the Indians by "trying to sell" the policy to individual Indians or individual reserve leaders instead of bringing Indians together to discuss and develop a consensus.

The federal grant was the second of more than 50,000 announced at the meeting. Earlier, Indians were told by telephone that Ontario is granting $54,400 for a study by UOI of conditions on reserves.

Robert Bennett, who recently resigned as commissioner of the United States bureau of Indian affairs, said U.S. Indians continue to be treated as pawns between the federal and state governments.

Delegates were eager to hear him because of the similarity between the proposed Canadian policy and one begun in the U.S. in 1953 and abandoned in 1958.

Mr. Bennett, an Oneida who graduated from an Indian boarding school, said the psychological effect of the 1953 policy was even more damaging than the practical effect, in which communal Indian land was broken up and distributed to individual Indians.

"It, in effect, said that you are no longer an Indian tribe and you are no longer an Indian.

"This is what upset the Indian people more than anything because they felt that this was a way the government was using to destroy Indians as a people."

Under the proposed Canadian policy, Canada's 237,400 registered Indians will be put on the same legal footing as all other Canadians. The government wants to end the reserve system and give Indian bands ownership of the lands they now occupy.

Also, the Indian Act would be repealed and the Indian affairs branch would be abolished within five years.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For September 16

Your birthday today: A year begins now of constant movement, shifting positions, new technology in your field. All require you to stay on your toes for opportunity. Business and emotional development thrive side by side, often competing for your time at critical moments. Today's natives frequently are misunderstood as they do not mingle comfortably or else often suffer the difficulty of lacking full self-awareness.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): There is much that escapes the eye today — take nothing for granted. For once the most comfortable way is probably the most productive. Somebody nearby has a windfall, and it sets you thinking about your own situation.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Your position is stronger among strangers and influential people than among your own kin and associates. Adapt at home while displaying a bold surface in public. Today's conflicts pass quickly if treated as temporary.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Nobody quite understands what is bothering you, so it is better to expect nothing of anybody. Your imaginatives races; write down what comes to you — perhaps it's a poem which needs only touching up. No squabbling this evening.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Everything comes to you today if you stay calm. Have music around you. Put your leisure moments into definite planning for the future. Make a grand outline; begin filling in the possibilities.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): This is one of your creative, lucky days. Older people are helpful now with your suggestions. Improvements in your home, new clothing combine to uplift your morale.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): A series of incidents begin related to progress from the status quo to a new status within the year. Resolve to make positive thinking a lifelong habit. Start a survey to find out what you could do with current resources, but keep it tentative.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): According to the soundness of your plans and your efforts to make them work, money matters probably turn out extremely well. Take a friend with you while shopping. Buy new clothing now.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Make your sales presentation, offer your application. Friends are full of information, most of which is incomplete or unsuited to your purposes. Tomorrow is apt to be a day for decisions, so think about your resources this evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Today is favorable for signing agreements relating to your home and its improvement. Your career quietly inches up a notch. Follow your intuition and idealism rather than conventional logic.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Friends manage to involve you in matters you had not planned. One of them has something to celebrate. Calmly thread your way out of this entanglement. Bargains, items for entertaining, can be picked up today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Nobody offers much help, but you can improve your career on your own initiative. Make it clear and precise when you say what you want.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar 20): If you are on the right track, everything falls into place in an extraordinary way. If it doesn't turn out thus, then you must reflect seriously to find where you got off the direct path. 5

Charged in Kidnapping

Gary Adams (left) and John Rogan sit in back of police car early today after being charged along with three others, with the kidnapping of Mary Nelles. The five, who live at the same address in Toronto, are to appear in court in Whitby, Ont., Tuesday to face charges of kidnapping and conspiracy to kidnap. (CP Wirephoto).

Nelles Attend Church Service While Police Guard Money

TORONTO (CP) — Mary Nelles went to church with her husband Cliff Sunday while police guarded $200,000 at Barrie and six young bachelors accused of holding her for that amount in ransom waited in jail at nearby Whitby for a Tuesday court appearance.

The only physical reminder of Mrs. Nelles' 28-hour ordeal, which ended Tuesday afternoon with payment of the ransom and her release, was a scrape on the left side of her nose caused by a chafing blindfold.

But she said in a statement Saturday it was a "great shock" to learn that one of those charged with kidnapping and conspiracy to kidnap is "someone well known to the family and neighborhood."

He is Gary Adams, 26, a former boyfriend of Mrs. Nelles and a family friend. She denied published reports they had ever been engaged.

Arrested along with Adams Friday, following discovery of $200,000 under a wheelbarrow near a cottage in the Muskoka resort district, were four fellow-residents of a plush midtown apartment building. A Toronto policeman was arrested Saturday.

The others charged are Ralph Cameron, 25, who worked in a printing office operated by Adams; Michael Whiteside, 24, a printing salesman; John Rogan, 30, a real estate salesman; Peter Burns, 23, a transport company employee; and Constable Richard Yeowart, 28.

The six, being held without bail, are expected to be remanded to a later date when they appear at 10 a.m. Tuesday in the provincial criminal court for Ontario County at Whitby, 15 miles east of here. The Nelles' Claremont home, where the kidnapping took place, is in that county.

Constable Yeowart's parents, after learning of his arrest at their home where he also lived, cut short a Vancouver vacation and flew home to arrange for his defence.

OPP Constable Ernest Bond described how he discovered the money.

"The wheelbarrow looked like it hadn't been moved in 20 years," he said. "It was just off the path and barely fitted between two trees.

"I turned it over, saw the new green garbage bag, put the wheelbarrow over it again and called for Sgt. Jim Simmons. . . . We looked at it and I saw a $20 bill through the plastic. . . ."

NATO Allies Ease Export Controls On Strategic Goods

LONDON (AP) — Fourteen North Atlantic Treaty Organization allies and Japan have agreed to relax controls on the export of many strategic goods to the Soviet Union and its Communist partners in Europe.

Diplomats, reporting this Sunday, said the allies also decided the new easements should not be applied to Communist China, North Vietnam, North Korea and the pro-Peking European Communist state of Albania.

The accord was said to have emerged only after Japan argued in favor of applying the same standards to China and the Soviet Union.

The chief effect of the new agreement will be to make it easier for East European states to buy certain types of commercial computers, rare metals and their alloys, chemical and petroleum equipment, a wide but careful defined range of industrial, electrical and transportation goods and specific categories of electronic and precision instruments.

The broad International agreement revising allied export controls was reached after months of hard negotiating by a Paris-based body known simply as the Co-ordinating Committee. It consists of all NATO states minus Iceland—but plus Japan, a major pro-Western industrial power.

The committee's role is to oversee general allied policy which is to deny Communist countries any commodity, or technical data that would strengthen their war-potential and thus jeopardize the security of the West.

Pot Puffers, Nude Dancers Help Revive Rock 'n' Roll

TORONTO (CP) — Rock'n' roll was alive and loud at Toronto Varsity Stadium Saturday as a new generation welcomed an old sound.

Some of the big names of the rocking '50s—Bo Didley, Little Richard, Jerry Lee Lewis and Gene Vincent—were billed along with newer groups such as The Doors, Cat Mother and John Lennon's Plastic Ono Band.

The 12-hour program, billed as a rock 'n' roll revival, started off under sunny skies with about 4,000 fans sprawled on the football field or sitting in the stands of the 20,000-seat stadium. But by midnight the crowd had swelled to about 10,000 as marijuana odor permeated the area.

Among the audience were persons who danced naked and bikini-clad girls with painted bodies.

Police said no arrests were made although several persons were removed from the stadium.

Beatle John Lennon appeared late in the evening with the Plastic Ono Band, a new group which includes his Japanese-born wife Yoko Ono.

Core Renewal

Trenton 'Super Block' Would Encompass Old Post Office

By ELMER BONTER
Staff Reporter

Trenton Developers interested in upgrading the town's central core proposed to council last night the first real serious plan to rehabilitate the old post office site and two properties on either side of it.

All but one councillor voted for granting the developers an exclusive option so necessary details could be effected before a final agreement was considered.

Councillor Gerald Weaver asked to have his objection noted. "I think it's further confusion being added to the confusion," he observed.

Councillor Weaver also voted No on Councillor S. R. Ketchenson's motion the council committee continue dealing with the representative for the developers in order for him as the chairman to report to council from time to time while the option is in effect. The motion carried by 5-1 approval.

The general government committee was authorized to find a use for the town-owned post office property last February.

The former federal government building became the property of the town when the majority of the people voted in favor of council using tax money to purchase it.

The scheme unveiled by G. J. Forrest, the special project manager for Revenue Properties Central Development Limited of Toronto, outlined the advantages of combining a new commercial complex with a downtown civic square of ultra modern design.

The developers referred to their imaginative proposal — a super block containing commercial facilities and banking and retail outlets. The distinctive looking post office clock tower would remain intact as a tall stone column separating two banks fronting on Dundas Street.

The developers asked to enter into agreement with the town in order to complete their proposal. The time limit on an exclusive option suggested by them is in effect from Sept. 16 for a period of 120 days. The purpose of the agreement was spelled out as follows: (a) to negotiate leases with two banks, (b) to open negotiations with several prospective office tenants for 10,000 to 15,000 square feet of "net rental area", (c) to open negotiations with local prospective retail owners, (d) the securing of several properties

Baby Quad Dead

VANCOUVER (CP) — One of the quadruplets born Saturday to a 25-year-old Vancouver housewife died early today and another is in poor condition but "holding his own."

No details were available on the death of the two pound 7½ ounce girl, the first of the four born to Mr. and Mrs. James Larmer.

A hospital spokesman said a two-pound 6¾ ounce boy, the third born, was in poor condition but "holding his own and maybe a little better."

The other two babies—both girls—are in fair condition.

Dr. R. H. McNaughton, who delivered the quads at St. Paul's hospital here had said late Monday that if the quads could get through the next 24 hours they would probably survive.

Belfast Wall Coming Down

BELFAST (AP) — The British Army today announced the start of the dismantling of barricades in the Falls Road district of Belfast and said three battalions of troops had moved in to "provide massive protection" for the Roman Catholic inhabitants.

Lt.-Gen. Sir Ian Freeland, British Army commander in Northern Ireland, said the dismantling operation began after talks with the Ulster government and in accordance with procedure worked out last week with Belfast's civil rights leaders.

The Falls Road area was the scene of some of the worst riot-ing in Belfast last month.

Barricades were being removed, in some cases by the troops themselves, in Davis Street and in some other streets around the Davis Tower block, the army said. In some instances, army officials said, the local population was helping the troops take down the obstructions.

But in Gilford Street a crowd of women and children sat in front of their barricade singing and chanting civil rights slogans and refusing to allow the removal of the barricade.

A Roman Catholic citizens' committee indicated today that Belfast's Catholics were ready to remove their barricades, but later it withdrew the statement.

The Central Citizens' Defence Committee called a meeting tonight to vote on the matter.

The barricades stay until we've made a democratic decision," said Jim Sullivan, chairman of the committee.

He was replying to Bishop William Philbin, the Roman Catholic bishop of Down and Connor, who toured the barricades and told the men behind them:

"These barricades must come down now. We will not be bullied into keeping them by a small minority."

Oh Canada, Where Are You Going? Washington's Watching

OTTAWA (CP) — The public and private sectors of the Canadian economy are going to have a lot to live up to if people are going to achieve a potential living-standard increase of 35 per cent during the next five years offered by the Economic Council of Canada.

By coupling its promise of a better life for all Canadians with warnings of the urgent need for setting up priorities to allocate the use of the country's economic resources, the council has made it clear that there will be no easy rewards in store in the future.

The biggest problem, the council says, is that the country has no clear idea of where it wants to go or what economic goals it wants to achieve.

When the council's first review came out in 1965, it set out specific goals, such as annual price increases of two per cent a year and a maximum unemployment rate of three per cent.

Neither of these targets has been achieved in recent years and the latest review does not offer fresh specific objectives.

Instead, it poses these questions:

"What will be society's preferences as we go forward into the 1970s?

"Can they be reconciled to our resources?

"If our goals exceed our means, will priorities be established on the basis of a clear understanding of the options and possibilities?

"Or will they emerge out of a confusing welter of conflicting claims and pressures?"

The council attempts no answer to these questions itself, but it says the best reply can come from "effective machinery for a continuing appraisal and re-appraisal of society's changing needs and preferences within the context of an over-all framework of national goals and objectives."

Immediate reaction to this call—by no means new, or unique to the economic council —was that it's fine in theory but where is it going to start.

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canada's economy, as viewed by experts of the United States embassy in Ottawa, "is expected to continue expanding through the remainder of 1969."

But the pace will "probably slacken" as real growth declines from the rapid rate set in the first quarter "and some progress is made in curtailing inflation."

The assessment comes in the embassy's semi-annual economic trends report, reviewed in the current issue of International Commerce, a weekly published by the U.S. commerce department.

"Growth this year is being supported mainly by increased business investment in plant and equipment, which has resulted in a continued rise of imports," the report says. More than two-thirds of those imports come from the U.S.

The growth of imports from the U.S. "is expected to keep up as long as the Canadian investment boom continues."

Charting A Course

Lou Noel and his wife Grace, of Brighton, pore over Loyalist extension program details last night. They were among prospective students seeking advice on courses as registrations opened for night classes at community college.

Night School Family Affair

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Adrianus Vogt came to Canada from Holland 10 years ago.

He wants to further improve his English and last night Mr. Vogt — caretaker of a Belleville church — sought out a course at Loyalist.

Lou Noel and his wife Grace live at Brighton. They also were at Loyalist last night.

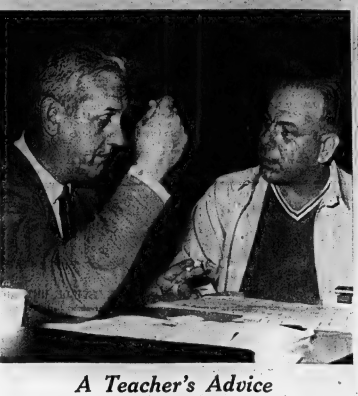
They're a working couple. Mr. Noel with the armed services administration at Canadian Forces Base, Trenton, his wife in the office of an insurance adjuster.

Both were seeking courses that might profit their career futures.

Mr. Vogt and the Noels had at least one thing in common: They were representative of the diversity of people and personal reasons which will make up the Quinte area's most sophisticated night schools.

They were among the steady flow of applicants last night as Loyalist began registering students for its 1969-70 extension course programs.

"Certainly there's a tremendous interest in the community in the courses," says Loyalist president J. K. Bradford. "It's off to a good start."



He expects enrolment in night courses this year could settle between 500 600.

Last night some 50 students registered their applications in various courses.

However, it may be some hours before the total enrolment is registered.

College staff members will stay on duty for the next "two or three nights," says the president while, following last year's pattern, registration

Potential students now can sort through the curriculum and confer with college officials on the likeliest courses to take.

A Teacher's Advice

Loyalist instructor William Buckley chats over course possibilities with Adrianus Vogt, Belleviilian seeking language studies. The community college opened night course registrations last night and more than 500 students may register, says a spokesman.

Second Phase of BGH To Start Next Spring

Work on the second phase of the building program at Belleville General Hospital is expected to begin next spring. Hospital Administrator Philip Rickard told Belleville Rotarians who were guests of the hospital at dinner last night.

The work, joining the old and the new areas of the hospital, will involve construction of the laundry, stores and administration building after demolition of the east and south wings.

Cost of the project is approximately $2,000,000.

Mr. Rickard said a new 54-bed ward for long-term patients will be opened next month, providing in all accommodation for more than 100 in this category.

Following the dinner, members of the administrative and medical staffs conducted the Rotarians on a tour of the hospital which has been a source of much interest to hospital authorities throughout Canada.

Mr. Rickard praised the spirit of the staff at Belleville General, the interest they show in their departments, and noted that many hospital representatives from the province and beyond have visited it.

Rotarians learned that the Hubbard Tank they financed for patients requiring physiotherapy treatment will be opened for use officially next month. However, Mr. Rickard said it had been used once already for a patient who had suffered 50 per cent radiation burns.

The equipment has proved invaluable in this case, the patient previously having had to go to London, Ontario, for treatment.

Fire Fighting Course Offered in District

A series of lectures on the various aspects of fire fighting is being offered to Quinte district fire fighters by Belleville district fire services adviser Clyde H. Pope.

The lectures to be staged over a 14-week period will be held at the Corby Distillery recreation hall with the first session scheduled for Monday, Sept. 22.

The program will consist of theory and practical evolution on basic fire fighting including chemistry of fire, basic hydraulics, pumper operations, care and maintenance of hose, extinguishers and salvage operations. Thirteen different subjects will be discussed in the 14 sessions.

The sessionsare open to all interested personnel connected with fire safety, as well as members of area permanent and volunteer fire department. Also the surveys have been conducted

The training program is offered primarily for Thurlow, Ameliasburg, Tyendinaga and Picton departments, but invitations have also been extended to Sidney, Tweed, Deseronto, Belleville departments and to the privately owned departments at Corbyville and at Chisholms Mills.

Highland Ave. Road Work Jams Traffic

Last year's traffic bottlenecks during the reconstruction of West Bridge Street were relived briefly this morning as city work department employees carried out a pavement repair project on Highland Ave.

The section of street under repair was the asphalt laid last year to match the new concrete pavement at the top of Bridge Street hill.

During the repaving process heavy rush hour traffic along Highland Ave. piled up and to ease the congestion flagmen directed eastbound traffic down the "Devil's Elbow" hill and along Dundas and Coleman streets.

The pavement repairs ordinarily should have been carried out by the last year's contractor as part of his contract requirement.

Instead, the city works department carried out the repairs and the cost will be deducted from the contractor's holdback.

BRENT MacGREGOR

Engineer Joins City Hall Staff

Belleville has a new assistant city engineer this week.

He is Brent MacGregor, formerly with a private engineering firm in Sarnia, who this week assumed his new position at city hall. He succeeds Roy Brankley, who has accepted a position on the engineering staff at Woodstock.

In housing-short Belleville, Mr. MacGregor is now looking for a bachelor apartment.

Persons admitted during later hours would be allowed in at a reduced rate as the hour draws late. Persons having advance tickets would only have until 9:30 to gain admittance with the advance ticket. After that hour they will have to line up to gain admittance with others who have not purchased advance tickets.

On hand at last night's meeting as well were Paul Stevenson of the Belleville Fire Department and Sgt. Douglas Ellis of the Belleville Police Department who acted as safety and legal advisors to the rock concert.

But last night organization was the thing. All the young people were organized into committees and two members were made chairman and assistant chairman of the whole event.

Plaza Stores Plan Giant Paint-in Color will run riot at the eastend Belleville Shopping Plaza during Belleville Week.

Plans now are going ahead for a giant paint-in of store windows along the plaza mall during the civic celebrations.

The project will mobilize teams of high school art students, reports plaza association president Larry Towns.

Art teachers at the schools will select the most talented among an estimated 600 students for the job.

The big paint-in, tentatively scheduled for Sept. 27 will see dirtday windows colorfully embellished with artistic concepts centred on the Belleville Week theme Tomorrow Is Here.

Walkathon Offered NHL Prize

At least one walker in Saturday's round the-bay hike to raise funds for the Quinte Community Recreation Centre will get an enjoyable rest following the 30-mile trek.

The Belleville Week Committee has offered three National Hockey League tickets to the minor sports youngster who obtains the most pledges towards the arena project.

The tickets will be presented by Mayor J. Russell Sostt at the civic dinner to be held in Bleecker Auditorium Sept. 29.

Post Office Tower Would Remain as Focal Point of Super Block

Trenton Council Endorses Bid To Redevelop Downtown Core

required to complete project, (e) to satisfy the town's zoning bylaws including parking etc., (f) to satisfy the building - bylaws.

The developers explained the reason for seeking the "exclusive option" was to enable them to enter into long-term lease agreements with tenants and subsequent financing arrangements with major lending institutions in order to establish a borrowing rate and commitment.

The developers described their proposal as a non-profit development.

In addition to the banks, office space above them would comprise 10,000 square feet.

About the same area would be available to commercial tenants in a mall below grade level.

Elevators would be used to move people from level to level. There would be a restaurant included.

The proposal called for a public area 3,000 square feet in size . . . while there was a space set aside at the rear to accommodate 50 cars. Additional parking could be made available to the east within the confines of the development.

Construction of the super block would mean a number of changes for the central core.

The present Canadian Bank of Commerce building and the Saylor building would be removed. It would be necessary to re-align Murphy Street and extend it south for access to the parking area.

The developers' suggestion for the clock tower was a novel miniature museum housing a historical collection and operated by an area service club.

The developers revealed interesting observations that had resulted from research they had conducted in preparing a brief to accompany their proposal.

In expanding the idea Mr. Forrest reported:

"It became evident to us that Trenton is at the threshold of a re-development cycle, and therefore, of considerable potential interest to us. This stimulus has been identified as an atmosphere of change and growth. The new and old stood together but the trend is increasingly toward the new.

"We have stressed on all occasions the danger of allowing the core of a city or town to become neglected to the point of "no return", and with demise of the core, the extremities wither and perish. The prime example of this situation is the City of Detroit, Michigan, and to this end we sell our purpose."

There is little doubt in the minds of a large number of people who have been associated with this project that, if it can come to pass, this will trigger the whole of the urban renewal program.

"The management of any major corporation, whether for the purpose of obtaining private profit or for the purpose of providing public services, requires efficient facilities. It is no accident that the corporations which make the most rapid progress are those which provide management and staff with the most efficient working tools. The factor of morale alone is of greatest importance.

"Those cities which have moved decisively in the field of providing modern facilities, i.e. Toronto, Ottawa, Boston, Pittsburgh or Hartford to name several, have reaped immense indirect as well as direct advantage."

OMB Hearing Date Oct. 27

ties concerned met with OMB officials to arrange the date for the re-hearing.

Late last winter the OMB ruled against the city's application for a zoning change to allow Cambridge Leasehold Ltd. to construct the north-end plaza.

In making its decision the OMB ruled that any such development should wait until the city's official plan is completed and the report of the current urban renewal study is received by the city.

The OMB in its decision noted that both reports will be available by the end of the year and suggested the question of location of a regional shopping centre, if needed, would be then answered.

(Town planning engineers, Procter, Redfern, Bousfield and Bacon have advised city hall that their report on the urban renewal study should be in the mail by the middle of this week.)

But the OMB decision ruling against the shopping plaza was an unpopular one for many Belleville residents.

Protests were made to Quinte riding member Richard Potter and the Belleville Citizens committee collected 11,000 signatures for a petition which was taken to Queen's Park.

As a result a re-hearing into the plaza question was ordered by the cabinet.

In the meantime, Oshawa Wholesale Ltd., owners of Towers Discount Store, who were the main objectors against the city's application for North Front street rezoning, appealed the OMB approval of the Thurlow township zoning bylaw.

The township bylaw, passed in 1968, would have allowed construction of a shopping plaza north of Highway 401—only a few hundred yards from the North Front Street site in Belleville where Cambridge Leaseholds planned construction.

The Municipal Board decision was that as the city's rezoning application and the township's zoning bylaw questions were somewhat related, the re-hearing on both issues should be held jointly.

This morning Mayor J. Russell Scott said he was pleased the date for the re-hearing on the plaza question had been set.

"I am glad to know that we are going to have the re-hearing and hope the results will be positive so that we can proceed with the shopping plaza," he said.

Yesterday's meeting with the OMB in Toronto to arrange the re-hearing date was attended by counsel of all parties concerned.

City solicitor E. Guss Porter represented the city while Cambridge Leaseholds was represented by H. B. Robinson. Oshawa Wholesale Ltd. and Towers was represented by Robert Macaulay and H. S. Orpschuck. Thurlow's representative at the meeting was J. F. Herron, member of a Toronto legal firm.

Today city solicitor Porter would not hazard a guess as to how long the October rehearing might last.

He said the city's presentation with respect to its zoning bylaw would not last as long as at the initial hearing last winter but suggested Thurlow's case could very well extend the over-all time.

Last winter the hearing ran for eight days.

Neither did Mr. Porter know whether the city's application for re-zoning and the Thurlow bylaw would be treated as separate matters.

How the re-hearing is conducted will be at the discretion of the OMB members assigned to the case, Mr. Porter said.

ESTATE

HOW MUCH ADVERTISING IS NECESSARY TO SELL YOUR HOUSE FAST?

ED McKINNEY
J. E. McKinney Realty Ltd.

Very often, it may be none.

If a realtor is aggressive in seeking out prospective buyers and sellers — and diligent at keeping his records — the chances are very good that he has a buyer waiting the moment you put your house up for sale.

This often result in an almost immediate sale without even the time to advertise the property, let alone the need

But don't be misled by appearances. The realtor will have earned his commission by the weeks and months of pavement pounding that preceded the sale.

And during his day-to-day detailing of each buyer's needs and desires that a realtor accumulates a prospect list that covers almost any property put up for sale.

This is the key to successful marketing of real estate property — the matching of the right buyer to the right property with all the numerous details of personal wants to be considered and weighed.

An experienced and competent realtor will save you time by avoiding properties that are not suited to your needs or desires. And perhaps a good deal of money too by steering you away from a property you will later be unhappy with.

Don't sell until you see the property you want advertised. Seek out a competent realtor The perfect house for you may just have been added to his files.

A Matter of Concern

In the centre of the civic debate in Trenton for the past three years, the downtown Post Office would disappear under plans presented to town council last night. The developers' proposal won support from council on a 5-1 vote. An exclusive option is required by the developers to enable them to overcome the problems.

Bail Amounts Set

presented by a different lawyer in the crowded courtroom in this town 25 miles east of Toronto. No pleas were taken.

In setting bail Judge Jermyn said the bail had to be high because "these are serious charges and can affect the welfare of almost anyone in this country."

"The $50,000 is not out of line."

Lawyer Robert Hopkins, representing Constable Richard Yeowart, 26, made the most dramatic plea for lower bail. He said the police client—a member of the Metropolitan Toronto police force for six years—had appealed for help from his father who is nearing retirement.

Mr. Hopkins said the father had offered to put up his entire life savings—$8,000—as bail.

Some of the other lawyers said their clients had not resisted arrest and had no previous criminal record. They said there was no evidence to show that their clients would be absent from the next hearing.

Death Penalty Issue

The recent commuting of the death sentence imposed on Leonard Odd Borg for killing a Mountie in 1967 continues to be a matter for concern.

When the decision was announced some weeks ago we asked why the federal government had so ruled when murder of a policeman or prison guard was still grounds for the death penalty in Canada.

"It is disturbing," we noted, "when crimes of violence are on the increase and additional strain is being placed on law enforcement that such a decision should be made."

Borg himself observed, "if they commute me, they'll be making a mockery of their own bill . . ." He was referring to the fact the death penalty was abolished for a trial period of five years in 1967 but was retained for murderers of prison guards and police officers.

Meanwhile the decision has been protested by the Canadian Association of Police Chiefs meeting in Edmonton. Chief Allison Cookson said the police were now virtually "sitting ducks for anyone who might want to get rid of them."

The anxiety of the police is understandable. Statistics show the trend since the death penalty was abolished is upward where violent crime is concerned. The number of murders has increased and crimes against the person in Canada's larger centres in particular are becoming more prevalent.

Leniency toward the criminal element in society poses a twin threat toward both the public and the police. As such it should not be tolerated. But tolerated it is; so long as this trend continues so long can we expect a worsening picture regarding crime in Canada, particularly as police also warn that the Cosa Nostra and other foreign elements in the sphere of organized crime are stepping up their activities.

Certainly this is no time to encourage commuting of the death sentence for killers of police officers and prison guards. The federal government has a responsibility to support law enforcement, not hamper it to the point where both police and public are threatened by those who could disrupt society.

French Progresses

Both the Province of Quebec and the French language together represent one of Canada's principal political footballs.

In Quebec were just another substantially Anglo-Saxon region, similar in most social respects to the others that make up Canada it might make for a calmer atmosphere — but most certainly it would be a much duller place!

So as the French so eloquently put it, Vive La Difference.

As for the French language the fact it has become a political football is unfortunate. As one of the most widely-used of the world's languages it is one that should be taught as a matter of course. Indeed this seems to be more and more the case today.

In Toronto, for example, the city's first French-language public high school, housed in unfinished portable classrooms, has begun its teaching program. Ecole Secondaire Etienne Brule is using books prescribed for separate schools and books from Europe as well as those already printed in French for Ontario public classrooms.

Imagine then — a French school in the heart of Anglo-Saxon Canada. And as if this were not enough, it has been announced that Ontario's educational television system will offer a new series for pre-schoolers in French as part of its program this year.

Canada and its people will reach heightened maturity as more of its people become equally conversant in English and French, not to mention such languages as German and Spanish. But so long as people can speak only their mother tongue Canada can not really call itself a bilingual nation.

Tweed's Catch

Tweed Kiwanis Skating Club will be the envy of many a fellow group this winter with Belleville sisters Jane and Peggy McCutcheon for coaches. The Belleville sisters have been star performers with the Holiday on Ice revue for the past four years and before that had won gold medals for figure skating in both Canada and the United States. We imagine that as a result of their engagement by the club, interest in skating in the Tweed area will be even keener this winter.

But Are They Listening?

External Affairs Next for Trudeau Economy Chop

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — It must be wonderful to work in the department of external affairs.

It is a snug little gentlemen's club in an unreal world of its own where nobody worries about anything . . . not even what the prime minister says about it.

And Prime Minister Trudeau has not been particularly flattering in his recent references to the striped - pants - and - cutaway-coat-department.

First he wondered what the diplomats did to justify their existence, and asked what they reported from their listening posts abroad in their despatches to Ottawa that he could not get more quickly and in perhaps better detail in the newspapers.

Then he singled them out as the Really Big Spenders in the federal service, remarking that the operating cost of the department had doubled in only eight years, and unless somebody cut them down to size, the diplomatic budget would multiply five times in the next six.

There would have to be some changes made, he warned.

Canadian embassies and legations around the world would be scrutinized one by one, staff cut back in "some cases," and even "a few" diplomatic outposts closed.

Currently, external affairs is spending an annual $177,169,400, up by a hefty $19,419,400 from last year.

The payroll this year is up some $2,000,000 to $21,460,600, with the richest slice of it go ing to the $21 administrative and foreign service-officers as the upper echelon calls its people.

Incredibly, these FSO's who show the flag around the world and supposedly enhance Canadian prestige by serving the driest martinis and finest cognacs, have organized a union and recently signed their first collective bargaining agreement with the government.

It is a four-year deal, wraps up a fat package or retrospective pay back to 1967, and next month, in stages will have enriched the salary of a grade two FSO from a minimum $7,500 to $10,322.

It jumps a grade five FSO from a floor of $13,301 to a ceiling of $18,200.

And it lifts a grade eight FSO from a starting $22,230 to the elevation of $26,601.

The foreign service offices may not relish the idea of being "organized" like such "common" taxpaying working stiffs as mechanics or miners, but they sure have to love the loot it gets them.

Or so you would think.

But you would be wrong.

It was not enough.

There had to be fringe benefits over and above the privileged plums such as tax-free living and tax-free cars that come built into the striped pants profession.

They got some niftier, too.

Like government loans of up to $2,500 when assigned overseas.

Plus loans of up to $1,500 for the purchase of that taxpree car.

Plus shipping expenses for the car.

Plus a "dislocation allowance" of up to $200.

Plus rent and utilities subsidies when charges exceed Ottawa rates.

Plus a $540 "language allowance."

Plus a four percent increase in "foreign service premiums."

Plus 11 other such "perks."

In contrast to the way the department serves itself — $46,000,000 in headquarters operating costs plus $56,000,000 for its diplomatic establishments abroad — external affairs this year, like last year, is spending precisely $25,000 in "assistance to distressed Canadians abroad."

Which sort of underlines the well-authenticated fact that the last person any Canadian legation or embassy wants to see — and the most churlishly unwelcome when the poor fellow does show up, is the touring taxpayer from home.

So these are the diplomats the prime minister has warned must rough it abroad on a reduced budget.

Clearly they were not listening to him, or if they were, they are ignoring it.

And you can not blame them. They have heard it all too before.

Former Prime Minister Diefenbaker, on his first New York appearance before the UN, called a press conference in his Drake Hotel suite to tell the assembled reporters — one almost toppled backward in astonishment through the window and down onto Fifth Avenue — that he was "wise to those guys" in external affairs, who, he very well knew "did not do enough to keep themselves warm."

He swore he was "going to change all that" — but in the years since, external affairs has doubled itself.

Prime Ministers may come and go, but the bureaucracy goes on forever.

"Aside from the cost of books and supplies, what did you learn at school today?"

Seek Answers To Cosmic Phenomenon

Cornerbrook Western Star

Quarks are among the most interesting scientific phenomenon. Most scientists say they exist in theory, but no one has ever seen one. Yet, they are considered to be the most important particle of an atom—literally, the building block of the universe.

In the latest expedition to find the elusive quarks, a group of Australian scientists has taken to the sun-scorched bush country 250 miles north-west of Sydney. They are keeping watch on 34 recording stations insolanted in the ground over a 15-square mile area.

By the end of the year they hope to expand their coverage to 38 square miles.

They are collecting bombardments from cosmic showers, which hit the area every 30 minutes.

Because of our greater area, and new methods of recording the air showers, a member of the team explained, we can pick up particles travelling with far greater energy than have ever been recorded before."

Undoubtedly, this is one of the largest missing particle hunts in history. The outcome will depend on whether the massive agent, which could explain much about matter and the construction of the universe, will come to visit.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Andrew Bonar Law, the only British prime minister born outside the United Kingdom, was born at Rexton, N.B., 111 years ago today—in 1858. Son of a Presbyterian clergyman, he was educated in New Brunswick and Glasgow, Scotland, before entering business in Glasgow. In 1900 he left business and entered Parliament as a Glasgow MP. He later held other seats and gained the Conservative party leadership in 1911. In 1915 he joined the war coalition as colonial secretary and when the coalition fell in 1922, he became the prime minister.

At 11.45 p.m. last night the House of Commons had completed its program, putting through the budget involving heavy taxation increase and a new excess profits measure, and three other measures including one authorizing creation of a Ministry of Munitions and Supply. Moving at record breaking speed which carried the debate through all stages in six frantic hours, the House of Commons completed work of the momentous war session but the Senate may block prorogation planned for noon EDT today. In addition to the budget pre sentation, important announcements were made by Prime Minister Mackenzie King, who told the House he was convinced there should be no election until after another session of the present parliament which he would call in January or earlier.

A fast game of baseball was played on the Ann Street School grounds between the Red Sox and the Maple Leafs. The result was a score of 9 to 0 in favor of the Red Sox. The battery for the Red Sox was Maraskas and Ashley. Maraskas pitched brilliant ball, striking out 19 men during the game. He was also the batting star, with a home run, two triples and three singles in six times at bat. Ashley, the catcher, played a good game. This pair make a good battery and should be heard from next year.

Students Union in Disarray

Winnipeg Free Press

The Canadian Union of Students (CUS) broke up their meeting at Port Arthur with nothing much to show for it except that some student radicals would rather sacrifice their union than their postures or their language. Which doesn't surprise anybody who already knew that there is nothing ugly, rational, and nothing at all sensible, about these revolutionaries of the academic communities.

Whether a Canadian students' union is really necessary has now become a good question. In a generation that is alleged to be in revolt against centralization and impersonal pressures, and imposed views, perhaps the most incongruous thing about the student community is a students' union that has been arrogant, doctrinaire and bullying — and all from a point of view shared only by a minority of student bodies and local universities. Perhaps when Carleton and Toronto come to cast their votes for or against membership in the Canadian students' union, they will take account of the notion that a student body that cannot govern itself cannot contribute much to student welfare.

Both Church and Public to Blame

Are We Going in Too Many Directions Too Fast?

Ottawa Journal

An Anglican Bishop quietly "confessed" to the General Synod a fortnight or so ago that his conscience was bothering him both as to his own service and to the workings of his church.

He mused sadly that the church "as structured" might last only 10 years or so — "and I don't mean just the Anglican Church of Canada." The church he warned, could die "from self-strangulation by its own prosperity." "We possess all things, that's why we have nothing."

What consolation here for those professing and not-professing Christians who often search about for a reason for their inadequate faith and imperfect lives? Yes, the fault is "the church" — many of us said, happy to be relieved of blame.

Have not most of us — in most creeds — for years been saying that the church was not active enough in daily affairs, or was meddling too much in them? The church was becoming too modern, or clinging too much to old creeds and concepts. It was a prisoner of pomp and ceremonial or committing the outrage of allowing actors and guitarists in its sanctuary! Its priests should keep out of or go into the Yorkvilles and the market places!

This controversy, tossed again by the honest bishop, seems to have missed the point, or to have missed two points.

(1) Bishop Dean (of the Caribboo) was not proclaiming end of the church but feeling that "it will have to die if it is to live."

"For the compassionate we are more and more the organization of the pre-occupied with ourselves."

(2) Bishop Dean was speaking about the worldly affluence of churches but also of people as citizens who talk of charity in one per cents but give not charitably. True, he did not mention us as citizens and was examining only his own church, or those of the church — but we the people are in varying degrees its congregatia, affiliat or slothful.

One suspects, in fact, that Bishop Dean was reacting in his "trade" the disillusionment felt by any sensitive people in their own "trades," their days. We are all finding we are going too many directions and too fast, that we have too many acquaintances and too few friends, that too much of our work we do with only part of our hearts and half of our skills.

How often now we hear people saying they had meant to go and see an old friend in the hospital but had put it off and now it was too late! Resolving to touch with relatives; helping out-of-luck neighbors, joining a welfare organization r a choir or a study group or a bird-watching unit — all manner of such things now are always about to do but don't.

"The pace is too fast," we say Or, as Bishop Dean has put it, "we are more and more preoccupied with ourselves."

Bishop Dean may reasonably claim that the church — and all churches — must bear some of the blame for the spiritual unrest and discontent that is all around us these days. But he should not be greedy and hoard-nate in that claim! It isn't that the Christian concept of brotherhood and charity has been proven wrong. It's just that we are not giving it a real try — neither the churches nor the people.

Your Doing A Good Job, but...

Education Directors Told Flatly to Economize by Province

TORONTO (CP) — All of Ontario's education directors and school board chairmen met in a group for the first time Monday, and the province's political leaders seized the chance to deliver a blunt warning—economize.

Premier John Robarts, Treasurer Charles MacNaughton and Education Minister William Davis addressed the opening session of a conference called New Partners for a New Decade, sponsored by Mr. Davis.

Both Mr. Davis and Mr. Robarts noted it was the first time all the education officials could all together for a meeting.

There had been too many of them before about 1,800 local separate and public boards were amalgamated into 228 regional boards Jan. 1.

Mr. MacNaughton praised the boards for efforts to stay within a budget restriction of a 15-percent rise over the amount spent by their local boards the year before, but warned "we may have to impose further restrictions."

He said expected increases in education spending would raise the expense to $3,400,000,000 in four years from $1,000,000,000 this year. This would eat up the total expected increase in provincial revenue.

"In other words, if education costs were allowed to increase at their present rate, there would be no new revenue left for the required expansion and maintenance of all the other public programs."

Mr. Davis said school boards might be asked to abandon or sharply limit new programs. They must not only control spending tendencies by their staffs, but also "curb some of your own ambitions."

He said planning must extend 10 years, with new elementary schools designed to be converted to secondary schools. Public school enrolment will reach a peak in 1971-72 and as it declines the peak will advance through the high-school level.

Mr. Davis told the trustees to "put your own house in order, or the pressure will mount for the department to do it for you."

But he also praised them for the fact that schools opened this fall "with fewer problems at the start than any year in at least the past five or six."

"We have to give credit to the people who brought it about in only seven months."

The meeting was called partly to hear the officials' complaints about the provincial education department, and there were plenty.

Most common complaint was that calculation of provincial grants was delayed this spring and boards found themselves in financial wrangles with councils. Mr. Davis said grants would be announced earlier in 1970, but "that doesn't mean you'll like what's in them."

"If you can assure me that all the budgets from all over Ontario are no greater than they need to be there'll be no problems, but it's hopeless."

Edward Morgan, chairman of the Thunder Bay board, said teachers demand too much money—70 per cent of his board's operating budget—and asked if the province has considered "selling teachers the facts of life or establishing salary guidelines for teachers."

"It would get us off the hot seat," he said.

Mr. Davis replied: "This is suggested from time to time, but there would be some abdication of local responsibility if we were to set down a list of salary schedules.

"So you're in the hot seat. Join the club."

Egypt Shows New Readiness

BEIRUT, Lebanon (Reuters) — The claims and counter-claims of enemy killed and planes destroyed in the Middle East last week are as conflicting and as inflated as ever.

But there is no doubt that the five days of land, sea and air battles along the narrow stretch of land where Africa and Asia meet have been the scene of the most bitter fighting between Israelis and Egyptians since the 1967 June war.

The most significant event of the week, observers here say, is the speed and strength with which U.A.R. President Nasser's air force responded to the major Israeli amphibious raid last Tuesday on Egypt's Gulf of Suez coast.

Two days later more than 100 of Egypt's Soviet-built fighters and bombers streaked east across the Suez canal to attack Israeli positions in the Sinai Desert in the biggest air attack ever launched by the United Arab Republic.

The Israelis claim to have shot down 11 of the raiders for the loss of only one of their own planes. The Egyptians claim six Israeli planes shot down for the loss of two of their own. They also say they destroyed two rocket-launching pads, a radar station, and other military installations.

The raid last Tuesday, in which the Israeli army, air force and navy were all involved, differed only in scale from earlier punitive attacks across the Suez Canal.

But last Thursday's air offensive by the Egyptians was different in kind from any previous Arab air attack and displayed a new readiness to carry the air war to the enemy after the almost total destruction of the Egyptian Air Force in the six-day war.

Retrained and re-equipped by the Russians, the Sukhoi and MiG pilots showed for the first time that they were ready to fight it out with the veteran Israeli pilots in their French-built Mirage and Mystere fighters in a full-scale air battle.

Tension mounted swiftly this summer, first with the daily artillery exchanges along the Suez Canal, accompanied by several minor air clashes, then with the ever-mounting sonic and bold-ness of guerrilla raids into Israel and the occupied Arab territories.

Mounting Israeli frustration at these Arab blows may have accounted for the major attack across the Red Sea last week. The observers, say, for there had been no immediate provocation by the Egyptians.

But in the current state of the Arab psychology, which is more confident and ready for battle now than at any time since 1967, the Israelis may well be wrong if they think they can strike at will against their Arab neighbors without drawing a sharp response.

Pickets Meet Stewart

UK Expresses Concern Over NATO Cutback

OTTAWA (CP) — British Foreign Secretary Michael Stewart reminded Canada Monday of Britain's concern about the Canadian decision to reduce its military commitment to NATO.

He told a news conference he conveyed the concern of Britain and other European NATO members in Ottawa talks with External Affairs Minister Sharp.

Mr. Stewart said at the same time that Canada was not leaving its back on the Atlantic alliance. The talks had given him a fuller understanding of the purpose behind the Canadian move.

In order for East-West negotiations to lead to peaceful development in Europe, a strong NATO shield was required.

If other NATO countries followed Canada's lead, then Russia might wait for NATO to disintegrate rather than enter negotiations for peace.

On his way into the news conference theatre following hours of talks with Mr. Sharp and Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau, Mr. Stewart was confronted by a handful of placard-carrying Biafra demonstrators.

Called the Ottawa Friends of Biafra, the little group received a courteous five-minute sidewalk hearing from the British visitor.

Their spokesman demanded an end to British arms shipments to Biafra and self-determination for the breakaway region engaged in civil war with the federal Nigerian government.

Mr. Stewart quietly advised the group that Britain would not be an accomplice to tribal secession. If this idea spread, Africa would be torn apart.

Inside the National Press Building, where the news conference was held, he said that present economic sanctions against Rhodesia would work if applied vigorously.

However it would be a long business to settle the problem of the white-supremacist state which unilaterally declared its independence from Britain in 1965.

Mr. Stewart said Britain aims to get international talks started again to cool down Middle East tensions which are steadily worsening.

He plans conversations with the foreign ministers of Russia, the U.S., Israel and the Arab states in New York later on the North American trip. The foreign ministers gather there for the United Nations opening session.

Asked whether the British Queen would visit Canada again, he said he expected it would. Moreover, he did not have the impression that Canada was downgrading its Commonwealth membership.

He hoped that the Biafran leader, Gen. Odumegwu Ojukwu, had not rejected a Red Cross plan for daylight relief flights into the starving region. If reports of his rejection were true, then Ojukwu would be "dreadful responsibility" for inaction.

Mr. Stewart, who spent three days in the Canadian capital flies today to Toronto to confer his trip. Much of his time in Ottawa has been taken up with dinners and other ceremonial functions.

TODAY'S EVENTS

BELLEVILLE UNITED APPEAL CAMPAIGN

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 16th — Old Time Fiddlers' Contest at Bayside Island Bandstall commencing at 8 p.m. Approximately 20 Fiddlers from various parts of Ontario will compete. Refreshment booths will be open for the public. In the event of poor weather, the event will be held at Centennial Secondary School.

Liberals Revamp Caucus Setup

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal Liberal MPs Monday got their first look at plans to give them a more active role in the formation of legislative programs and in the policy decision-making of the government.

Ninety-six MPs were on hand at a general caucus to hear an outline by Prime Minister Trudeau on what is planned for the coming session of Parliament starting Oct. 23, and to join in the organization of four caucus committees that will replace the main caucus for consultation on legislation and policy.

Caucus chairman Gerald Laniel (Beauharnois) said the four committees will embrace all departments of government and MPs will get on them by choice rather than by appointment.

The committees are:

—Economic policies and programs, covering the departments of agriculture, fisheries and forestry, northern development, resources, regional development, finance, trade and economic affairs and consumer and corporate affairs.

—Constitution, federal-provincial relations, external affairs and defence.

—Social policies, including the departments of health and welfare, Indian affairs, justice and legal affairs, labor, manpower and immigration and veterans affairs.

—Transport, public works and urban affairs, embracing broadcasting, films and assistance to the arts; communications, the post office and Central Mortgage and Housing Corp.

Mr. Laniel said the committees will work on an established pattern with the minister of each department appearing at regular intervals before the appropriate committee for a thorough discussion of all policy aspects of proposed legislation.

Irish Monk's Voyage 'Proven'

SAN SALVADOR, Bahamas (AP) — Sharks ate his clothes and lightning crackled so close he could smell it, Bill Verity says. But he sailed on across the Atlantic to prove an Irish monk could have discovered America.

Verity—sporting four months of curly red beard—posed for photographs Monday beside a monument there Columbus first stepped into the New World.

Verity thinks a monk called Brendan the Bold was in America almost 1,000 years before Columbus, but for politeness' sake Monday he muttered: "I wish not to infringe on Columbus's domain."

"After 115 days, I was damned glad to get ashore," the barrel-chested Irish-American said. He sailed into harbor on San Salvador Saturday to end the Atlantic voyage that began May 22.

Verity said he skirted so near Hurricane Debbie in the Atlantic that he recognized a hurricane hunter airplane.

Prior to Saturday, Verity was last seen Aug. 14 when a U.S. Coast Guard cutter offered to tow him away from Debbie. At that time he had a smashed rudder, but he declined rescue, rigged up planks from his deck to make another rudder while the cutter rode alongside.

After two miles the rudder came apart, but the cutter gave Verity lumber to make a new rudder. The coast guard helped him attach it and he sailed on.

WEDDINGS

DENNEE — MARACLE

An early autumn wedding took place in Christ Church, Tyendinaga Reserve, Saturday, September 6 when Elisabeth Diane Maracle of R. R. 1, Deseronto and Dennis William Dennee of Port Hope exchanged marriage vows before Rev. Col. Hedley Smith of Trenton. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert A. Maracle, R. R. 1, Deseronto and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James McAvish of Port Hope. The wedding music was played by Mrs. Edwood Brent.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in nylon net and lace over taffeta. The lace bodice featured a square neckline and long sleeves. The A-line gown had a chapel train while the three - tiered bouffant veil was attached to a tiara of seed pearls, and fell to her shoulders. She carried a cascade bouquet of red and white roses.

The maid of honor was the bride's cousin, Sandra Maracle. The bridesmaids were Carol Maracle, cousin of the bride, and Margaret McAvish, Port Hope, sister of the groom. They were all dressed alike in gowns of nylon sheer, A-line style with an inverted back pleat and jewel neckline. The dresses of yellow and orange over taffeta featured long sleeves pointed over the hands and a matching sash. The headdresses were of yellow carnations matching those in the nosegay carried by each attendant of the bride.

The groom was attended by Ronald Maracle of Port Hope and the ushers were David Gillan, Jr., of Cobourg and Murray McAvish, brother of the groom.

For the reception in the community hall, the mother of the bride received the guests dressed in a mauve double - knit jersey dress with matching accessories and a white corsage.

The mother of the groom wore a dress of turquoise lace over matching taffeta with matching accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

For the brief honeymoon trip to points east the bride changed into a light wool suit of red and white plaid with a blouse and accessories in white. She wore a corsage of white carnations.

Upon their return Mr. and Mrs. Dennee will live in Port Hope.

SMITH — BOWYER

Cartwright United Church in Cartwright, Manitoba was the scene of the recent wedding of Maureen Rae Bowyer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bowyer, Cartwright, Manitoba and John Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Smith, Belleville. Rev. A. Hilsdell officiated at the double-ring ceremony. The organist was Mrs. Evelyn McLarty. Soloist was Jane McKay.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length A-line gown of organza over taffeta. Pale pink leaves and seed pearls, her bouquet was of pale pink roses and blue cornflowers. Matron of honor was Mrs. Lou Locke. Bridesmaids were Miss Marsha Bowyer, sister of the bride and Miss Sylvia Smith, sister of the bridegroom. They were all dressed identically in empire style full-length gowns of ice pink corded ottoman with short puffed sleeves. They wore pink bows in their hair and carried nosegays of pale pink, carnations and blue cornflowers.

Best man was David Livingston, Toronto. Ushers were Scott Bowyer, Cartwright, Manitoba, brother of the bride and Wilfred Smyth, Sault Ste. Marie.

A reception was held at Centennial Hall in Cartwright, Manitoba. The mother of the bride greeted the guests wearing a mint green dress of fortrel crepe featuring white satin trim at the empire waistline and a white hat. She wore white accessories and a corsage of yellow roses. The bridegroom's mother wore a pale turquoise shantung dress with a three-quarter length lace coat and matching hat. She wore white accessories and a corsage of pink roses.

For the reception in the community hall, the mother of the bride received the guests dressed in a mauve double - knit jersey dress with matching accessories and a white corsage.

The mother of the groom wore a dress of turquoise lace over matching taffeta with matching accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

MR. AND MRS. MICHAEL FREDERICK SHARLAND

Sharland – Martin

St. Joseph's Church, Belleville, was the scene of the September 6 wedding, when Joy Elizabeth Martin, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard S. Martin of Kingston became the bride of Michael Frederick Sharland, son of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Sharland of Belleville. Monsignor J. A. Carley officiated at the ceremony and the solist was William Mann.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length gown of white silk bagoda crepe over taffeta, in empire style trimmed with several rows of French lace around the hemline and neckline with the chapel train extending from the waistline accented by two bows. The bodice featured long sleeves. A matching Swedish crown of silk lace adorned with seed pearls and satin bows held her shoulder length silk illusion veil. She carried a cascade bouquet of pink sweetheart roses centred with a white orchid.

Miss Sharon Sager was maid of honor wearing a floor-length sleeveless gown of floral chiffon over silk taffeta featuring a stand-up collar of ruffles. A white picture hat with scalloped edges completed her ensemble and she carried a bouquet of pink, blue and white shasta mums.

Bridesmaids Miss Jane Sharland, Miss Rebecca Sharland and Miss Lisa Sharland, all sisters of the bridegroom were identically attired to the maid of honor and carried similar bouquets.

Stephen Thorn was best man and the ushers were Roy Martin, brother of the bride, Peter Thorn and John Holgate, cousin of the bridegroom.

Gordon Hurley was master of ceremonies at the reception held at the Belleville Yacht Club. The bride's mother greeted the guests wearing a turquoise forlel ensemble with matching accessories and a corsage of white carnations. Assisting her, the mother of the bridegroom chose a two-piece beige boucle ensemble with brown accessories and a corsage of yellow carnations.

For the wedding trip to points east, the bride donned a brown Swiss dotted A-line mini dress trimmed with lace, white accessories and a white orchid corsage.

Mayor Receives First Invitation

Mrs. B. E. Burley, president of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary (centre) and Mrs. Stanislav Kvarda call on Mayor J. Russell Scott to officially invite him to attend the auxiliary tea party and fashion show of furs from Ashley Furs to be held Tuesday afternoon Se pt. 30, at the home of Mrs. Kvarda.

Women's Hospital Auxiliary To Present Showing of Furs

Another highlight of Belleville Week will be the Women's Hospital Auxiliary tea party and fashion show of furs to be held at the home of Mrs. Stanislav Kvarda, 199 Dundas Street West, on Tuesday, September 30 from 2.30 to 5.30 p.m.

The public in general is cordially invited to attend the event, to view a splendid array of furs to be shown through the courtesy of Ashley Furs of Belleville. A bake sale will also be included at this event.

The Auxiliary is co-operating with the Mayor's committee for Belleville Week and it is hoped the response will be gratifying, Mrs. B. E. Burley, president of the Hospital Auxiliary has announced that Mayor J. R. Scott will be on hand, for an interval in receiving the guests.

Funds raised by this and other events throughout the year are expended only for life saving and other equipment at the local hospital, thus citizens of the area benefit by the Auxiliary's efforts. The group, organized in 1938, has had 31 years of successful and pleasant association with the citizens of Belleville and area and attracts women from all walks of life working together for the benefit of the patients and staff.

Members of the Auxiliary are anticipating a sell - out crowd for one of the highlight events of the year and tickets may be obtained from any member, and at Ashley Furs, Front Street.

Field Secretary Reports

Courses Financed by CNIB

At a recent meeting of the Hastings County Advisory Board of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Wishart, 154 Dufferin Avenue, Belleville, by field secretary, Roy Lesperance, informed the Board members that Miss Dawn Seaborne of Coe Hill and Miss Barbara Burton of Kingston are planning to be physiotherapists. Both are blind girls, financed by the Ontario Rehabilitation Branch. Department of Social and Family Services, are attending the Royal Blind Physiotherapists School in England. Barbara has already completed two years of the three-year course and Dawn is commencing her studies this year.

Another girl, only partially sighted, Miss Judy McConnell of Trenton learned enough Braille during one month this past summer to equip her to attend university this fall. She plans to study French at college with the idea of teaching it one day.

Like Barbara and Dawn's, her advanced education is being financed by the Department of Social and Family Services.

The chairman of the Hastings County Advisory Board, Mr. H. H. Clarke of Trenton presided over the meeting of which the field secretary and several Board members reported on their many visitations and assistance to blind persons in this district during the summer.

Newly registered blind persons required talking books or transistor radios, some others required clothing or their Braille watch repaired. The slight remaining sight of another was saved by prompt attention to the problem of a detached retina. Expenses to the Board for this care to the blind persons in the district during the three summer months amounted to $421.20.

A discussion on the annual campaign for funds in Belleville and district followed.

At the CNIB is a member organization of the Belleville United Appeal, members of the Board offered to help staff the United Appeal Headquarters during the period of the campaign.

It was planned to hold the pre - Christmas Blinderaft Sale in November as in previous years.

A committee of Miss M. Peck, Mrs. Harry Rollins and Mr. E. S. Fairman was appointed to arrange for the annual Christmas party for the blind of the district.

After the adjournment of the meeting, refreshments were served by the hostess, Mrs. Wishart.

Japanese Flower Arrangements Enjoyed by Group

The Japanese emphasize the flowing line of each arrangement and the natural growth of its foliage and branches, rather than assigning importance to the quantity and color of the blossoms as westerners do.

With this information, Mrs. Maikawa interpreted the Japanese art of flower arrangement as She conducted the members of the Belleville Horticultural Society on an imaginary trip to Japan at their recent meeting in Tabernacle church.

The Japanese find inner satisfaction and inner peace while they are handling the flowers and, with the finishing of an arrangement, all their frustrations disappear.

Each arrangement must symbolize the passage of time and suggest the particular time and season. Every national holiday has its own flower or foliage. For most occasions, plants growing in the garden, in the fields or along the roadside are used to advantage. Flowers in full bloom are seldom used as they express disillusion. Tighter buds are preferred. They do not obscure the beauty of the line and they represent the future in the arrangement.

There are five styles used: upright, contrasting, heavenly, cascade and slanting and each may be placed either in a low bowl (Marihana arrangement) or in a high vase (Heika arrangement).

To make the trip more authentic, Mrs. Maikawa was dressed in Japanese costume as were her two assistants, Mrs. C. Barber and Miss Valerie Watson. On behalf of the Horticultural Society, Mr. Larry Johnson, also in Japanese costume presented her with an appropriate gift.

Mrs. Maikawa is living in Belleville and some of the basket displays at Belleville Rose Festival '69 were arranged by her.

She was thanked by Mr. Paterson. Two of the evening's arrangements were used as door prizes and were won by Mrs. Alma Kerr and Mrs. Gooch.

Films Enjoyed at Ladies' Club Meet

Prince Edward-Belleville Ladies' Club held its first meeting of the fall on Wednesday at the Recreation Centre with 28 members and one visitor present.

The president, Mrs. F. Henderson, opened the meeting. Reports on the July and August trips were read by the secretary, Mrs. A. Mitchell and the treasurer's report was given by Mrs. L. Fox. The corresponding secretary, Mrs. O. White gave her report. Mrs. E. Weese and Mrs. A. Trumpour were remembered on their 9th and 91st birthdays. A donation was received from Mrs. Trumpour and letters of thanks were received from Mrs. E. Jones, Mrs. H. Vickers and Mrs. Collingwood.

Mention was made of the bus trip to O'Hara's Mills and north on September 30th. The bus will leave at 8 a.m. from the Recreation Centre.

Mrs. E. Morris gave two humorous reading on beets.

Group 1, consisting of Mrs. F. Bedell and Mrs. M. Jeffels, conducted the program. Mrs. F. Bedell introduced Mr. D. Lockhend and Mr. J. Ingram from the C N who showed two films on Canada. One was eastern Canada and the other was western Canada. The films were interesting, especially to those who had visited these places previously.

Mrs. F. Bedell thanked both men for showing the films. A lunch was served and the meeting was closed.

Galloping Gourmet TV Show Shares Spotlight

TORONTO (CP) — At a luncheon in Toronto recently, the chairman referred to Prime Minister Trudeau as "that other Ottawa television personality."

He was introducing Canadian television's hottest property—Graham Kerr, The Galloping Gourmet.

His culinary half-hour, produced in rented Ottawa station, glows in the wasteland of afternoon television like a souffle with prawns flamed in whisky on a table with ketchup and french fries.

The show is going to "prime time" on the CBC, replacing The Beverley Hillbillies on Saturday evenings. Mr. Kerr (pronounced care) says he and his wife will move permanently to Canada in January.

Most people seem to think he's either an Australian, because he has been living there, or a New Zealander, because he started his career there.

In fact, the gourmet was born in England of Scottish parents. He made his TV debut in 1960, whipping up an omelet on New Zealand television. Within three years, his fame as a chef took the show to Australia and the Far East. Now it's being shown in Canada, Britain and the United States.

Last fall, a $4,000,000 deal brought him and his wife Treenee, who produces the show, to Ottawa.

Kerr draws his recipes from all over the world and tests them in his Ottawa home.

He's been criticized by American cooking expert Julia Childs for "desecrating" foods by using canned ingredients and other shortcuts.

Mr. Kerr says he hasn't time to enter into battles with Miss Childs—his daily show has been taking up all his time; hers is weekly.

He bursts into a studio crammed with adoring fans, clutching a glass of wine. On the kitchen set, he tells risque anecdotes, shows home movies of cooking around the world, dances or perhaps sings and then whips up the meal in a frenzy. He throws in a "glug" of this, a "slurp" of that.

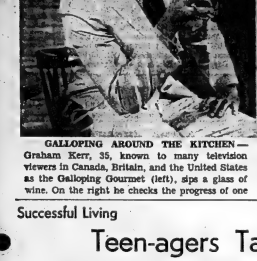
"Ah, beautiful, all crisp and glistening," he'll murmur. "Look at that, buttery and gorgeous . . . that's lovely."

At the end of each show, he dishes the delicacy and sits down to eat it by candlelight, flicking his fork in delicately as he's cooking. "Oh gorgeous, all that cream sloshing through."

Occasionally the results aren't gorgeous, and he has to decide whether to fake enjoyment or let everyone know. And if he gets behind on the cooking, he has to pull the stuffed lobster out of the oven before it's done to meet live TV's inexorable deadline.

Meanwhile the audience is drooling. Not just at the food, whikin sight and sniff, but at the sight of this red-hot-five, tanned 35-year-old with sparkling teeth ripping into the food like Tom Jones.

Mr. Kerr believes there's a "vacuum of romance" in North American life—much of it due to homes where no one takes time to create the proper atmosphere for a meal.



He recommends that couples entertain at dinner at least once every two weeks and that the housewife experiment with a new dish that day.

"Tell your friends to bring bromo in case it's a disaster. You entertain, not for status, but because you want to give of yourself, your time, your money, your creative mind."

The gourmet bemoans the prepared TV dinners and enriched bread in plastic wrappers that reign in so many kitchens.

"Think, next time you grab a can opener or open a loaf of bread . . . what your children and grandchildren are going to say about your culinary ability. Can you imagine them saying, 'My grandmother used to make the most marvelous instant coffee?'"

He thinks Canadians share with Australians and New Zealanders a feeling that local dishes are a "sloshout"—they lack status.

GALLOPING AROUND THE KITCHEN — Graham Kerr, 35, known to many television viewers in Canada, Britain, and the United States as the Galloping Gourmet (left), sips a glass of wine. On the right he checks the progress of one of his meals. During his show, which will be moving to "prime time" on the CBC television network, Mr. Kerr tells risque anecdotes, shows home movies and whips up meals. (CP Photo)

Ann Landers

Reader Wants Info On Sex Education

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Where do you stand on sex education in the public schools? Some of my friends say it gives kids ideas and leads them into doing things they have no business doing. My sister-in-law in Michigan is horrified at what her children were taught last year in sixth grade. She described the literature (complete with pictures) as "disgusting and filthy."

Yesterday I received a mailing from Dallas that knocked me off my chair. It said this whole campaign for sex education is being pushed by a Communist-backed organization called SIECUS — (Sex Information and Education Council of the United States.)

ANN LANDERS

According to this article, SIECUS was founded by Mary Calderone, a woman from the East who goes around giving dirty lectures at prep schools. The article ended up saying the movement is a plot to weaken our country so the Commies can come in and take over. What is SIECUS? Who is Mary Calderone? Do you believe children should be given sex education in the public schools? If so, at what age? I am confused and frightened. My husband and I have faith in your judgment. Will you guide us? — SUN-TIMES READERS.

DEAR READERS: Mary Calderone is a Quaker, a Vassar graduate, a physician, the daughter of the famous photographer, Edward Steichen, and the wife of Dr. Frank Calderone formerly with the World Health Organization. She has three daughters and two teen-age grandsons. Dr. Calderone was the National Director of Planned Parenthood and founded SIECUS in 1964.

SIECUS is a non-profit health agency made up of religious medical, educational and other professional leaders. Among organizations supporting sex education in the schools are the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, The American Public Health Association, The American Medical Association and the National Parent-Teachers Association. Father James T. McHugh, director of the Family Life Division of the U.S. Catholic Conference described most of the critics of SIECUS as members of radical religious organizations — masquerading under high sounding names.

Our children are getting "sex education" every day of their lives whether we like it or not, and much of the education is the wrong kind. They are being stimulated and titillated by TV, advertising, radio, movies, magazines, billboards and movies. Sex is presented as glamorous, fun — the "in thing."

Children must be taught early (fifth grade is not too soon) that sex is not something people do for kicks — that every sex act carries with it a solemn responsibility, not only to the person with whom she is having sexular relations, but to one's family and one's community.

The ideal place for sex educations is at home. Unfortunately the vast majority of parents are ill-equipped to do the job because they are uninformed and unable to discuss sex comfortably and objectively with their children. I have seen the SIECUS material and while I feel that some of it is a shade to graphic, a great deal of it has merit. As with any new program, mistakes will be made, but I firmly believe our children need this program. They are bound to profit from it by learning to accept their sexuality as a normal, healthy, positive, uplifting force in their lives.

Teen-agers Tackle Threat of Tobacco

By DORIS CLARK

"Smoke, choke, croak" says the sticker on certain car bumpers in Bakersfield, California. This is the result of a campaign against cigarettes waged by high school students. They used television, radio, billboards and newspapers.

Anti-smoking messages really make an impression. In one survey it was found that in the past 10 years smoking among teen-age boys dropped from 34.7 percent to 25.6 percent, and among teen-age girls from 25.5 percent to 15.7 percent. In the course of the survey these young people were asked, "Would you say smoking is harmful to health?" Ninety-one percent responded with a definite "Yes!"

Where young people get hot up about it, they really go places. They can't see why older people would keep on with a habit which is obviously such a threat. They are death on smoking. And they are the ones who can have the greatest impact on others their age.

Just the same, there is a definite relationship between the incidence of smoking by teenagers and in their parents, whether in Canada or the U.S. If father and mother smoke, the smoking rate of the young people is higher. If a parent has given up smoking, the sons and daughters are far more likely to be non-smokers.

Haven't we enough threats to life and limb in our rush-rush civilization, without ourselves posing this additional unnecessary threat to longevity?

Dear Doris: When does one wear crystals? Some wear them in daytime, but I have been told this is not proper, to get very little use of mine. I'm never quite sure the other person knows any better than I. — Sparklers

Dear Sparklers: We have to use a little judgment. Is it a necklace of large crystal beads, dangly earrings, or a conservative-type glamor pin? No well-dressed woman wears in the daytime the kind of jewelery which is so showy that it obviously belongs to evening wear.

There are times when a dress in a plain dark color calls for one elegant touch in pin or necklace. Just don't go all out with the sparklers at 10 a.m.

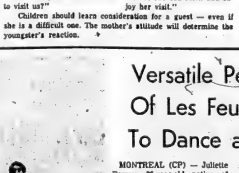
My leaflet, "Rule of Four-teen," supplies a few ideas about keeping control of the glitter and avoiding that overdressed look in any costume. I'm sending it to you.

* * *

Dear Doris: I thought he was the man of my dreams. He is 30 and I am 29. But I am miserable.

He loves my cooking. I live alone in a suite and often have him over for supper. He never takes me out to restaurants, but he does pick up and pay for orders from restaurants himself.

He just never takes me out. He has never introduced me to his parents. My sister says I am not the happy person I used to be.



Doris, I know I'm not perfect, but going out instead of looking at four walls would do me a lot of good. — Home Too Much

Dear Home Too Much: Sounds like a pretty drab future. The dream might turn out into a nightmare with four dull walks closing in on you.

Any man of 30 with any imagination at all, knows a girl wants to get out sometimes. Better lay it on the line right now. Tell him you want to get out more and that you want to meet his parents. If he still doesn't come through, with him a friendly good-bye.

DANCING FOR FUN AND PROFIT — Juliette Perry, 26, of Saskatoon, is a versatile ballerina, jazz stylist and musical comedy artist. She is also a go-go enthusiast. She is senior dancer with Les Feux Follets, a French-Canadian folk group and hopes to be the company next spring when it tours Europe, Russia and Expo '70 in Japan. (CP Photo)

Versatile Performer Of Les Feux Follets To Dance at Expo 70

MONTREAL (CP) — Juliette Perrey, 26-year-old native of Saskatoon, dances both for fun and profit.

As a versatile ballerina, jazz stylist, musical comedy artist and a go-go enthusiast, she can fill any vacancy in the fickle dance market.

"By being the type of dancer I am, I'm never out of work," the brunette performer says with a grin.

As a senior dancer with Les Feux Follets, a French-Canadian folk troupe, Juliette started a two-month tour of Canada at the end of August, and hopes to be with the company next spring when it tours Europe and the Soviet Union and moves on to Expo 70 in Osaka, Japan.

After five summers at the Banff School of Fine Arts and a year on scholarship with the Royal Winnipeg Ballet, Juliette turned professional in 1963 and has enjoyed a varied and busy career since then.

Nightclub tours of U.S. air force bases led to her being stranded in Goose Bay, Labrador, for an entire month.

"There are no women up there so we were bodyguarded at all times," she said.

Television shows and musical comedy performances in theatres across Canada gave her an opportunity to work with such stars as Sal Mineo, Jane Russell and Lorne Greene. Although some of this work necessitated acting and singing, Miss Perrey was undaunted and describes her voice as "bashing—it's not pretty but it's loud."

Besides making her competitive in nearly every field of dancing, Juliette says her wide experience has been excellent discipline.

"When I do ballet, I really have to calm down. It's not like music-hall selling and it takes quite a bit of mental control.

"When you do ballet you have to live and sleep it." Less-formal dancing gives her a "freer feeling."

A six-week European tour with Les Feux Follets last year was stretched to nine months when offers poured in from all parts of the Continent.

She accepted two—a stint with the Nice Ballet Company and a motion movie, directed by Billy Wilder and called The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes, in which she did a scene from Swan Lake.

She was forced to turn down a year of dancing in Greek nightclubs, a tour of Italy and Spain, a club date in Monte Carlo and a job with a Spanish dance company in Paris.

However, she came back because she prefers to work in Canada. Juliette said it is only when there is nothing for her to do in this country that she considers going anywhere else.

Abendschan Finds The Right Formula

REGINA (CP) — Jack Abendschan of Saskatchewan Roughriders, who couldn't make the grade in the American Football League, credits three major factors for his improved placekicking this season.

"Concentration, relaxation and confidence are the major factors for my success this season," said Abendschan in an interview.

So far this season, Abendschan, who also plays offensive guard for the Western Football Conference club, has been good on 21 of 22 convert attempts—one was blocked—and has kicked 15 field goals in 25 tries. He also has eight singles for a conference-leading total of 74 points.

He tried out with Denver Broncos in 1968, but was cut place in the WFC—and hopes to after making only one of eight field goal tries.

"Jack was in a rut when he rejoined us last year from Denver," said Saskatchewan coach Eagle Keys. "He was kicking poorly for us midway through the season. We stuck with him because we knew he had the fundamentals of a good kicker.

Abendschan, who shared the place-kicking duties with Bill Goods for the first half of last season, was good on eight of 19 field goal attempts.

After his disappointing 1968 season, the 25-year-old graduate of the University of New Mexico, an all-Canadian guard in 1967, developed his three-point philosophy.

He now is happy with the Roughriders—they are in first finish his career with the club.

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids...and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing, and most important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was sustained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and eases elimination of hard, painful, it helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Law of Diminishing Proximity

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Apropos of my recent piece on the law of Diminished Proximity — for instance, the automobile that gets well the inote you roil- it inio the mechanic's shop — a friend of mine mentioned another axiom not known to science.

His automobile, he pointed out, fixes itself after a period of time. It will develop rumbles and grunts and ominous crashings — but if he blithely neglects these sinister symptoms for a few weeks, they usually disappear.

I have noticed this same phenomenon many times — not only with my automobile and other gadgets, but with the human body as well. Very often the best thing you can do with physical complaints is to do nothing at all.

The man who is preoccupied with his symptoms often intensifies them. Whether or not they are created by the mind, the mind certainly has the power to make them seem worse. This, I suppose, is the junction at which Christian Science and psychosatrapy meet — and both contain a valuable shear of the truth.

Truth, said Aristotle, is like a barn door: nobody who throws at it can avoid hitting a part of it, but nobody can hit all of it at once. No theory invented by man has been wholly false, just as no theory can embrace the entire truth in the same time.

The mistake most of us make, I think, lies in taking a piece of the truth and stretching it to cover the universe. The sick man believes health comes for him when the poor man, money; the humble man, honor; the ugly man, charm.

This intellectual frailty is most obvious in the field of medicine. Admit it publicly or not, medical men are generally convinced that their own specialty is the core of health. Everything is in the mind, or in the bones, or in the nerves, or in the blood stream, or in the glands, or even sometimes in the feet.

Man as a total organism is rarely considered — which is why the self-healing process is so often sneered at by specialists. But Nature is greater than any of its creatures, and the whole art of living, I am convinced, consists in learning how to interfere as little as possible with the life force.

'Cowboy' Returns To Visit Indians

Shades of Geronimo, but things are getting confusing these days.

When cowboys are also Indians and Indians are also cowboys, one's faith in the stability of the world is shaken.

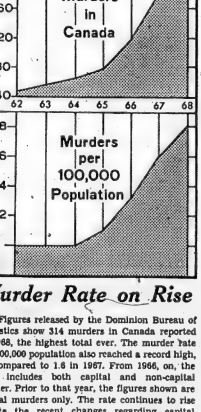
But it's not as serious as that, really, as Larry Williams, 65, of Pekin, New York will testify.

Mr Williams is a Mohawk Indian, but also has the distinction of being a real cowboy who rode for the 101 Ranch in Ponca City, Oklahoma, and who also participated in the 101 Wild West Show

Mr. Williams is a Mohawk ville area for the best little while, visiting his friends, John Green and his family in Shannonville.

He just recently organized a reunion in Ponca City of all the old ranch hands and wild west show participants who were a part of the famous 101 ranch.

The reunion sparked some memories for the old cowboys who had lived during the glory of the ranch and had also seen its demise. It drew about 30 oldtime cowhands to Ponca city.



Mr. Williams worked at the ranch in 1921 and in 1931 was promoted to its wild west show just before it folded in 1932.

And the reunion in Ponca City was the realization of a dream for Mr. Williams.

"I'm at last seeing my dream come true," he said.

Still dressed is his 10-gallon hat and cowboy boots, Mr. Williams has many memories of the days when the 101 ranch visited fairs and exhibitions bringing the wild west into the hearts of patrons.

Mr. Williams visited the Shannonville Fair over the weekend as a spectator as part of his visit here in Canada.

Murder Rate on Rise

Figures released by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics show 314 murders in Canada reported in 1968, the highest total ever. The murder rate per 100,000 population also reached a record high, 1.8 compared to 1.6 in 1967. From 1966, on, the total includes both capital and non-capital murder. Prior to that year, the figures shown are capital murders only. The rate continues to rise despite the recent changes regarding capital punishment.

THE BETTER HALF By Bob Barnes

"This time you've gone too far—leftovers for BREAKFAST!"

Rookie Up with Leaders

TORONTO (CP) — Bobby Thompson, 20, playing his first year of professional football, is right up there with the stars of the Western Football Conference.

His four touchdowns for Saskatchewan Roughriders don't put him in the top 10 in the WFC scoring race, but a close look at the official Canadian Football League statistics gives a more comprehensive picture.

Thompson, who left the University of Oklahoma while still eligible to play college ball, has carried 46 times for the Rough Riders.

In pass receiving, Thompson's 548 yards is the best in the West and second in all Canada only to Margene Adkins of Ottawa and Tommy Joe Coffey of Hamilton.

Thompson's longest gain by passing—83 yards—is surpassed only by the 87-yard romp of Jim Thorpe of Toronto Argonauts.

Thompson's 18.3-yard average on passes caught is second in the West only to the 18.7 of teammate Hugh Campbell. Thorpe is the top man in Canada in this regard, with a remarkable 25.5 yards per carry on 14 passes caught.

As for the scoring race in the West, it's the kickers who dominate. The top four, in order— Jack Abendschan, Saskatchewan; Ted Gerela, B.C.; Larry Robinson, Calgary Stampeders; and Dave Cutler, Edmonton—haven't a touchdown between them.

Top scorers:

	TD	C	FG	S	Pts
Abendschan, S	0	21	15	8	74
Gerela, B.C.	0	8	11	7	48
Robinson, ¢	0	14	9	4	45
Cutler, E –	0	6	8	7	40

Swarn, B.	3	0	0	0	30
Keeling, C	5	0	0	0	30
Colebour, E	5	0	0	0	30
Campbell, Saskatchewan	4	0	0	0	24
Thompson, Sask., all tied with 24 points on four touchdowns.

Hovering and Hesitating

To Let 5,000 Discs Drop

Kickoff Sept. 22

Flypast Bombs City with United Appeal Prize Discs

Bellevillians watched the United Appeal kick off its week of pre-campaign activities to a flying start last night.

From CFB Trenton a flypast dipped over the centre of the city at precisely seven o'clock, delighting hundreds of children watching from the ground.

Leading the flypast was a giant Yukon, followed by a Dakota and a Caribou. The sky then cleared just long enough for an Air Force Rescue Helicopter to hover over the city and sprinkle 5,000 brightly colored discs.

The discs, in an impossible to miss fluorescent red each had numbers — fifty of which will net their holder a prize. The list of lucky numbers will be published in The Intelligencer on Monday, Sept. 22.

A United Appeal spokesman explained that anyone holding a lucky disc number will be able to pick up a prize at Campaign Headquarters in the caboose located at the four corners, on the Central Tast lot.

This aerial display is just the beginning of a week Appeal campaigners hope will be the week with something for everybody, and a little bit more.

Plans include a fiddlers' contest, slated for tonight at Zwick's Island, weather permitting. In case of rain, the event will be held at Centennial Secondary School.

More than 18 entries have been registered for the Old Time Fiddlers' contest, with participants coming from the several distant points as well as the Quinte area.

M.C. for the contest will be CJBQ's Dick Lovering. First prize will be worth $100, with second and third prizes also being awarded.

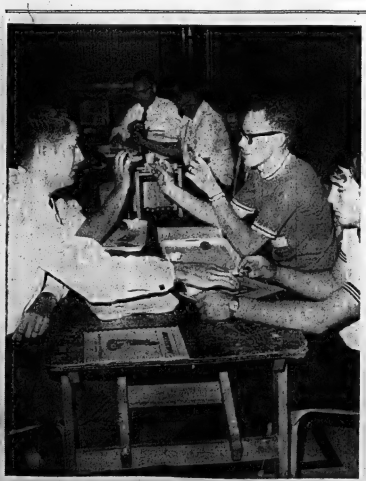
Chairman of the public relations and publicity committee for the Appeal, Ken Fleming, emphasized that there is no admission charge to the public for any event.

Other activities to follow include an evening featuring the Trent Valley Jamboree and a beauty contest later in the week.

The Appeal's official campaign starts Sept. 22 running until Oct. 4.

"Our goal this year is $130,000, and we know that we can go over the top this year. At least we will try," remarked an Appeal spokesman.

Water Plant Approval Received



The Ontario Municipal Board has given approval for the $1½ million addition to the Belleville water filtration plant and tenders are expected to be called about mid autumn.

Before tenders are called, however, Gore and Storrie, consulting engineers for the project, will meet with members of the local public utilities commission to discuss final plan details.

Utilities manager E. L. Burnham said he expected the commission would meet with the consulting engineers at their October meeting at which time authorization would be given to call tenders.

The new addition to the filtration plant will double its capacity from the present eight million gallons per day to about 16 million gallons.

Construction of the enlarged plant will call for modification to the present building rather than for a completely new structure. Also a new main entrance to the plant will be provided.

Science Workshop

New Approach to Science Teaching Brings Travelling Consultant to City

New teaching methods were explored by about 20 district teachers this morning as they began a four-day workshop in the "learning by doing" method in elementary science. They started off with the introduction to microscope work — examining pages from comic books through a magnifying glass.

With comic books and a magnifying glass, about 20 elementary school teachers settled down this morning to master a new approach to science teaching.

They are attending a four-day science workshop sponsored by the Ontario Teachers' Federation to introduce the inductive method of "learning by doing" into Ontario classrooms.

Donald Cooper, program consultant in science for the federation, has set up his travelling laboratory in the general purpose room of Sir John A. Macdonald School for the remainder of the week. He will return in February for the second four-day session with teachers from Oshawa to Kingston who will introduce the program into their schools.

"The hardest thing for me, as a teacher, to learn is not to give the answers, but to let the pupils find out for themselves," Mr. Cooper was frank to admit.

Hence the scrutiny of comic books with a magnifying glass.

As the teachers turned pupils for the introductory lesson on microscopes, Mr. Cooper asked them: "How does looking through the lens change the picture before you? What happens when you turn it over and look through the concave side?"

"The object of the new science teaching in Grades 4,5, and 6 is to direct pupils to the answer through their own experimentation," Mr. Cooper explained to the teachers.

"The "fresh approach to physical sciences" has been in operation in some county schools in previous years, pioneered by H. R. Frink, principal of Queen Elizabeth School.

Now the county board is extending the program in stages throughout the system. Teachers are attending the current workshop from Bancroft Public School, Marmora Street, Trenton, Bayside, Harry J. Clarke, Queen Alexandra and Harmony.

Before the OTF will consent to run a workshop, the boards whose teachers participate must agree to buy the science kits that are essential for classroom use.

The Hastings county board spent $5,000 this year for equipment, including individual low-powered microscopes for each team of pupils, balances which the pupils must assemble themselves, alcohol burners, test tubes and supplies.

Cost of the course to the Federation is $150 a teacher. The Federation bears about $100 of this cost itself, and charges each board of education $50 for each teacher it sends. The teachers receive no academic or salary credits for taking the course.

Mr. Cooper teaches 22 workshops a year, travelling from the Manitoba to the Quebec border. The Federation has sought permission to carry the new concepts of science education into teachers' colleges and colleges of education. So far, only McArthur College at Queen's University has accepted the offer.

What are the advantages of the new approach?

"The pupils come up with conclusions based on their own discoveries, instead of being forced to memorize scientific principles presented by a teacher," says Mr. Cooper. "They learn at an early age the methods of scientific research, which they can apply for the rest of their lives to other situations, and they have a chance to find out if the scientific field and its methods might appeal to them as a career."

$1,000 Reward For Killer

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police commissioners Monday offered a $1,000 reward for information on the killer of a Vancouver nurse who died in hospital Sunday of five stab wounds in her back and neck.

Myrna Louise Inglis, 26, was attacked Wednesday night as she walked home after a night shift at St. Paul's Hospital.

Before her death, Miss Inglis told police a man approached her and said "don't say anything." Then he kicked her in the stomach and stabbed her repeatedly.

Vandalism at Picton

PICTON (Staff) — Vandals entered Prince Edward County Community Centre last weekend, ransacking the canteen, adding to the occurrences of petty vandalism that now have Picton police concerned.

The break-in was discovered by the arena manager yesterday morning and the building could have been entered sometime between Friday night and yesterday at 8 a.m.

This is the second time in a week that the building has been entered. On both occasions nothing was taken except chocolate bars.

Police believe the break-ins are the work of children gaining entrance through a small hole discovered dug out beneath the building.

It is also possible, police say, that the vandals hide in the arena when it is opened during the day. Exit is made through a safety door on the north side of the centre.

Coupled with the break-ins is senseless vandalism in the Picton area.

During last Saturday's park dedication held at the Angus LeHeup Delhi Athletic Field, the door of a washroom belonging to the nearby sewage disposal plant was damaged, presumably by children.

Attempts had been made to kick the door in, according to the investigating police officer.

Police are investigating other similar incidents in Picton.

35,000 Troops Recalled

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Nixon announced plans today withdrawal plans today to withdraw an additional 35,000 U.S. troops from South Vietnam by Dec. 15.

Nixon coupled his announcement with a review of what he termed the administration's "major efforts to bring an end to the war."

Repeating his past proposals for a peaceful settlement, Nixon added:

"The time for meaningful negotiations has therefore arrived.

"I realize that it is difficult to communicate across the gulf of five years of war. But the time has come to end this war. . . ."

Nixon said his latest troop withdrawal order, coupled with the earlier pullout of 25,000 combat men, would mean at least 60,000 troops will have left Vietnam by Dec. 15.

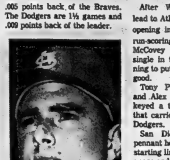
By that date, he said, the authorized troop ceiling in Vietnam will stand at 484,000, compared with 549,500 when he took office last Jan. 20.

Carlton Stumped

Even 19 Strikeouts Won't Stop Mets

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

St. Louis Cardinals' pitcher Steve Carlton earned a major baseball league record 19 strikeouts Monday night but it still wasn't enough to beat New York Mets.



"The amazing Mets' Super Swat got me," said Carlton, referring to Ron Swoboda, whose two homers produced all of New York's runs in a 4-3 victory that spoiled Carlton's masterpiece.

Swoboda, fanned twice by Carlton, brought the Mets from behind with each of his shots—and both came when Carlton had two strikes on him.

The triumph increased to 4½ games the Mets' National League Eastern Division lead over Chicago Cubs, who lost 8-2 to Montreal Expos, and reduced to 11 New York's magic number for clinching the divisional title.

Meanwhile, Willie Mays hit the 599th homer of his career in leading San Francisco Giants past Western Division leader Atlanta Braves 4-1, drawing that race even tighter.

The Giants trail the Braves by only one-half game and .003 percentage points. Cincinnati Reds beat Los Angeles' four-game winning streak 4-1 to move ahead of the Dodgers into third place, just one game and .005 points back of the Braves. The Dodgers are 1½ games and .009 points back of the leader.

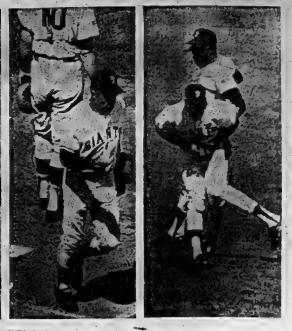
STEVE CARLTON
Record Didn't Help

In other games, San Diego Padres handed Houston its fifth straight defeat, 5-3, keeping the fifth-place Astros 54 games back of Atlanta, while Philadelphia Phillies swept a doubleheader from Pittsburgh Pirates 2-1 and 4-3.

Carlton, who struck out 16 in a losing effort to Philadelphia two years ago, said he wasn't aware of how many strikeouts he had until it was flashed on the scoreboard after he tied his old team record of 16 in the eighth inning.

Bob Feller of Cleveland Indians set the record of 18 strikeouts on Oct. 2, 1938 and Sandy Koufax of the Los Angeles Dodgers matched it twice, while Don Wilson had 18 for Houston last year.

Swoboda staked the Mets to a brief 2-1 lead in the fourth when he homered on an 0-2 count with Donn Clendenon aboard. He produced the winner on a 2-2 count with Tommie Agee on in the eighth.



Ron Fairly drove in four runs with a double and his 10th homer and John Bateman hit a two-run homer to back Mike Wegener's three-hitter as Montreal handed the Cubs their third straight loss and 11th in 12 games. It was the fourth straight victory for the expansion Expos, longest of the season.

Mays moved just one swat away from the 600 homer career plateau and also contributed a double in supporting Mike McCormick's five-hitter for the Giants.

After Willie's error helped lead to Atlanta's first run in the opening inning, Mays lashed a run-scoring double and Willie McCovey drove one in with a single in the bottom of the inning to put the Giants on top for good.

Tony Perez' two-run single and Alex Johnson's double keyed a three-run third inning that carried Cincinnati past the Dodgers.

San Diego dealt Houston's pennant hopes a big blow with a starting line-up that averaged 22 years and included six rookies.

Willie Can't Win 'Em All

Willie Mays, San Francisco Giants, had a big day at bat against the Atlanta Braves Monday and an unusual day afield. Willie hit a double for his 1191st extra base hit, third on the all time list, his 599th home run and dropped the ball for an error while making his famous basket catch. He is shown doing all three in above three picture combo. Giants downed Atlanta 4-1 to move within ½ game of first place.

Twins Run From Pack

Time is running out and Minnesota Twins are running away from Oakland Athletics in the American League's Western Division pennant race.

The Twins opened up a nine-game lead—with just 16 games left to play—after downing the Athletics 6-3 Monday night on Dave Boswell's six-hitter.

Harmon Killebrew walloped his 43rd homer of the season and raised his runs-batted-in total to 131.

Elsewhere Monday night, Detroit Tigers shut out New York Yankees 2-0, Cleveland Indians slipped Boston Red Sox 4-1, California Angels blanked Chicago White Sox 4-0, Seattle Pilots trimmed Kansas City Royals 3-2 and Washington Senators edged Baltimore Orioles 3-2.

Killebrew's homer capped a three-run Twin rally in the third inning and attracted a standing ovation from the crowd of 38,497 at Metropolitan Stadium.

Rod Carew opened the third with an infield single and reached third when pitcher Rollie Fingers threw wild. Then Tony Oliva doubled him home and Killebrew followed with his homer.

Killebrew opened the sixth with a single and came around on Cesar Tovar's double and a sacrifice fly by Leo Cardenas. The Twins added two more runs in the eighth on singles by Tovar and Boswell.

Denny McLain became the winningest pitcher in the majors when he won his 23rd game, pitching a two-hitter against the Yankees.

Officials Walk Out Pending NHL Sanction

BRANTFORD, Ont. (CP) — The National Hockey League will be without the services of 20 referees and linesmen when the regular season opens Oct. 11 unless it recognizes an association they formed this summer.

The 20 members of the National Hockey League Officials' Association walked out of training camp Monday night saying they won't return until the association receives NHL recognition.

Ian (Scotty) Morrison, referee-in-chief, said senior referees Cliff Ashley and Art Skov and linesmen Matt Pavelich, Neil Armstrong and Claude Bechard are among 19 senior officials still at the special conditioning camp which opened Monday and ends Thursday. Vern Buffey, a senior official, was among those who walked out.

Morrison said the league would have enough referees to handle the pre-season exhibition games which start Thursday when Toronto Maple Leafs meet St. Louis Blues in Ottawa.

Joe Kane, a Toronto lawyer representing the 38-member association, said "it is true there are some excellent men still in camp—but there are some excellent ones who are not."

In Montreal, NHL president Clarence Campbell said the league's next move was to "take the necessary steps to fill the gap."

He said the league governors have already made a decision not to recognize the association, and this left the league no other course of action but to find replacements.

Campbell said the league's officials have "come a long way" financially without any representative organization.

He said referees make between $11,000 and $25,000 for the season plus fringe benefits.

In the last three years, salaries for top officials increased 22.5 per cent, he said, while pay for middle-level officials has increased 59 per cent and linesmen's salaries have gone up 50.5 per cent.

Five World Champions Grace Mosport Grand Prix

TORONTO (CP) — Five world champions will be on the starting grid when 20 drivers line up at Mosport Saturday in the Grand Prix of Canada for Formula 1 racing cars.

The drivers will be in it strictly for love and money —$150,000 in prizes — because Jackie Stewart of Scotland has already won the 1969 world driver's championship.

The long-haired Scotsman, driving for the French Matra team, clinched the title in the Italian Grand Prix Sept. 7.

The Italian race, eighth in the series of 11 events leading to the world championship, gave Stewart 60 points. No other driver, even if he wins at Mosport and in the remaining Grand Prix in the United States and Mexico, can amass enough points to dislodge Stewart.

Formula 1 cars, delicately-balanced, open-wheel single-seaters, are considered the thoroughbreds of motorsport. The Federation Internationale d'Automobile, ruling body, limits their engine capacity to 2,000 cubic centimetres, about half that in the average family car. But they put out 400 horsepower or more.

It's That Time

Two Hulls in Hawk Camp, Neither of Them Bobby

CHICAGO (AP) — Bobby Hull, hockey's superstar, was missing—just as he was a year ago — when Chicago Black Hawks opened their national Hockey League training camp at Chicago Stadium Monday.

Some 35 players showed up, including Hull's two brothers, newcomer Gary, 26, and veteran Dennis, 25.

Bobby, 30, was last heard of attending a cattle sale in Sawyerville, Que., Saturday. He raises prize Polled Hereford cattle. He also raises salary demands although Black Hawk management will not say that he is a holdout.

A year ago, the Golden Jet pressed his payroll requests and didn't make an appearance until the first NHL game.

Brother Gary has been playing amateur hockey around Toronto and decided to join the Hawks this season. Dennis has been around as a winger for several years.

The centre position provides the biggest battle for starting jobs with 16 players aiming for it. In addition to regulars Stan Mikita and Pit Martin, and Angotti and Menard, there are Terry Caffery, a junior player; J. P. LeBlanc and Jim Wiste, both with good seasons at Dallas in the Central League and Garth Rizzuto, who scored 30 goals for Dallas.

Others on the list at centre are Jiri Bastl and Jim Paterson.

City Smothered By Juniors

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

Bill Shakespeare's version was a play, but in Belleville softball circles, last night the Comedy of Errors was the third game of the Commercial League finals.

Ellis Juniors won 17-1, and the best thing about the game was that it only lasted seven innings.

It was Scotty Reid's turn for pitching heroics. Jerry Genereaux's fifth-inning scratch single was the only hit City managed off Reid, who struck out eight and walked a pair to give the Juniors a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven series.

Genereaux avoided total embarrassment for the Hotsixmen when he scored on an infield error to spoil what would have been the biggest shutout in many Commercial League moons.

Genereaux threw the last inning for the losers, giving up four runs on four hits after City sent Bob Ethier out to the comparatively calm confines of left field.

Ethier — presumably the same fellow who blanked the Juniors with a 6-0 one-hitter last Thursday — was touched for a dozen Ellis safeties while 13 runs poured across the plate.

He fanned four and issued three free passes.

The sublime became ridiculous in the fifth inning, when the Juniors mustered eight runs on five hits.

During the fateful fifth, City committed five of their 11 game errors. The only members of the City lineup who didn't boot, overthrow, or otherwise molest the ball were centrefielder "Pug" Kellar and first baseman Doug Murray.

The Juniors' Paul Goodfellow collected four singles to lead the plate parade. Ellis catcher Wes May contributed a double and pair of singles, with Steve Ling, Bob Parsons and John Campbell each hitting safely twice.

Taggart and Scott Reid added singles.

The only Junior who wasn't credited with a hit was leadoff man Cliff Scott, but City committed three errors against him so it didn't make much difference.

Fourth game of the series is an 8 p.m. Wednesday Alemite fixture.

Morrisons Top Tadpoles

Outhit, but not outdone, was the title-winning style of the Morrison Real Estate Tadpoles last night.

Morrison pitchers S. Mulrooney and Mark Crawford gave up 12 hits, while walking five and striking out 15 between them as the Morrisons edged Bob's Auto Body 8-7 in the third and deciding game for the city's minor baseball tadpole championship.

But of the 12 hits yielded by the winning pitchers, the only ones for extra-bases were triples by Robbie Cousins, Tim Coates, and Paul Marineau.

Meanwhile, losing pitchers Cousins and Marineau were being touched for a homer by Louis Crawford, a homer and double by Mark Crawford, a triple and double by Jim Mulrooney, and S. Mulrooney's triple in their nine hitter.

Cousins and Marineau struck out 14 and walked three.

The Morrisons were coached this seasn by Wayne Nolan, with the assistance of Warren Hay and Roger Henderson.

Bob's Auto coach Mike Bradshaw was aided by Steve Campbell and Ed Marineau.

Dairy Queens Make Grade

The Dairy Queen girls gained a berth in the Belleville and District ladies' softball league finals last night by dumping Dixie Lee 14-12 to take their best-of-five semi-final in three straight games.

Wednesday night, the Dairy Queens and Legion Branch 99 will open their best-of-seven final playoff series with a 6:15 game at the Cheese Producers' Field.

Dairy Queen's Donna Rolland led her mates into the league finals with a three-run homer.

In addition to striking out 12, the winning pitcher Barb Breedon contributed a triple to her own cause.

Sheila Ray took the loss on the Dixie Lee slab.

Quinte Trap Club Not Marking Time

The Quinte Trap and Gun Club have barely got one championship out of the way and they're planning another one.

With the powder-scent of Sunday's annual club championship shoot still in the air, the club executive has announced tentative plans for an Eastern Ontario Trapshooting Championship at their Wallbridge Road site sometime in October.

Undoubtedly Jim Hughes will be one of the prime local contenders when such an area shoot is held.

In addition to winning the Kelly Trophy Sunday for his 131 out of 150 best overall shooting in three events, Hughes won the Dow Trophy as 16-yard target winner and the Charlie Kammer Double Target award.

But shoot-offs were the order of the day, not shoo-ins.

Hughes had to beat Jim Cole 25 straight 22 in a shoot-off for 16-yard honors after both finished the maximum 50 round with identical 49 scores.

A 20-for-20 shootoff performance by Hughes was required in the doubles event after he was tied with Cole once more, this time with 43 out of 50.

Larry Harrington broke the Hughes monopoly in the handicap target event, winning the Labatt Trophy in yet another shoot-off after he and Duff Folkard had finished the regulation round tied at 40 out of 50.

Following Hughes' 131 overall score for the day were Doug Johnston (125), Jim Cole (122), Al Smith (121), and Duff Folkard (120).

The Club will remain open Sundays from 10:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. all winter. The next two Wednesdays, it will be open from 6:30 p.m. till dark.

Steve Finished On Right Foot

The fact the Kinsmen Track Club finished their season on the right foot was due to people like Stephen Montgomery.

The Bantzn won one of 11 firsts that helped give a 14-member Belleville track contingent second-place honors in Saturday's Peterborough meet, the final one of the season for the "Galloping Grapes."

Stephen's ribbon-winning performance came in the 880-yard event, which he won in 2:36.1. He added a fourth in the 440.

WALTER T. ELLIOTT, PRESIDENT

We at Elliott's want you to be as proud to own and drive your car as we are to sell it. That's why we maintain fully staffed sales and service departments with many years of experience. Not only to help you get a better buy but to keep it better longer.

Remember . . . We at Elliott's Are Never Satisfied Until You Are!

We don't stop Caring for your car after we've sold it!

Bring It Back To Elliott's For Service

A lot of businessmen who sell you something these days just assume that you and your product will "live happily ever after". We don't believe in fairy tales. When Elliott's sell you a car or truck, it's not the end of the story, it's just the beginning of our obligation to make sure that your car or truck will keep running like new for as long as you own it.

That's why we maintain such a well-staffed service department . . . with guardian maintenance factory-trained technicians who know the whole G.M. line . . . inside and out. When we sell you an automobile, truck or bus . . . we sell you product reliability and customer service too. When you need someone to care for your car . . . see Elliott's That's why we're in business.

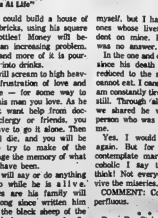
TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — Prices on the Toronto stock market were mixed in light mid-morning trading today.

A moderate advance Monday interrupted a two-day decline.

On index, industrials were up .15 to 177.35. Golds slipped .22 to 189.50, western oils .84 to 228.57 and base metals .30 to 109.85.



Volume by 11 a.m. was 470,000 shares compared with 258,000 at the same time Monday. Gains outnumbered losses 130 to 121.

Home A dropped 1¼ to 56% and Home B ¼ to 48. The company denied rumors that it was abandoning its exploratory well being drilled on Alaska's North Slope about 50 miles south of Prudhoe Bay.

Inco picked up ¼ to 39¾. Inco's Ontario operations have been closed down since July 10 vance.

KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Stop Killing yourself indent on
Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I recently read my alcoholic, although at the time I had no idea that he was. I thought he could quit drinking anytime. I am his widow now, after nine and one-half years of devastation: of total destruction of life for us both in the time preceding his death.

I write this for those who are contemplating such a marriage. He will spend his evenings in some "Bonnery." You will never know where to find him. You will spend a life of excruciating loneliness.

He will take his bottle home, fondle the last drop of it. His drinking will likely change his personality from the charming man you knew into an almost unrecognizable shadow of himself.

You could build a house of glass bricks, using his square gin bottles! Money will become an increasing problem. More and more of it is poured out into drinks.

You will scream to high heaven in frustration of love and of hate — for some way to help this man you love. As he doesn't feel the frustration of love and of hate — for some way to help this man you love. As he doesn't feel the frustration, neither do his doctors, clergy or friends, you will have to go it alone. Then he will die — and you will be left to try to make of the shambles the economy of what might have been.

Few will say or do anything to help while he is alive. Chances are his family will have long since written him off as the black sheep of the clan. And your own family will say, "I told you so."

I was often close to killing myself, but I have four little ones whose lives are dependent on mine. For us there was no answer.

In the one and one-half years since his death I have been close to the scrap heap. I cannot eat. I cannot sleep, and am constantly tired. I love him still. Through all the misery we shared he was the only person who was ever good to me.

Yes, I would marry him again. But for those who contemplate marrying an alcoholic I say think! think! think! Not everyone can survive the misfortune. — Mrs. A.

COMMENT: Comment? Superfluous.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: What are the gas-producing foods? — Mrs. G.

COMMENT: What is a gas producer for one person may bring a contented digestion to the next. I have known people who can eat baked beans, fried foods, celery, lettuce, fruit-skins, cabbage, radishes, gravies, etc. without suffering any discomfort at all. Others will have gas on swallowing any one.

I do not think there is a cover-all rule of diet. After a while, each one of us gets to know what foods and drinks agree or disagree with us.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Please answer this question of mine as I am a wreck worrying about my teen-aged son. He does over 150 push-ups every day. My question is: can this much overexercise be harmful to anyone? He is practically blue when he finishes this daily exercise. I would like him to read what you have to say in your columns. — Mrs. G.

COMMENT: So much exercise is potentially harmful — providing the exerter isn't aware of his physical condition. Has your son had a physical lately? Turning blue after exercise calls for it.

There's too much unnecessary physical exertion going on in this country. People are overdoing (many to their detriment) — and doctors are to blame for spreading this contagion. But don't let me get started.

For Mr. E.: The "zygoma" is the scientific name for the cheekbone.

Horsemeat Fanciers Mighty Scarce

By THE CANADIAN PRESS — A horse's place is at the racetrack or farm, not in the kitchen or dining room of the average Canadian home.

A Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press showed Monday that few Canadians have acquired a taste for horsemeat although it is available in many parts of the country.

Regulations generally premit the sale of horsemeat only if the seller advertises it as horsemeat and deals exclusively in that type of meat.

Although it is infrequently served in Canada, horsemeat is a standard dish in France. It is sold in Paris in special butcher shops bearing the sign of a gilded horse's head, and is cheaper than beef.

By the mid-1960s, horsemeat constituted about one-tenth of the total meat sold in France. About 350,000 horses had to be slaughtered in 1964 to produce an adequate supply.

Horsemeat can legally be sold in Britain—but mainly for pet food.

The sale of horsemeat is legal in the United States—but little of it is sold because of a dwindling supply. It must be clearly marked or advertised as horsemeat.

The director of the Halifax branch of the Atlantic Health Unit said regulations passed during the Second World War permit the sale of horsemeat there.

But Dr. E. M. Fogo said the regulation was passed when meat was scarce, and there is no demand now for it. He said horsemeat must be labelled as such and must pass standards of the federal food and drug directorate.

Municipal laws permit the sale of horsemeat in Quebec City if a permit is obtained and the seller deals only in horsemeat. But authorities in that city know of no outlet for the meat.

A bylaw in Ottawa permits the sale of horsemeat if the seller deals only in that type of meat. But it is available only in one market.

In Toronto, the sale of horsemeat has been legal in special shops since 1955.

But only one shop called Carne Equine—Italian for horsemeat—deals in the product. Horsemeat steaks sell for 70 cents a pound and roasts for 80. Customers are mainly Italian and French housewives.

Under licensing regulations, a butcher selling horsemeat is prohibited from selling any other kind of meat. He must have a sign with lettering at least four inches high advertising his meat is horsemeat.

Horsemeat can be sold legally throughout Alberta in stores which advertise it as horsemeat and sell no other kind.

There is only one horsemeat market in British Columbia—it cannot sell any other kind of meat. Owner H. H. Cleveland said horsemeat sells for about half the price of beef and business is good.

'Good' Prisoners to Get Leave

TORONTO (CP) — Selected prisoners in Ontario's 41 correctional institutions will be allowed short visits home or daily leaves to work or attend school.

The leaves are part of new regulations made public in the Ontario Gazette Monday following Aug. 26 passage of the federal government's omnibus bill to amend the Criminal Code.

Prisoners whose conduct is satisfactory already are receiving incentive allowances.

Daily school leaves for seven young prisoner-students began last year with special permission from the national parole board.

Incentive allowances ranging from $2.50 to $4.50 a week started in May for prisoners whose conduct and industry were deemed satisfactory. Passage of the regulations makes the allowances legal.

The leaves are intended for rehabilitative or humanitarian purposes, and may be granted at the discretion of the institution superintendent.

The daily leaves will allow prisoners, who must return to their institutions at the end of their activities, to take jobs, go to school or obtain additional training.

Leaves of up to three days may be granted prisoners so they can go to a public hospital for treatment or for humanitarian reasons.

A department of correctional institutions spokesmen said most of the humanitarian leaves will be granted to allow visits home and conjugal visits to wives, a system deemed preferable to having wives visit the institutions.

Special leaves of up to 15 days may also be granted, on the approval of the deputy minister "for humanitarian reasons or to assist in the rehabilitation of an inmate."

Swore at Trudeau, Jailed 2 Months

VANCOUVER (CP) — A provincial court judge Monday ordered a two-month jail sentence for a 20-year-old man who shouted obscenities at Prime Minister Trudeau during a demonstration here Aug. 8.

Judge David Moffett imposed the sentence on Ronald William Duyker of Vancouver after convicting him of creating a disturbance by shouting and swearing.

The incident occurred during an anti-Vietnam war demonstration in front of the Seaforth Armory where Liberals were holding a $50-a-plate fund-raising dinner.

The crowd jostled Mr. Trudeau and his advisers as the prime minister made his way inside. A Niagara Falls, Ont., youth later charged innocently that Mr. Trudeau slapped him.

In passing sentence Monday, Judge Moffett said he wanted to make clear that the courts will not tolerate unruly and obscene demonstrations.

"I am satisfied that the disturbance and the use of these words lowered the level of the demonstration to the point where it lacked the element of civilization which Canada has been noted for in the past," said the judge.

Police testified that Duyker used a four-letter obscenity in addressing the prime minister.

Lost $19 Million in Expropriation, Domco Authorizes Court Action

MONTREAL (CP) — The Dominion Coal Co. Ltd. Monday was authorized to take court action if necessary to recover $19,000,000 as a result of the expropriation of company assets by the Cape Breton Development Corp.

The authorization was given at a special meeting of Domco shareholders who approved the recommendations of a proferred shareholders' negotiating committee.

The meeting became heated at times as shareholders demanded to know how any assets, if recovered, would be distributed to creditors and shareholders.

A. A. Bailie, chairman and president of Dominion Coal, said the most preferred shareholders could expect to recover, provided the settlement amounts to $19,000,000, would be $53.37 a share.

He said Domco has been out of operation since the expropriation of its assets March 30, 1968, by Cape Breton Development (Devco), a federal Crown company.

Replying to a question from the floor, he said Devco had made no effort to reach a settlement since the takeover of the company's operating assets.

Mr. Bailie said Domco will have to await the results of a settlement before deciding whether it should be wound up or should undertake some other business operations.

The action by the shareholders opened the door to court action against the federal government, which is ultimately responsible for Devco affairs.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For September 17

Your birthday today: The coming year is simply a straightforward matter of assiduous work — with reasonable advancement to match what you do. Have no hesitation in changing jobs if you are not on the move where you are. You may outgrow some relations with people who do not progress compatibly. Today's natives have a particular talent for assembling images into patterns to fascinate the beholder.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Technical matters are favored for discussion. Your plans are sought — and if you have none, you set a limit on yourself. New ideas are in demand. Concentrate on new contacts.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Stretch yourself to do a more complete job. Shared resources are more readily handled now, so resolve things while the opportunity is at hand. Add something to your savings account.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Promote public projects. Be cooperative so you can, in turn, enjoy help in your ventures. Children come in for special attention. The evening is a happy one.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): This is the day to exchange know-how. Go along with the moods of associates and loved one. Get some time in outdoors if possible.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Get busy and find out what are the latest ingenious ideas in your field. Buy new gadgets for your home if the price is right. Unplanned events upset your afternoon routines — see the humor in the absurdity of the circumstances.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): There will be much adjustment to be made within the coming few months — start now to get ready for sweeping changes. Make the most of new situations which will help your progress.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Travel today if you can find any reason or excuse to do so. Try to collect what is owed you. There is quite an interesting story — do not pass it on until you are sure it is all in perspective. There is another side of the matter you do not yet know.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Financial affairs are more suscepible to profitable re-arrangement today. Keep looking for better knowledge on anything that is not clear to you. An opportunity is present in a most unlikely place.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 1): Follow up a recent application to see what has happened to it. Apply for permits, visas, licences. Your friends are full of plans and schemes—just listen for the time being. Seek light entertainment for the evening, nothing too thoughtful.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Urgent suggestions from friends must be taken into account. Some unforeseen problem might turn out to be the only path to success. Be willing to switch plans.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Friends and consultants from far places combine to give you a guidance today. Take the information but think in larger perspectives. Travel if you can.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Things come close to reality. Your carefully built up reputation is of great help in bringing advancement now. Avert nervous tension by amusements.

Czechs Didn't Hurry Home For Amnesty

PRAGUE (Reuters) — The deadline for the end of a "come-back-home" amnesty passed at midnight Monday night with no apparent sign of a mass last-minute return by the thousands of Czechoslovaks who have fled the country since last year.

Only a handful of the estimated 50,000 Czechs and Slovaks who left the country after the invasion by Warsaw pact troops have come back to take advantage of the amnesty, proclaimed by President Ludvik Svoboda in May.

World at Nuclear Weapons Crossroads, Says Thant

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — The 126-member United Nations General Assembly opens its 26th session today with few, if anybody, predicting that there will be spectacular developments concerning the many troubles of the world.

In a generally-gloomy news conference Monday, Secretary-General U Thant said the world is at a nuclear weapons crossroads and this theme is expected to be repeated by many between now and Christmas.

But whether there will be concrete steps toward world disarmament is open to question.

State Secretary William P. Rogers of the United States and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko are expected to hold talks here this month and presumably there will be discussion on bilateral talks on strategic nuclear weapons reductions.

But diplomatic observers here say that there is no indication yet whether Gromyko will bring instructions from Moscow saying that the Soviet Union is willing to hold such talks.

There was hope of the start of such talks last year but the U.S.-backed away after the Warsaw pact invasion of Czechoslovakia. Now observers feel that the bitterness caused by this invasion which poisoned the last session of the General Assembly now has receded.

It is hoped that the Geneva disarmament talks will have been concluded in time for proposals on keeping the seabed clear of strategic nuclear weapons to be brought before the assembly. And the Eastern-bloc countries are expected to make some proposals on biological and bacteriological warfare.

In other matters the United States, Soviet Union, Britain and France will resume talks on the Middle East crisis. But, again, nobody is predicting that the four powers will find a way around the impasse that forced adjournment of the talks earlier this year.

Gunnar Jarring, UN Middle East envoy, will be here next week for discussions.

President Nixon will speak for the United States Thursday. At one stage American officials were wondering whether announcement of this would inspire Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin to make an appearance, thus permitting a summit meeting. But they now have discounted this possibility.

The assembly is once again expected to refuse to seat Communist China and oust the Nationalist regime in Formosa. There is some question on how Canada will vote on this issue in view of recognition talks now being held in Stockholm. In recent years Canada has abstained in the crucial vote.

Africa's problems, particularly the racial separation politics of Rhodesia and South Africa, are expected to take considerable time, as they have in the recent past. The assembly session will last about three months.

U.S.-Soviet Gulf Widened Over Mosque Burning

UNITED NATIONS (Reuters) — The gulf between Russia and the United States over Israeli control of Jerusalem widened Monday night when the U.S. refused to back the resolution condemning Israel for a fire at the Al Aksah Mosque in the Holy City.

The Security Council always was unanimous in its decisions on Jerusalem in the past and the U.S. broke that tradition by abstaining from voting on the resolution—approved by 11 of the council members—which accused Israel of continuing measures to change the state of the Holy Land. Finland, Colombia and Paraguay also abstained.

Russia gave its full backing to the resolution, introduced by Pakistan, and complained it was not vigorous enough in its condemnation of Israel.

U.S. Ambassador Charles Yost told the council before the vote that the U.S. saw "no shred of evidence to support the allegations that the act of suspected arson . . . was other than an individual act, as demented as it was dastardly."

'Looks Like Prank'

TORONTO (CP) — An early - morning explosion which shattered 20 panes of glass at a greenhouse about 40 yards from the legislature building was probably caused by a stick of dynamite, police bomb experts said today.

The explosion tore a foot-deep hole in the grass beside the sidewalk. No one was injured and there was no damage to the legislature buildings.

A police spokesman said: "It almost looks like a prank, rather than a determined effort to blow the place up."

Soil samples are being studied in the attorney-general's laboratories. Police are also studying two pieces of fuse found near the blast.

Constable Wayne Oldham of the Metropolitan Toronto police was in the area when the explosion occurred.

"There was a flash and a big bang," he said

Fiddlers Three

This trio topped nearly a score of contestants from Eastern Ontario at United Apepal fiddlers' contest at Zwick's Island last night. Bellevillian Tina Ervine, runner-up, is flanked by champion fiddler Dawson Gurdwood of Perth (right) and Lorne Wilson of Carleton Place, in third place.

Kidnap Suspects May Wait Month Before Trial Date Set—Crown

WHITBY, Ont. (CP) — It may be a month before a trial date can be set for six young Toronto men charged with kidnapping, says Crown Attorney W. Bruce Affleck of Ontario County.

"I think a month is not unreasonable," he said Tuesday night in an interview after the six were remanded on $50,000 bail each.

He said that setting a date can be complicated because there will be six attorneys with six schedules which must be fitted to the court docket and the Crown schedule.

"These are serious charges and can affect the welfare of almost anyone in this country," said Provincial Judge Harry Jermyn Tuesday as he remanded the six smartly-attired bachelors until Sept. 23 on bail of $50,000 each.

They will have a chance at that time to re-apply for lower bail. Mr. Affleck said in the interview that should any of the accused raise bail, a starting date may well be at a later time.

For 16 minutes the men—Gary Adams, 20, John Rogan, 29, Peter Whiteside, 27, Peter Burns, 23, Ralph Cameron, 21, and Richard Yeowart, 25—stood before the judge while their lawyers argued for a reduction in the bail.

No pleas were taken.

Rogan's lawyer, James Shutleworth of Toronto, said not one of the men was a master criminal and described the kidnapping of Mrs. Nelles Sept. 7 as "a prank that got out of hand."

"This isn't according to the information my office has received," said Mr. Affleck. He looked at the judge. "I can assure you that this was no prank and I insist that the bail be held."

The trial is being held in Ontario County because Mrs. Nelles, 26-year-old daughter of a Toronto millionaire, was kidnapped in the county at her rural home in nearby Claremont. She was returned safely Sept. 9 after her husband, Cliff, 29, paid $200,000 raised by her uncle.

The $200,000 was recovered Friday near a cottage at Foxes Bay, 110 miles north of Toronto, and the six men were arrested last Friday and Saturday and brought here.

Adams is a former boy friend of Mrs. Nelles. Yeowart was a Toronto police constable for six years.

A charge that telephone conversations between Burns and his lawyer, Marvin Sukov, were being monitored by police and taped at the county jail was denied by Mr. Affleck.

Judge Jermyn told the six that if they wanted to continue their efforts to have bail reduced they could make application to a county court judge.

High School Ombudsman Would Mediate Disputes Between Students, Teachers

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario high schools should have an educational ombudsman to mediate personal disputes between students and teachers.

That was one of the recommendations Tuesday in a special report prepared for the provincial government on why young persons reject society.

The report, started in 1966 and completed at a cost of $112,000, says a common complaint of students was that "when a teacher is on your back, there's nothing you can do about it."

The report suggested an ombudsman could be appointed to mediate these personal clashes.

It also recommended establishment of a provincial youth foundation to study problems and a "vigorous attack on the problem" of youth-police relations.

A 15-member committee conducted the study, interviewing 508 Toronto students between the ages of 12 and 18.

It found that children of affluent families were more likely to become estranged and break away from society than those of lower income groups.

On police, the report said reformatory prisoners "amply testified" to the fact that a small minority of police "use unnecessary roughness and sometimes beat young people."

Awareness that this takes place "jeopardizes the relationship between the police and a large percentage of the youth population," the report said.

It suggested a "vigorous attack on the problem" of youth-police relations—including extended training for police dealing with youngsters and better communication between the public and the police commission so alleged cases of police mistreatment can be investigated.

UK Banks Raise Rate To 9%

LONDON (AP) — British commercial banks today raised their prime lending rate to nine per cent, further tightening the country's credit squeeze.

The new prime rate represents an increase of one-half per cent. The rate for ordinary customers goes up to 10½ from 9½ per cent.

The move follows similar action last week in Austria, West Germany and Switzerland and was a further step in the march upward of interest rates throughout the world to unprecedented levels.

French PM Wins Vote Of Confidence

PARIS (Reuters) — Premier Jacques Chaban-Delmas early today won an expected vote of confidence in the National Assembly, but his government faced a continuing "non" from striking workers and other unions threatening walkouts.

Chaban-Delmas, supposedly staking the life of his three-month-old government on the debate over post-devaluation policy, received a 228-vote majority from the Gaullist party's clear majority.

Monster Bone Just Rubbish

INVERNESS, Scotland (AP) — The scientific team hunting the Loch Ness monster sadly decided today that a find first identified as "the thigh bone of an animal not known to science" was not all that it was claimed to be.

Colin Simms, curator of the natural history department of York Museum, after seeing the bone on television, roundly declared it a bit of old rubbish from his rock garden.

Ulster

Outlaws Threaten Soccer Players

BELFAST (AP) — Northern Ireland's religious and political warfare spread to the sports arena today. Police put a visiting Italian soccer team under guard after it received a threat that it "will never reach home."

The threat was in a letter sent to a newspaper and signed by a person who identified himself as a captain in the outlawed Protestant "Ulster Volunteer Force."

It was levelled against Roma, a team scheduled to play a Football Cup, Winners Cup match this afternoon and return to Italy Thursday.

"Because the Italian press and TV have attacked British Ulster and England," the letter said, "we must and shall take punitive action against them."

A police spokesman said the threat was being taken seriously.

"The team will have a police guard before, during and after the match—until they leave the country," he said.

A downpour of rain and a new wait-and-see policy by British troops was delaying the removal of Belfast's street barricades, which were thrown up by Roman Catholics to keep Protestants out of their neighborhoods following last month's riots.

The soldiers received the blessing of Roman Catholics late Tuesday night after a day of indecision during which street obstacles went down and up like bouncing balls.

News Briefs

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two of the three-day old Larmer quadruplets — a boy and a girl — died Tuesday in St. Paul's Hospital.

Dead of the first-born quad, a two-pound 7¼-ounce girl, occurred shortly after 2 a.m. PDT and the third born, the only boy among the quads, weighing two pounds 6¾ ounces, died seven hours later.

The remaining two babies were reported in fair condition.

The health of the first-born began deteriorating five hours after her birth at 6 a.m. Saturday. The boy became sick Monday.

Both deaths apparently resulted from respiratory failure.

The four infants, born two months prematurely, were all placed in incubators after birth. They were baptized Sunday.

FALMOUTH, Mass. (AP)—A 200-foot oil barge that went aground in Buzzards Bay, leaking an oil slick that spread over three miles of beaches, floated free at high tide shortly after midnight Tuesday night and was towed out to deeper water.

The barge carried 14,000 barrels of diesel fuel for the Cape Cod Electric plant at Sandwich.

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — Dead gulls found in this area probably were killed by a chemical used in the plastics industry, a Trent University biologist said Tuesday.

Dr. David Cerilan, chairman of Trent's biology department, said tests have shown the birds were poisoned by a chlorinated hydrocarbon and "the only place I can think of where large amounts are used is in the plastics industry."

Peggy Back at Nursery School Where She Got Her Start

Rock-A-Bye Jenny

Skater turned teacher, Miss Peggy McCutcheon, gives four-year-old Jenny a little push. Peggy is practice teaching at the Jane 'n Jill Nursery School at the Albert College Manor, where she was once a student herself. Miss McCutcheon is taking a two-year course in pre-childhood education at St. Lawrence College in Kingston.

After 13 years, some of them logging thousands of miles touring two continents, Peggy McCutcheon the skater returned as Peggy Mc-Cutcheon the teacher.

At least for a little while, anyway.

Peggy, in between pursuing her two-year pre-childhood education course at St. Lawrence Community College in Kingston, is practice teaching at Jack 'n Jill Nursery School — where she was once a pupil.

"It gives me a funny feeling coming back here and teaching the children — but it's great to be back," said Peggy.

"I think practice teaching is just great. So much of what is taught in our educational institutions is theory. There is very little practice —and practice is more than half the fun," she added.

Peggy has been skating professionally for three years, but always enjoyed working with children.

"When I was on tour, I used to help the children working with the company in their correspondence courses. I guess maybe that was what helped me make up my mind I wanted to teach," Peggy commented.

"I love skating, because it is one of the things I do best. But it's the same as any other sport, you can only remain active in it for so long. Then you have to plan what you are going to do after you retire."

Retire seems like a far - off word to use when you are only 19 years old! But the future belongs to those who are willing to plan for it.

"Skating is something I appreciate, but it is not my life. I like doing other things as well — badminton, swimming," she remarked. Many children learn to skate at an early age, but they don't necessarily end up making a living at it.

What does it take?

"An awful lot of practise and plain old hard work. Most of all dedication, I think," says Peggy. "I haven't been skating because I broke my ankle earlier in the year, and was told the leg wouldn't be strong enough to continue for sometime."

While skating professionally, Peggy and her sister Jane toured North and South America. Plans for this year included travelling to the Far East.

"South America was beautiful. The larger cities were much like our own 'here at home — with all the convenience. Outlying areas are a picture of poverty and desolation."

"All in all," Peggy related, "it was a great experience. I enjoyed the travelling but it is good to be home, and not have to live out of a suitcase."

According to the nursery supervisor, Mrs. Bessie Franklin, Peggy is doing well. "I expect she will make a very fine nursery school teacher. She is personable and has a good rapport with the children," she added.

VON Delegation

Trenton Town Council came to the assistance of the VON branch, lacking funds to continue to provide bedside nursing care. Regional supervisor for Ottawa, Ruby Cuthbert, left, Trenton branch treasurer, Maurice Gledhill, with local nurse, Mrs. Faye Hutcheon, shown in conference outside council chambers, appealed for finances for the branch to function normally for the remainder of the year.

Three Remanded at Picton

PICTON — Three young men were arraigned in court here today charged with a joint jail-break attempt from Prince Edward County jail last Friday.

Dennis Butcher, 18 and Mark Anthony Kowal, 19, two Brantford area youths charged with bank robbery and James Blackwood, 20, RR 3, Picton were remanded until Friday, Blackwood is serving seven months for car theft.

The trio were charged with a joint escaped attempt while forcibly detaining two guards.

They also face charges of common assault on the two officers — Keith Cole and Ted Burley.

The trio's court appearance followed a brief statement on the incident yesterday by jail governor George Hunter — the first public announcement since police were called to stand by outside the jail late Friday.

The governor said two guards were locked in a cell by three prisoners and town and provincial police were called to duty outside the jail walls.

The situation lasted about an hour, but with the release of the two guards, police left the scene, said the governor. Governor Hunter denied earlier reports that 15 prisoners had been involved in the incident. Only 10 prisoners were being held in the jail at the time, he said.

Meantime, Butcher and Kowall Friday also will face charges of armed robbery of the Bank of Nova Scotia at Consecon May 28.

Both have been in custody ever since Sept. 6 and were remanded last week by Judge Wills.

Today, Picton lawyer Wilham Lane said the two were ready to plead to all charges.

However, Judge Wills said a hearing of the holdup charges likely would take considerable time and other persons were awaiting various case hearings today.

New Additions To Health Unit

TWEED — Several staff appointments have been ratified by the Kingston, Frontenac and Lennox and Addington Health Unit.

Miss Mary Casselman, public health nurse, has joined the staff, coming from the Northumberland - Durham Health Unit. Mrs. Alicia Bidson of Northbrook, public health nurse, joined the staff on a part-time basis. Mrs. Butson will work out of the Cloyne office.

Miss Shirley McCrae of Ottawa, public health nurse, will work in the Sharbot Lake area.

Mrs. Irene Murphy of Kingston has also joined the staff as a registered nursing assistant. She has been working at St. Mary's-of-the-Lake Hospital, at Kingston.

Mrs. Patricia Ward who has been working as a Victorian Nurse in Western Canada, was also accepted as a new employee.

As well, during the meeting, two registrations were accepted from John Dimakarakos, public health inspector, and Miss Barbara Charter, public health nurse.

Opposition to Board On County Agenda

Opposition to the county school board system as set up this year by the Ontario department of education will be heard in Hastings county council next Tuesday at its one day September session.

One of the resolutions to come before council will be from Grey county which is asking that due to the high cost of education and administration at the county level and the uncertainty of costs in future years ,that county boards be disbanded.

The same resolution asks that the former school boards be re-established to assume the responsibility of administering public and secondary school education.

Also at the one-day session of council called by Warden Donald W. Rodgers, committee reports will be heard.

In the evening a reurement dinner will be held for Mrs. Muriel Yorke, recently retired matron of Hastings Manor.

Plans for the redevelopment of Trenton's downtown area held the spotlight at the towns council meeting Monday. Councillor E.-M. (Ted) Parker called the proposal a catalyst for future industrial and commercial expansion. He voted with four of the five other councilmen to encourage the idea. Councillor Gerald Weaver (right) expressed a negative point of view and asked for his objection to be recorded.

Frankford's New Look To Change Trent Street

The village of Frankford is heading for a "new look" along South Trent Street where a $225,000 street and bridge building project is under way.

"You will never recognize the place when it is finished," stated Reeve William F. Rose today, referring to the more than half-mile of roadway construction which will see new curbs and sidewalks, new street lighting and a new bridge across Cold Creek.

Lightfoot Construction of Belleville has the contract for the bridge and roadway project. Abatements for the new bridge are expected to be poured next week.

The Frankford roadway project is preliminary to a new highway bridge across the Trent River and which preparations are now under way by the Ontario Highways Department.

The new Highway 33 bridge will replace the present obsolete, one-lane structure built prior to World War I.

Reeve Rose estimates construction of the highway bridge is still 18 months to two years away.

The highways department is paying a major percentage of current roadway and bridge construction.

The village will pay for certain items such as new street lighting which are not eligible for highway subsidy, but Frankford's share of the actual roadway and bridge construction costs will amount to only $15,000. This amount, in turn, will be subsidized 50 per cent by the highways department, leaving about $7,500 to be raised by village taxpayers.

Highway department planning for the proposed new Trent River bridge in Frankford has been going on for several years with several different plans being considered and then discarded.

One o fthe earlier proposals was to build the new highway bridge at the southern limits of the village, but this raised a storm of protest from residents who claimed it would result in the village being completely divided if the present bridge was removed with no replacement.

The new proposal approved by the village council would see the new bridge emerge just north of the present structure at the village four corners.

Reeve Rose says everyone seems contented with the latest bridge proposal.

Alignment of the new bridge over Cold Creek has been planned so as to meet up with the new structure when it is built.

On completion of the new river crossing the swing bridge over the Trent Canal and the main truss structure will be removed.

Access to the village park between the canal and the river will be by way of a special ramp from the new bridge structure which will be high enough to allow passage of canal pleasure boat traffic.

Rollins Gets Okay to Build 166 Units

An early construction start by the Ontario Housing Corporation on 96 family dwellings in Belleville is expected following federal approval yesterday of eight OHC loan applications.

Hon. Stanley Randall, minister responsible for the Ontario Housing Corporation said that federal approval had been given for OHC loan applications totaling $4,877,722. Hon. Robert Andras, is the federal minister responsible for housing.

Contracts will now be prepared for 96 family units in Belleville, 34 senior citizens housing units in Napanee and 36 town houses in Trenton.

Other developments are in Peterborough, Welland, Waterloo, Ingersoll and Newbury.

The eight developments will cost the OHC a total of $5,047,152 which will borrow 90 government and 10 per cent from the province. All loans are repaid by the OHC with interest.

Maurice H. Rollins Construction Ltd. will build the 96 family units in Belleville as well as 34 senior citizens units in Napanee and 36 family units in Trenton.

The Belleville housing which will cost a total of $1,360,600, will consist of 57 dwellings on Pine St. and 39 on North Park St. The two-storey townhouses will provide 28 two-bedroom, 54 three-bedroom, 18 four-bedroom and six five-bedroom units.

The Napanee senior citizens housing will consist of 34 one-bedroom dwellings in a two-storey apartment building on Water St. opposite Robert St. This development will cost $309,232.

To be located on Gould St., the 36 Trenton townhouses will consist of six two-bedroom, 18 three-bedroom, 10 four-bedroom and four five-bedroom dwellings. This development will cost OHC $484,932.

Students Honor Instructor Who Trained First Pilots

CAMPBELLFORD — The man who trained the pilots who formed the nucleus of the Royal Canadian Air Force was honored at a dinner celebrating his 80th birthday

Capt. Harry Frey, a First World War flying instructor, was entertained Friday night at the Riviera Inn, Campbellford, by Mr. and Mrs. Craig Beattie. Mr. Beattie is a former pupil of Capt. Frey's.

Former students, such as former Trans-Canada Airlines president Gordon McGregor and Canada's first licensed air pilot, Capt. Thomas Williams, 84, and still flying from his Woodstock air field, met together to wish the veteran instructor well.

Mile Sinclair, Mr. Frey's flight engineer from the days when he taught fledgling fliers to handle Gypsy Moth planes at a Kingston airport, was another guest.

Capt. Frey enlisted in the army and went overseas in 1914. After three years in the trenches, he transfered to the Royal Flying Corps and moved to Kingston to train pilots.

The 300 pilots he trained became the nucleus of the RCAF.

Now retired, he lives on his Seymour township farm. He is an honorary member of the Campbellford Tennis Club and was an active player until two years ago. Still a bachelor, he was given a radio and reclining chair by his ex-students at the banquet.

Travelogue Series Begins With Alaska Tour Oct. 23

Once more the Belleville Kiwanis Club is sponsoring a travel and adventure film series at the Capitol Theatre auditorium.

The series of films, the 12th series, will begin on Oct. 22 with Willis Butler's The Land of Alaska, a film that looks at all the aspects of the United States' 49th state.

The personal aspect of the film and of the other shows is the fact that each explorer himself is on hand to narrate and discuss his adventures.

On Dec. 3 Ronald R. Shanis presents Pulse of Africa, film of the authentic wildlife on the dark continent.

Robert Brouwer's Spring Captures Holland, to be presented Feb. 5, captures the beauty of spring in The Netherlands — that country's best season.

On Feb. 26 audiences will be taken to Israel during Walter D. Dodson's A Taste of Israel. The film tours Jerusalem, the Mediterranean resorts and the Dead Sea.

Yucatan Trails, an adventure film by Romain Wilhelmsen, is featured on Mar. 26. This film introduces the audience to the mysterious Yucatan Peninsula for an investigation into the lost Mayan civilization.

And finally, on April 30, Kenneth Richter presents New Zealand and uses two reels of film to describe that country.

Season tickets are on sale by Kiwanians at $5 each.

Free Milk In Schools Now Ended

Free milk for school children is a thing of the past in Hastings county schools.

The board of education has decided to discontinue the program in all except the retarded children's school.

The program was in operation in some county schools before merger of individual boards into the county system. Extending it to all elementary schools would cost -160 a child each year, for a total of about $20,000 a year.

The board decided to discontinue the program, but asked the principals of schools where the plan was formerly provided to make it available in the future to those children willing to pay for it.

Varying Styles of Cars Gives Public A Choice

VANCOUVER (CP) — Competition and variety in the North American automotive industry are good for buyers, says Roy F. Bennett, Ford Motor Co., vice-president.

The companies can't be faulted, as they often are, for coming out year upon year with different models and styles, he says. The result was often a less-expensive car.

Such criticism, Mr. Bennett said, is ill-founded because the auto producers are merely trying to satisfy the demands of different buyers in different economic situations.

His remarks were made recently during a special preview of Ford's 1970 models.

The continuous production of many lines of cars has helped, or at least corresponded with, a decrease in the comparative price of automobiles and trucks, Mr. Bennett said.

Ford offered 68 models in 1960 and has increased that total in 19 years to 96 for the 1970 model year.

"In my opinion, an important factor has been the increased opportunity of buyers to shop around for models more closely suited to their individual needs and means," Mr. Bennett said.

He cited several major changes in sales patterns from 1965 to 1969. The share of the market by foreign cars, he said, increased to 16 per cent from 11.5 per cent and by American-designed "intermediate" class cars to 36 per cent from 13.5.

"These remarkable changes reflect a number of conditions in the shifting market place," Mr. Bennett said, "an evolution which, in my opinion, will continue through the 1970s."

Among the conditions were:

—A more affluent public with changed buying habits, although still under pressure of a rising cost of living.

—Many new families entering the purchasing market with demands for different types of transportation;

—An increased public mobility due to improved and expanded highway networks.

"Never before in our industry's 65-year history has any one 10-year period seen such a rapid multiplication of public demands on our products," Mr. Bennett said. "As a consequence, competitive rivalry in the industry reached an all-time peak in the decade just ending. Nor is it likely to cool off as we enter the 1970s."

Too Many Chiefs?

Does Canada need more economic planning? Is the country trying to realize its full economic potential while at the same time attempting to combat inflation in a haphazard manner?

Consider that on the federal scene economic matters come under several areas of administration. Industry, Trade and Commerce for example is one ministry; Energy, Mines and Resources is another.

Others falling into the same category are Consumer and Corporate Affairs, Finance, National Revenue, Public Works, Agriculture, Fisheries, Forestry and Rural Development.

But no Minister of Economic Planning. Not even a Minister of Housing which is a matter of priority these days with so many ill-housed, or unable to afford such housing as is available.

Just how much co-operation is there between all these departments? Or in these vital economic matters is it just a matter of passing the buck from one to the other with no department really knowing what is going on in the other.

The Economic Council of Canada, for example, in its annual report calls for foresight and intelligent planning in both the private and public sector to steer the economy to what it terms a "potential for astonishing growth."

According to the Council there is an urgent need for a new and clearer consensus about Canada's national goals.

"All too frequently in the past, priorities have been identified and objectives established in isolation, on an ad hoc basis and without reference to any overall framework of goals and objectives . . ."

The wording bears the stamp of many a government declaration; it is vague, lacking in detail, but it does suggest, as noted above, that there are so many branches of government working on economic matters that the economy suffers as a result and might benefit from some form of overall direction and co-ordination.

Mortality Rate

Two important issues raised by the Economic Council of Canada are high unemployment among young adults and the accident toll in the same category.

The high unemployment among men under 25, averaging 9.7 per cent represents a potential source of social instability as well as a waste of valuable human resources according to the Council. As for accidents, the toll among the young unhappily is most apparent, and the Council calls for more measures to combat this human tragedy that is also reflected in economic loss.

It may also come as a surprise to many Canadians, whose spending on health per capita is among the world's highest, to be reminded that the life expectancy of a Canadian male at birth is less than in a number of countries, including Israel, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, The Netherlands and Switzerland.

Canada's infant mortality rate in 1966 was higher than in 11 other countries. Moreover, at least 14 countries have a lower maternal mortality rate than Canada.

It seems odd for a country as advanced as this, with one of the highest standards of living in the world, to be so far behind in this respect.

It reflects not only on medical science but also on the degree of advancement of Canadians in the field of child care. Parents too have a responsibility. It is a matter for concern; indeed we have nowhere to go but up in this regard, being already fairly far down the list.

Seaway Hot Rods

The Seaway season still has another couple of months to go before the onset of winter and at Brockville last weekend the scene was one to please all marine devotees.

Yachts filled the mile or so of water separating the Ontario and New York shores of the St. Lawrence, and they were well over on the U.S. side near Morristown as a big Norwegian freighter sailed past.

But suddenly the "hot-rodders" of the Seaway scene were there — small power boats with big ideas were speeding along the vessel's flanks. They were from the Ontario shore and one of them turned round the ship's stern with little room to spare.

It is a common sight in that area of the Seaway and one to which there appears to be no answer. Whether in boats or cars, there is always someone who must try to draw attention to himself.

UK to Go Decimal In 1971

Manchester Guardian

Britain's first decimal coins, five of them with a total face value of 18½ new pence (the 5s 6d ½ you), can be bought with wrapped in a plastic wallet with a bit of a blurb about D-day in 1971.

Just the thing for far-flung aunts and the jackdaw breed, who may find they are valuable collectors' items in about 50 years.

The cost of the wallet and coin is 5s 6d. Surprise then to find the sets advertised in the Sunday personal columns by enterprising mail order dealers for 15s 6d.

Surprise, too, to find them on sale at the coin cabinet next to the Decimal Currency Board's London headquarters, at 12s 6d.

There were tales of a slight reluctance on the part of the banks to handle the sets at first because of the paper and general sulsance.

But there's no question of a shortage — the Mint punched out six million of the things, enough to swamp the market.

We despatched scouts in a bold and furious probe of the banks on Monday. They all returned with shiny coin sets bought over the counter for 5s 6d, and reports of drawers full. The cashiers said there were fancy more in the mails.

Coin collecting can be an expensive hobby.

Congestion Threat to Air Safety

Ottawa Journal

Near Indianapolis recently a single - engine training plane hit the tail of a jetliner, and 83 died.

On April 8, 1954, an RCAF trainer hit the wing of a TCA airliner above Moose Jaw, and 37 died.

In 15 years there has been what Transport Department officials regard as immense improvement in air traffic safety procedures. But, as Indianapolis reminds us, the safety guarantees available to mixed air traffic are not yet absolute. It is difficult to see how they can be once an airport reaches a certain size.

Look, for example, at the task that must confront air traffic controllers at Ottawa's Uplands, which serves military, commercial and training machines, Air Canada, CP Air, Eastern Bay Airways have regular services out there, with Nordair expected to join them soon.

Laurentian Air Services, Canadian Aero Service, Survair Ltd., Spartan Air Services and Ottawa Aero Services also use the field.

Various types of armed forces' machines, from fighters to transports, employ the runways.

The modest Ottawa Flying Club aircraft take their places with learners in the aerial procession.

At times the big airlines send their latest and largest machines into Uplands for crew-training operations; a $6,500,000 Air Canada freighter crashed near Uplands in 1967, killing three pilots on training operations.

Private owners fly in their own machines, company transports bring executives and an occasional charter flight has to be fitted in.

A point of congestion will be reached at Uplands, as at Toronto, when the small machines "all have to go elsewhere; they take as much control time as the biggest jets.

Full Use of Schools

Support for the Mott Program

Editor,
The Intelligencer

It looks like those who perpetually complain about the cost of education are trying a new approach. After so many years of complaint about the expense of education, Mr. Ross' letter in Monday's Intelligencer seems to indicate that these "spend-thrifts" have reversed their attitude completely and decided that they do not want full use of the dollars which they have so grudgingly invested in education.

Let us not be stingy when it comes to the betterment of our community. There are many public benefits to be obtained by all age groups of our citizenry if we only make fuller use of our existing facilities.

As to the "earth shattering" expense of $1,200 for Mr. Mott's visit, I feel that it would be money well spent since his experience in Flint could save us a lot of tax dollars by eliminating potential problems.

In Flint, their system allows for maximum utilization of the schools. This, without question, directly benefits every member of the community. Mr. Ross, however, apparently cannot see as much use in this proposal as in the building of an ice-rink which would, I will concede, benefit greatly some Belleville fans. But, why not begin with the project that will serve a greater number of citizens and follow it up with Mr. Ross' suggestion?

In closing, let me say this. If the program in question is instituted, Belleville will certainly be recognized as an up-to-date, progressive community by visitors form other communities.

Community Concerts Strong Factor in City's Culture

Editor,
The Intelligencer

Having lived in Belleville since my childhood, I am naturally interested in the forthcoming 'Belleville Week' which presumably is going to try to prove that Belleville is a wonderful place to live.

Many of the things which will be publicized will be quite obvious to the envious eyes of those outside our area. However, there are some facets of Belleville life which may not receive much publicity because they are somewhat intangible, but nevertheless very real. I refer to the cultural life and opportunities available in this city.

Well over 30 years ago, a few civic minded people felt that Belleville was underprivileged culturally, so decided to do something about it. Due to the efforts of these pioneer spirits, Belleville now has a Community Concert Association which brings to the city world-famous artists; people who are regularly heard on the concert stage in the various capitals of Europe and in the largest cities of United States and Canada. Such internationally known 'greats' as Patagorsky, James Melton, Lois Marshall, Vienna Academy Chorus, and George London are just a few who have appeared in Belleville. The first concert of this season's series is to be presented just a few days before 'Belleville Week' officially begins. Yes, Belleville definitely is on the cultural map by having a thriving branch of the Community Concert Association in its midst.

More recently, the Belleville Arts Council has been formed, which, by using local talent, is making a further contribution to that intangible ingredient of the total life of this city — its cultural life. Opportunities for participating in dramatic and musical events are available for those who are interested. And so, these two organizations are doing their utmost to provide Belleville with a cultural atmosphere equal to that which is available in much larger cities. Thus, the total life of residents of Belleville is made happier in this not so obvious way.

Public Bodies and the Press

Brockville Recorder and Times

If public bodies, such as municipal councils or counties school boards, are really interested in the electorate getting the fullest possible information on their operations, there should be no problem for newsmen in covering their operations. Such is not always the case, however.

In addition to the device of "committee of the whole" when the real meat of an issue is discussed but the press is excluded, there is the business of correspondence, bylaws and reports that are presented for public consumption, without discussion, at open meetings. The discussion, usually, has taken place at a closed committee meeting and no member of the council or school board is thus placed on the public record too often. Copies of such correspondence, bylaws and reports would greatly assist the press but to no great extent without explanation or elaborations, in the absence of discussion.

It would thus seem in the public interest to prepare copies of such material in advance for the press. It is a practice carried out by some public bodies and has proved an aid in informing the public. It's a co-operative policy that should commend itself to any public body.

The Intelligencer welcomes letters to the editor. Letters should be written or typed on one side of the paper only and bear the address and signature of the sender. For publication purposes a pseudonym or pen-name may be used if so indicated.

Aftermath of the Canadian War Budget handed down by the Dominion Government saw a calm Belleville population take another war measure in its stride. While there was much conjecture regarding the possible advance in the price of food-stuffs and other commodities, there was little or no sign of the "jitters" over what was termed a necessary measure. A prominent Front St. tobacconist stated this morning that the new tax on tobaccos and cigarettes had not as yet gone into effect. He was of the opinion that not until new stocks now on order were delivered would the new prices be quoted.

Jimmy Anderson was born in Trenton, eight years ago, the son of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Anderson and lived his entire life in Trenton. He was a pupil at North Trenton public school.

Surviving are his parents, five brothers, Allan, Denis Kenneth, Randy and Donald Anderson and four sisters, Edith, Betty, Angie and Vicki all at home.

Success Is the Prediction

Ald. Gerald Joyce brings Kiwanians up to date on the latest activities slated for Belleville Week. Speaking at the club's regular weekly luncheon meeting, Mr. Joyce emphasized the enthusiasm and co-operation that has become a working part of preparations. He predicted Belleville's biggest week ever would be an unqualified success.

Participation Answer To Successful Week

Speaking at the regular weekly luncheon meeting of the Kiwanis Club, Alderman Gerald Joyce enthusiastically brought members up to date on the latest activities planned for Belleville's big week.

"We are trying to get everyone in the community involved, particularly all the organizations in the city. They are one of the biggest keys to our success," said Mr. Joyce in his opening remarks.

Several organizations in the city want to get involved; Mr. Joyce noted, but the problem is what they plan to do, and how to go about it.

"We try to supply the clubs with as many exciting ideas as possible, and in most cases they get swept up in the whole scheme and carry it off themselves," he added.

The alderman then cited an example of what one of the clubs in Belleville—the Kinsmen and the Kinettes are doing. The club has made its project the selling of "Belleville Booster" buttons — selectively involving members.

"This is the type of thing we want, clubs and individuals as a working part of Belleville week" emphasized Ald. Joyce. One of the activities being planned is a "fly-in". Mr. Joyce informed his audience, sponsored by the Belleville Flying Club.

This event will involve more than 200 planes from all over the country, converging on Belleville. There will be a plane over city hall every two minutes. The aircraft will be bringing hundreds of visitors to our city as well," he said.

Ald. Joyce named other highlights of the week, including Civic night when more than 50 former mayors and aldermen will come back to Belleville. And, of course, English surgeon Mr. P. A. Ring will be in the city to demonstrate his famed metal hip implant method.

"We are hoping, too, that during this time in the city there will be four provincial and federal cabinet ministers." Mr. Joyce told his audience.

Even the young people have their day. "We want them to do their own things, give them a chance to learn that adults are willing to co-operate with them, and want them involved."

The alderman emphasized the importance of involving the young people of Belleville in the activities.

"These are the people we want to stay here," asserted Mr. Joyce, "we want them happy and proud to be a part of their community, and be able to say good things about it."

"We want 33,000 Bellevillians selling the benefits of Belleville to the guests who will be in our city. We will have a good week, and after we are done, the rest of Canada will realize what is going on in our city," he concluded.

THE BETTER HALF

By Bob Barnes

"I wonder how much they'd give us in trade on those two flat rocks I use now?"

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market overcame a small opening loss and advanced fractionally into its third consecutive upward session in light mid-morning trading today.

On Index, industrials gained .22 to 178.15 after being down .12 in the first half hour of trading. Golds were up .01 to 191.82 and base metals slipped .04 to 109.59.

The western oil index, down 23.46 in the last four days, lost 1.28 to 222.85 as stocks of companies with interests in Alaska continued to come under pressure.

Aquitaine dropped 1 to 21¼, Home B 1 to 22 and Westcoast Transmission 2 to 14 and Home A ¼ to 48.

Inco slipped ¾ to 39¾. Inco's Ontario operations have been shut down since July 19 when steelworkers walked off their jobs. During conciliation, talks Tuesday, Inco offered steelworkers improved fringe benefits.

Falconbridge was up 1 to 127½. Talks aimed at settling a Mine, Mill and Smelter workers strike that began Aug. 21 resumed this week.

Steico picked up ¼ to 22¼ while Algoma Steel was unchanged at 16¼. Steelworkers at both companies are on strike.

Bank of Nova Scotia was off ¼ to 22¾ although the company declared a two-cent extra dividend with its regular quarterly common-stock dividend of 18 cents.

Volume by 11 a.m. was 465,000 shares compared with 470,000 at the same time Tuesday.

On Tuesday, the market held at a mixed position for most of the session before marking an upward movement near the close.

The western oil index, down 18.18 in the last three days, lost 5.28 to 224.13.

The weakness appears to be caused by apparent poor showing of Canadian companies in the recent Alaskan oil lease sales and by the end of speculative buying.

Home A fell 4¼ to 47¾, Home B 3¼ to 43, Ranger 1⅜ to 13¾, Aquitaine 1¼ to 22¼ and Westcoast Decalta 55 cents to 28.00.

Home denied rumors that it was planning to abandon its exploratory well on Alaska's North Slope 52 miles south of Prudhoe Bay.

Industrial mines led the industrial advance. Falconbridge rose 2¼ to 126¾ and Inco ¾ to 40.

Steico slipped ¾ to 22¾ and Algoma Steel was unchanged at 16¼. Steelworkers at both companies are on strike.

It's A Place to Talk, or Just Hold Hands and Cry

KENTVILLE, N.S. (CP) — A small, street-level room in this western Nova Scotia town is the centre for a growing effort to help people who have problems or "just want to talk."

In its single year of life, hundreds—young and old—have entered Operation Contact's only door to ask advice, to discuss, innumerable subjects or "just to hold hands and cry."

In the words of one of its founders, 24-year-old Selwyn Hopkins, assistant pastor of Kentville Baptist Church, the main purpose is to be "a concerned listener within a Christian context and to serve all people, young and old."

A student at Acadia Divinity College in Wolfville, N.S., his theological background offers the reason for his concern.

"Because of our Christian experience, we offer this service to people—but we're not here to stuff religion down peoples' throats."

Mr. Hopkins is serious about the venture and talks earnestly and excitedly about the organization and its future. His involvement began more than a year ago while he was chaplain of the Kentville Jail and student chaplain at the Nova Scotia TB sanatorium here. He found there were many in jail and in hospital who sought advice and wanted to discuss problems.

"I kept meeting people who had finished serving sentences or who were well and could leave hospital. They still wanted to talk but I really had no place to meet them."

Meetings and discussions with interested persons gave Mr. Hopkins a can't-let-it-die attitude.

A $100 withdrawal from a local bank in August, 1968, financed the first rent payment for the cramped Contact quarters.

Most people who have dropped in at the centre are looking for "a new sense of living and the knowledge of acceptance as worthy individuals, which is hard to come by in jails and society."

There are about 30 regular members of Contact now, says Mr. Hopkins, and sometimes "it can get a bit crowded" at the headquarters. The volunteer workers have a basic approach to all persons who drop in.

"We show them our interest, our love, our forgiveness for any wrong they have done," said Mr. Hopkins. "We show them that God loves them and forgives. We tell them this is something they experience when they seek forgiveness."

He says persons who have committed some offence, and been punished for it, generally feel bad about it and feel they're "not worth much as people."

Many are socially reticied, Mr. Hopkins says, and to their families nothing more than delinquents. "They're not members of a church, so the church doesn't reach out" to offer help.

"They're in a no-man's world."

The main thing is to give them "a feeling of acceptance —we don't approve of the things they have done but we show them love and concern for themselves."

Contact's volunteers—led this summer by music teacher David Dawson of Moncton, N.B.—also visit the courts daily and the local jail once a week.

Mr. Hopkins says the operation has been working out well and hopes for future expansion.

The centre itself bespeaks a different approach to old problems. All types of poetry have been taped to the walls and a sign on one wall says "God is the Ultimate Trip."

They hope to have sweatshirts bearing the saying: "Smile, Jesus Loves You." Paintings, modern in design and meaning, cover the walls.

A few stools, made by patients of a mental hospital, line one wall while donated chairs and pillows are scattered about the bare floor.

Recreation Commissioner ... And She's Only 17

HALIFAX (CP) — Seventeen-year-old Gail Chaddock of Halifax is the first teen-ager to be appointed a civic recreation commissioner.

Miss Chaddock, named to the Halifax Recreation Commission's new 12-member board this spring, says she believes her appointment is a key to opening similar opportunities to other young people.

"I have to be extra good because I am setting a precedent. Everybody will be watching to see how I do. I am not just on the commission in name—I have a vote and a say in what is going to happen recreation-wise over the next two years."

To help her make voting decisions, Gail plans to set up a youth advisory council which would act as a link between the city's young people and the recreation commission.

"This will enable young persons from any school, group or organization to come and offer ideas and suggestions regarding the recreational needs of youth in the area.

"I hope other kids will help me make use of my responsibility. We must show adults that young people are thinking people as well. It has always been that youth has the enthusiasm—but adults have the power."

Gail says she feels young people will be more willing to give their ideas now that she is on the commission. "They know that something will come out of them, or at least they will receive attention."

Gail was chosen to serve on the commission by members of all the student councils in secondary schools in the Halifax area. She represents close to 8,000 high school students.

She has some definite ideas about recreation needs in the city. High on her priority list is the expenditure of more money on drop-in centres.

She would also like to see more sports and varied activities for the younger set, those aged six to 14. "The school gymnasiums throughout the city should be open evenings and during the summer for community use."

She says she is concerned about the glue-sniffing and drug problem in the city and feels that drop-in centres, sports and other activities would help keep young persons busy, productive and happy.

After she graduates from high school, Gail plans to attend Dalhousie University here, spend a couple of years overseas with Canadian University Students Overseas and then return to Halifax and do social work with young people.

Special UN Role Seen for Canada

WASHINGTON (CP) — "A special role" for Canada apparently had developed through her support of United Nations peacekeeping operations in recent years, says Senator Stuart Symington, influential member of the United States Senate foreign relations and armed services committees.

"In effect, it would appear that Canada has become an armed force of the United Nations. And if equipped with adequate heavy aircraft capability, that nation could also serve as a 'remote presence' for the UN."

Symington was speaking in support of further U.S. purchase of the vastly expensive C-5A transport aircraft which could provide the U.S. with a "remote presence" by keeping troops at home but ready for rapid deployment in significant numbers over long distances to trouble spots.

Finally, the Senate voted down a proposal to cut $533,000,000 earmarked for purchase of an additional 23 of the aircraft. Money had already been approved for the first 58 of the controversial planes, on which the cost had jumped to $5,000,000,000 from about $3,000,000,000 in less than five years.

Symington, a Missouri Democrat, said the concept of remote presence through such superaircraft is proposed as "a way out of the dilemma of how to meet proper foreign defence commitments without stationing large military forces overseas."

In a wide-ranging speech on the prospects for peace, Symington said that "assuming a disastrous post-Vietnam scenario is not followed," the threat of major conflict in the developing countries of Asia, Africa and South America is not considered great.

But minor conflicts "within or between developing countries can only continue to occur" and international disputes will warrant UN action.

"It is in support of such action by the United Nations that it would appear a special role for Canada has developed."

The original membership of Canada in NATO was the "natural result of a post-war camaraderie within the Atlantic community." And the idea of defending the European wellsprings of Canadian cultural heritage had been viewed sympathetically until recent years by most Canadians.

"While a willing United Nations participant, however, Canada has been less willing than has the United States to look into her involvement in European defence as crucially significant," he said.

"The contribution of Canada to NATO has thus become more and more a symbolic gesture of solidarity with its allies, no longer an operation which could be justified in military terms.

"But Canada is morally bound to assist, in one way or another, with the defence of the Western world and to the same proportional extent as its friends.

"Accordingly, Canada is apparently thinking more in terms of participation in military and other functions of the 'third world' rather than involvement in the strategic arrangements of the great powers."

He noted Canada, Switzerland, the Scandinavian countries and some others have considerable influence in the underdeveloped and uncommitted regions of the world. And he recalled that Canada has provided contingents in virtually all the peacekeeping forces and international supervisory operations since the Second World War—in Indochina, Palestine, Kashmir, Yemen, Gaza, The Congo and Cyprus.

Homework Attitudes Reflect Philosophies

VANCOUVER (CP) — Israeli students hit the books a lot harder than their Canadian counterparts, say three Vancouver students who recently returned from a year of study in Israel.

Brian Goldenberg, 15, Valery Shlyster, 16, and Tessa Hoffman, 16, were among a group of 20 Canadian students who attended Hadassim secondary school near Tel Aviv.

They found Israeli students took their studies seriously and plunged into their homework.

"You are always expected to work hard," said Tessa. "People who want to take it easy and be lazy just don't make it."

Fellow-pupil Martin Susman of Regina, visiting here, said:

"To the Israelis it is a matter of life and death. They are always under the threat of danger from the Arabs and they take the things they do seriously."

The program, operated by the Hadassah-Wizo organization in Canada, allowed the students to study a Canadian Grade 10 curriculum, with the addition of Jewish history.

They boarded at the Hadassim school with some 500 other students where they were involved with agricultural work and pre-army training in addition to regular classes.

Social Welfare Not Replacement For Initiative

CHATHAM (CP) — Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield said Tuesday that Canada's welfare system leaves so much to be desired.

He said the system should be revised so that everyone will have a decent standard of living and those who do not need welfare should not receive it.

"Too often, present welfare programs encourage continued dependence on welfare rather than providing incentives to initiative," he told the Progressive Conservative Associations of Kent-Essex and Lambton-Kent.

Earlier, in Windsor, Ont., the Progressive Conservative leader defended Quebec's treatment of the English-speaking minority in that province.

He told University of Windsor students:

"We should start asking ourselves how many other provinces have equalled Quebec in its treatment of a minority."

Mr. Stanfield told the Chatham group that social welfare should not replace personal initiative.

". . . The central element is the provision of incentives," he said. "That would involve an extensive program of retraining. But it would also involve a scheme to make it profitable for men on welfare to work."

He also said inflation and increases in the cost of living are not being brought under control.

"In time, businessmen and the country become committed to keeping their interest rates high," he said. "If they continue at the present rates they are going to undermine our prospects for continuous advance."

MP's Salary

Trudeau Favors Increase

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Tuesday he favors an increase in the $18,000 annual pay of members of Parliament.

However, he told reporters, it is not up to him to decide the matter.

Mr. Trudeau said the subject of a pay increase for MPs would be of interest to everyone, particularly since some civil servants earn more than Commons members and cabinet ministers.

MPs played a "crucial" role in society an dtheir pay should be brought up to the level of others performing jobs of equal importance.

MPs receive $18,000 a year of which $8,000 is not taxable. Cabinet ministers receive a total of $35,000—including MPs' pay of $18,000, additional ministers' pay of $15,000 and $2,000 car allowance—of which $8,000 is tax-free.

Mr. Trudeau is paid $25,000 in addition to his MP's salary, plus $2,000 tax-free for the maintenance of his official residence, for a total of $45,000 of which $8,000 is tax-exempt.

MPs last received a pay increase in 1955, when their annual pay rose to $18,000 from $12,000.

Teachers Warn Controls May Affect Standards

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation said Tuesday the province's education standards may drop sharply if school boards are forced to cut their 1970 budgets.

The statement followed a statement Monday by Provincial Treasurer Charles MacNaughton that further restrictions may have to be imposed on the board's spending estimates.

Ward McAdam, federation president, said the government should place greater emphasis on educational priorities.

"Until very recently there has seemed to be very little long-range planning," he said. "Therefore school boards have felt free to launch programs that were predictably expensive."

Teacher salaries were not responsible for high spending, he said. The percentage of salary costs in over-all budget increases was less than five per cent last spring.

Mr. MacNaughton told an education conference Monday that expected increases in education spending would raise the expense to $3,400,000,000 in four years from $1,900,000,000 this year. This would eat up the total expected increase in provincial revenue.

Mr. McAdam said the important factor is education needs, adding the education department "seems almost to have withdrawn from the field."

Veterans Pension Is Under Review

OTTAWA (CP) — The matter of basic pension rates for veterans is being discussed in a general review of welfare being conducted by the federal government, Veterans Affairs Minister Jean-Eudes Dube said Tuesday.

He told the Commons standing committee on veterans affairs that study of the basic rate was not included in the terms of reference of the Woods committee, which reported in 1968.

The committee, headed by Mr. Justice Mervyn Woods of the Saskatchewan Court of Appeal, made 148 recommendations—many of them incorporated in a recent government policy statement.

Mr. Dube said the policy statement does not mean the government has taken "a rigid or inflexible" view. It would give careful consideration to suggestions by the committee and the veterans organizations that will appear before it during the next two weeks.

Medicare Hardships Possible

TORONTO (CP) — Thomas Wells, Ontario health minister, said Tuesday his department will look into cases of patients faced with unexpected medical fees after the province starts its medical care scheme Oct. 1.

He cited persons still faced with bills when other medical insurance they carry becomes worthless following introduction of the Ontario Hospital Services Insurance Plan.

One such case involves a Toronto woman who is expecting a baby two weeks after OHSIP—the provincial version of the federal health scheme—comes into effect.

Eight months ago before OHSIP was approved, the woman made a contract with her doctor to pay a $25 pregnancy and delivery fee which would be covered largely by her private insurance plan.

However after the provincial plan takes effect, it will be illegal for an Ontario resident covered by the plan to carry insurance against medical bills greater than 90 per cent of the OMA fee schedule.

Female President of UN Says Body Failing Mankind

UNITED NATIONS (Reuters) — Delegates to the 24th annual session of the General Assembly, warned by their new president to halt "the decline of the UN in the eyes of public opinion," today elect 17 vice-presidents.

Angie E. Brooks, assistant secretary of state of Liberia, was elected president Tuesday without opposition. In a surprisingly tough speech, the 41-year-old Miss Brooks told UN members they have failed to fulfil the hopes of mankind and have produced a "gradual decline" in the world body's stature.

She criticized what she termed the "mythology of achievement" which compels countries to force through resolutions which they know will not be implemented and also attacked the lack of realism of the world body.

The five permanent members of the Security Council—China (Formosa), Britain, France, Russia and the U.S.—are expected to be elected vice-presidents as well as the delegates from Barbados, Chile, Panama, Indonesia, Jordan, Mongolia, Ghana, Malawi, Nigeria, Denmark, Luxembourg and Yugoslavia.

The assembly's general committee, composed of the president, the 17 vice-presidents and the chairmen of the seven main assembly committees, will meet to work on an agenda before general debate opens Thursday against the perennial background of world crises.

Although the provisional agenda reads like a list of the world's chronic ills, some of the hottest crises have been kept off it.

Vietnam, the Warsaw-pact occupation of Czechoslovakia and the Nigerian civil war will not be discussed during the three-month assembly session.

The situation in the Middle East is on the agenda but will probably, as in previous years, be discussed in bilateral and multi-lateral negotiations between the Middle East states and the Big Four powers rather than be debated publicly.

During the meeting of the general committee, the question of the inclusion of the situation in Northern Ireland on the agenda will be discussed. Britain will oppose the move and British sources claim that many members of the committee share the British view that this is an internal problem.

China 'Wants in' Sharp Admits

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said Tuesday night he has concluded from talks with the Communist Chinese that the Peking regime would like to become a member of the United Nations.

He said Secretary-General U Thant agreed with him.

He added that China has not demanded that Canada support Peking's entrance into the UN as the price of recognition. However Canada's vote on the annual UN resolution on admission of China and the expulsion of the Nationalist regime in Formosa would be "very closely related" to the talks.

In the recent past, Canada has abstained on the China vote.

From Buick for 1970. The GS. The GS455. The Skylark Custom Sport Coupe.

They're what you've been asking for, right? Automobiles to really light your fire.

Sweeping, sporty lines. Glistening, powerful looks.

And plenty of performance.

The GS455 (up top), equipped with the Stage 1 performance package, has a big 455 cubic-inch 360 horsepower engine with real hood-scoops. Four-on-the-floor or a three-speed automatic transmission is available. It's up to you.

All these light-your-fire Buicks simply drip with luxury. Carpeting front and rear. Rich, lush fabrics and vinyls. Instrument panels a spaceship would be proud of.

Altogether lots of features to excite you.

Perhaps though, you'd prefer one of the full-size Buicks, typified by the superb new Electra 225 shown above.

It has an improved three-speed automatic transmission. A new cooling system that should never overheat. A new radio-antenna hidden in the windshield. A new, more powerful engine. And AccuDrive—the suspension that gives all big Buicks such a superb ride.

Here's the same kind of traditional Buick quality you'll find in all 1970 Buicks. In Wildcat. LeSabre. Riviera.

It's this quality that's made the Buick name mean so much.

The kind of quality that keeps Buick owners buying Buicks time after time after time. We call it building with product integrity. Maybe it puts us out of step with the times. But we want to be something you can believe in. And we hope we always will be.

Millinery Show First Project of Association

By LINDA GELDART

It was a show of hats — a true dream of any woman who has ever searched for the perfect topping for an ensemble.

The dream was pleasantly real Tuesday night at the Kiwanis Centre, when the Bay of Quinte Dental Nurses Assistants' Association sponsored a hat and accessory show before more than 70 interested women.

Acting as commentator for the evening was Mrs. R. Jeffery.

Modelling hats during the show were Mrs. Lillan Grayson, Mrs. Noreen Shinkle, Mrs. Louise Houchin, Mrs. Shirley Woodcox, Mrs. Brenda Ward and Marilyn La Morre.

This was the first project of the Association, which is only a year old — and from all appearances, a great success.

The show previewed several English imported hats, others of velvet, real fur and of course fun fake fur.

Every type of hat was previewed for every age group in a rainbow of colors and styles.

The most important thing to remember about a hat is that it should not only compliment, but complete an ensemble. Hats previewed in last evening's show were modelled with this important premise in mind.

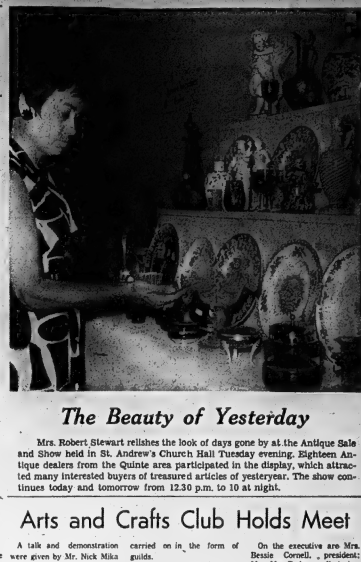
A hat co-ordinates an ensemble, adding just the right finishing touch. The dominant show styling was classic, with the emphasis on the "total look".

Perky turned up brims, rounded off the face chapeaux were in evidence, which Mrs. Jeffrey solemnly told her audience, "can make things happen for you".

Beautiful fur hats were tastefully modelled and coveted by every woman watching. Pastel mink, fox fur hoods — fur can be a girl's best friend, particularly if she is fun-loving and a member of the jet set.

Hats were donated by Gertrude's Millinery, and hair styles were by Pat's Beauty Salon. Make-up was by Fashion 220.

Several prizes were given on behalf of Kelly's Drug Store Marianne's, Robal's Camera Centre and Simpson's Sears. Carpet was supplied by Booth' Radio and Television and drapes by McIntosh's.



The audience loved some of the other gifts given out in four lucky women — original being the only way to describe them.

Given out were a live chicken, a hot water bottle, a lawn chair and a pair of mittens, complete with fake snake.

An unusual ending for an enjoyable evening.

The Beauty of Yesterday

Mrs. Robert Stewart relishes the look of days gone by at the Antique Sale and Show held in St. Andrew's Church Hall Tuesday evening. Eighteen Antique dealers from the Quinte area participated in the display, which attracted many interested buyers of treasured articles of yesteryear. The show continues today and tomorrow from 12.30 p.m. to 10 at night.

Arts and Crafts Club Holds Meet

A talk and demonstration were given by Mr. Nick Mika at the Wednesday meeting of the Belleville Arts and Craft Club. In attendance were 35 people.

The club was established 17 years ago when a resurgence of interest in this field became apparent. A few interested people met with the Recreation Committee and the club was formed to promote the various arts and crafts. Many new courses were offered then and some of the crafts are still being carried on in the form of guilds.

The club has an open membership with meetings held the second Wednesday of the month at the Recreation Centre. Sponsored by the club are speakers, slides and demonstrations with an arts and craft content.

The club is an active member of the Quinte Arts Council and it is sponsored by the Belleville Recreation Centre and the Youth and Recreation Branch of the Board of Education.

On the executive are Mrs. Bessie Cornell, president; Mrs. Meg Pedersen, first vice-president, and second vice-president, Miss Helen Sulman. The secretary is Mrs. Ruby Ticehurst and the treasurer is Mrs. D. Riley. In charge of membership is Mrs. D. Pearson.

It was decided that a talk on flower arrangements by Mrs. Miakawa would be made at the October 8 meeting. On November 12 Miss Eleanor Flint of Toronto will show slides of India, seen through the "Eyes of an Artist".

Advertising Talk Given

The Business and Professional Women's Club of Belleville held its first meeting of the new season on Monday evening at the Sun Valley Motor Inn. Speaker at this time was J. P. Rayson, advertising manager of the Abitibi Provincial Paper Ltd., who has been with the company for the past 15 years and is a member of the Advertising and Sales Club of Toronto.

His topic was "Why They Don't Advertise in Outer Mongolia", and in his opening remarks noted that advertising often gets blamed for everything that is wrong with television and for the failure of any product which jets the customer down. Advertising people are accused of mysterious brainwash the unwary public. "What are the facts behind all these attacks on advertising," he inquired.

He felt that commercials on TV are incessant, frequently confusing and sometimes quite tasteless or alarming. This contributes to the plight of today's housewife when she enters the supermarket.

The speaker went on to say advertising is accused of being condescending, of being silly, of being pretentious — and, often of being downright tasteless. He admitted that some advertising is definitely in bad taste, just as there is much tastelessness in the media that conveys it. "On the other hand," Mr. Rayson continued, "there is good TV programming and there are also good commercials. Then why is it so fashionable to single out advertising just for special attack? Perhaps, it is because advertising, unlike other businesses, is conducted completely in public."

Mr. Rayson declared that in some countries of the world you would not be aware of advertising at all from one year's end to the next and dealt in particular with his topic. He said "Let me paint for you a picture of the joys of life in Outer Mongolia. There are absolutely no commercials on television. There has never been a product that failed to live up to its advertised promise. Nobody in Outer Mongolia is ever annoyed by conflicting boasts about the virtues of rival cigarette filters. The country is ideal for the ad hater, because you see there is no television!

"Advertising is for many companies, the greatest single selling expense," continued the speaker. "For even if the company can sell one sample of its product to every family in the country, the manufacturer of a widely advertised product will go into bankruptcy unless a good number of those first customers are happy enough with their purchases to re-purchase frequently. They won't do this if the advertising has oversold them to the degree that they feel they've been 'had'.

"But, to sum up," he concluded, "if wanting things is a sin, then advertising is a sinner. If you want the simple life, you must try Outer Mongolia."

Appreciation of the club was expressed to the speaker by Charlotte Lockyer who also presented him with a small gift on behalf of the members.

Usual business was discussed, after which the presentation of bursaries was discussed with members of the club to present these at the various graduations. Those include: for Nicholson Catholic College, Mabel Guilfoyle; Centennial, Marie Huffman; Moira Secondary, Shirley Woodcox; BCI and VS, Charlotte Lockyer and Quinte Secondary Hazel Grills. It was also noted that a forum is to be held at the Skyline Hotel, Toronto on Nov. 18 dealing with the topic "The People's Forum on Federalism." A regional meeting is to be held in Napanee on Oct. 6, at which time Colombe Both will be a delegate. Two resignations were regretfully accepted.

Three new members were installed by Club president Dorothy Ellis and membership chairman Lois Brown and included Lorraine Morris, Allison Stickle, and Robin Jeffrey.

Next meeting will take place at the same time, same place on Monday, Oct. 20.

SOCIAL And PERSONAL

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Oliver, Roslin, announce the engagement of their eldest daughter, Shirley Marion, to Clayton Gregg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gregg, Plevna, Ontario. The marriage will take place in Holy Trinity Church at Plevna, on Saturday, October 4, 1969, at 7 p.m.

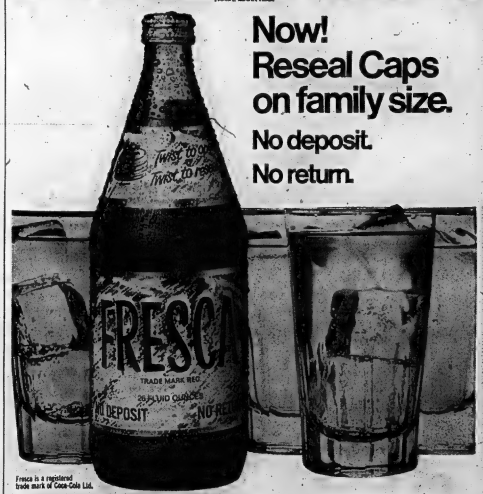
* * *

Prior to her marriage, Mrs. Dennis Dennee (nee Elizabeth Diane Marncle) was the guest of honor at two showers. One was a linen shower at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Marncle. Hostess was Sandra Marncle, cousin of the bride. Friends of the groom also honored her with a pantry shower held in Port Hope.

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

The engagement is announced of Patricia Ann Carter, daughter of Mrs. Nona Carter Belleville and the late Mr. Frederick Carter, to Mr. William Richard Hibbs son of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Hibbs of Kingston. The marriage will take place in St. George's Cathedral, Kingston, on Friday, October 10, at 9 p.m.

Can Be Dangerous



Be careful of hairsprays, the Canadian National Institute for the Blind warns. Even the smallest amount of mist from an aerosol container can damage delicate eye tissue.

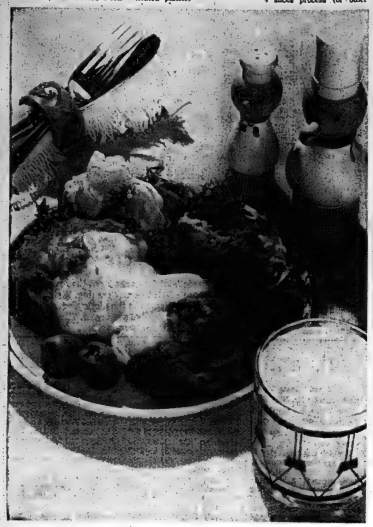
Cheese Sandwiches Ideal Luncheon Dish

By MARY MOORE

Encouraged by your enthusiasm for "Frank's Lunch Special" given here 2½ years ago I made French-toast — type sandwiches for Cheese Festival month (October).

They are ideal luncheon dishes but if you want to serve them as the meat course for dinner arrange the hot sandwiches on a big preheated platter.

HOT CHICKEN CHEESE SANDWICHES
(Makes 4 double)
8 slices white or 69 per cent whole wheat bread
Butter
4 slices process (or other soft) cheese
4 large slices tomato
Slices of chicken
1 tsp. salt — divided
¼ tsp. pepper — divided
2 eggs beaten
½ cup milk
1 or 2 tbsps. butter



Butter half of the bread slices. Cover the unbuttered slices first with cheese slices then tomato and chicken. Sprinkle with ½ tsp. of the salt and ⅛ tsp. of pepper. Cover with buttered slices and press together. In a flat dish combine egg, milk, and remaining salt and pepper. Dip the sandwiches in the egg-milk mixture, turn each one over and let stand for 5 or 10 min. until they soak up the liquid. Melt butter in large frypan and fry sandwiches over medium heat until gold, turning over when underside is done and browning other side.

Another hot sandwich special is baked openface

LUNCHEON BURGERS
4 hamburger rolls
1 tbsp. butter
½ cup chopped onion
1 lb. ground lean beef
½ tsp. salt
⅛ tsp. pepper
1½ cups (⅓lb.) shredded cheese preferably Mozzarella
One 7½-oz. can tomato sauce
1½ tsps. sugar
½ tsp. oregano

Split and toast hamburger rolls. Melt butter in a large frypan over medium heat. Add onion and cook until just tender. Add ground beef, salt and pepper and cook until lightly browned. Meanwhile combine cheese, tomato sauce, sugar and oregano. Spread beef mixture on right toasted roll halves and spoon sauce over. Bake at 450 deg. Fahr. 10 to 12 min., or until cheese has melted.

Serve immediately.

A Hearty Appetizer

Cheese is featured in two hearty and hot lunch sandwiches that Mary Moore serves up today. Both are meat stretchers and economical and good.

Dinner Menu

Grilled Shoulder Lamb Chops; Fresh Mint Sauce; Parsley Buttered Potatoes; Steaming Harvard Beets (see Tuesday); Relish Tray: Celery Hearts, Radish Roses; Poached Pears with Raspberry Syrup; Tea.

RELAXING WITH ART — Ghis Chouinard, mother of four and an employee at the Montreal Heart Institute, fills her "spare" time with art — enamelware exploding in brilliant colors of reds, greens, ambers, golds and blues. Here she shows a modern three-dimension creation mounted on wood. (CP Photo)

Secretary Is Also Recognized Artist

MONTREAL (CP) — If there's an unsung heroine behind Canada's leading heart transplant surgeon, she is probably Ghis Chouinard, 34-year-old, jade-eyed French-Canadian whose 24-hour "shift" would bring most enterprising secretaries to the verge of collapse.

She is also a mother of four and a recognized artist in her own right.

"It's only natural," she says in clipped English with a soft French accent as she refers to her working hours. "If Dr. Grondin is performing a heart transplant in the middle of the night, he calls me and of course I come to the heart institute immediately."

Dr. Pierre Grondin, chief of surgery at the Montreal Heart Institute, performed Canada's first and subsequently eight other heart transplant operations.

"On some occasions," says Mrs. Chouinard, "I've worked all through the night at the institute, preparing dossiers, making sure tests have been run, the right people contacted and an ambulance standing by—you know, all the little details."

Frequently, she just continues to work into the next day since "there's no point in breaking the routine is there?"

But the boundless energy of the suburban Pont Viau mother of four doesn't end there.

During her daily 8:30 a.m.-to-5 p.m. shift she is also secretary to Dr. Gilles Lepage of the institute, and at night she fills her role as wife, mother and artist.

She likes to think of herself as a creator—she hates imitations—as she gently handles her enamelware and jewelry, both of which reflect a keen eye for color power and flowing shapes.

Her art can be found in many places, even in Africa where Paul Emile Cardinal Leger has a three-foot-high enamel-and-wood cross she presented to him before his departure from Montreal to work in a leper colony.

Or her work may be found at the University of Montreal where her pyramid-shaped interpretation titled Reality hypnotizes the eye.

In churches sprinkled along Quebec hillsides there are traces of brilliant blues, deep reds and sunset golds that she has baked into church objects and even the more staid cathedrals have placed her modern creations within their traditional confines.

"When I leave the institute at the end of the day I go home, prepare dinner, bathe the children—Suzy is 11 years old, Lyne 9, and the twins Carl and Marc are six—and then go to my atelier where I work from about 8:30 p.m. to 1 or 2 in the morning."

In the privacy of the atelier, or studio, shared only by Jean Louis, her engineer-sculptor husband, the deft fingers and keen eye mould and shape trays, masks, plaques and intricate rings, bracelets and pendants.

"It takes many years before you know just how a color is going to turn out after it has been baked in the oven. Heat changes color you know and there are so many combinations that can be used to achieve a particular tone."

She discovered a method of working with enamel on gold while in Europe, "and I brought this back with me."

"I think I'm the only person in Canada to work with this technique."

She has also developed a technique in which she uses acid on some of her work to achieve a particular texture or coarse surface.

Born in Montreal, Mrs. Chouinard received part of her training at Beaux Arts in Quebec City, where she captured her share of honors for her work.

Last year she received a grant from the Quebec cultural affairs department which took her to France for several weeks to work.

This year she received another grant, this time from the Prasco—Quebec Youth office which again took her to France for a month. Only this time she had under her supervision 25 young Quebec artists between the ages of 20 to 30.

When the second world heart transplant symposium was held in Montreal in June, she designed the plaque eventually presented in Cape Town to Philip Blaiberg, then the longest surviving heart transplant patient, only a few weeks before his death.

The plaque was accepted on his behalf in Montreal by Dr. Marius Barnard, brother of Dr. Christiaan Barnard who performed the first human-to-human heart transplant and then operated on dentist Blaiberg Jan. 2, 1968.

She also made an additional 100 plaques—a human heart on a pale green background mounted on wood panelling—which were distributed to international representatives attending the symposium.

Her art exhibitions and displays around Montreal and at the site of Man and His World are well known and another exhibition is slated for November "although I haven't decided upon the exact location yet."

While she has not "gone commercial," many famous people have come to the Chouinard home to purchase some of the art works.

Asked which of her three roles she considers most important—that of mother, secretary or artist—she replied simply:

"All three—I need all three to live, to fill up my life."

Princess Margaret Takes On Stirling Oriental Look

LONDON (AP) — Princess Margaret took on an Oriental look for the good of Britain's export drive.

The princess, who leaves Friday to open a British week in Tokyo, posed for photographer-husband Lord Snowdon with a new Madame Butterfly hair-style and a hint of upswept eyebrows over slightly slanting eyes.

The pictures, in color and black and white, were plastered through the pages of the British press today.

Her lacy white dress, with puffed collar and see-through sleeves, was caught at the waist and wrists with matching black velvet ribbons. It wasn't particularly Oriental, but the hair-do was.

Along with the Japanese style portrait, the newspapers published another Snowdon picture showing the princess wearing an artificial pony-tail hairpiece topped by the diamond tiara she wore at her wedding nine years ago.

"The profile and pose recall her great ancestor, Queen Victoria," The Express suggested. "It is strongly reminiscent of the side-view of Queen Victoria which dignified British coins and postage stamps in the 19th century."

Two other shots show the princess in a sari-like printed gown with outsize gold filigree earrings and posed on a palm-studded beach during their recent Barbados vacation.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Molly: "Jane is always taking my clothes and wearing them. She gets them all dirty."

Mother: "It gives you both more changes if you can wear each other's dresses. All sisters who are about the same size do it."

Even members of the same family should not feel free to help themselves to each other's personal possessions without asking permission.

Jane: "I like to trade clothes with Molly, but she is unhappy when you do. You must always ask her before you borrow any of her clothes. It's the considerate thing to do."

Dear Hilda

"Thank you for coming to address our Council... your talk was most informative and interesting. We enjoyed it thoroughly.
Christian Business and Professional Women, Hamilton

I, too, enjoyed meeting this group and also its sister organization earlier this summer. In fact, last night I was in Hamilton again, this time speaking to a group of career girls in the National Secretaries Association. They shop too. Thanks to all of you for your wonderful hospitality.

Just a tip when you write me:

- please mention the location of the Loblaw store in which you shop.
- please make sure your name and address are on your letter. You don't need to worry—I won't use your name in print unless you give me permission. But I do want to know where to mail my answer.

And one more tip: If your local service organization is planning an event that needs publicizing, why not make a little sign or notice and give it to the Manager for our window or bulletin board? You'll find us very cooperative.

Hilda Wilson
Director of Consumer Relations for Loblaws

If you have a shopping problem, a suggestion or a complaint, Hilda wants to hear from you. Write to her at Loblaw Groceterias Co., Limited, 290 Front St., Belleville.

Inability to Communicate Is A Painful Handicap in Later Years

By DORIS CLARK

Shy parents are apt to raise shy youngsters. And so the vicious circle continues! The inability to communicate is a painful handicap all through school years, later on at work, and in every social lifetime.

4900
TEEN
10-16

If you or your young people are self-conscious and want to do something about it, remember this: Shyness is very common. Maybe you think your friends are self-possessed, but even those who appear most confident are uncertain of themselves at times.

Isn't it possible that some of those clammed-up people in your acquaintance — especially the boys — will prove interesting on further acquaintance?

Can you stop thinking about yourself long enough to find out a little about what makes the person you are with tick? Talk about anything, so long as you concentrate on the "you" interest, and eliminate "I" from your conversation as much as possible.

Dear Doris: My daughter of 18 received for graduation a black opal ring from a boy she was going around with early in the year. She has broken off with him now. She got engaged in July to a different boy. Should she keep this rather expensive gift, or should she return it?

She told the former boy friend when he gave her the ring, about the guy she is going with, but he doesn't fo know that she is now engag — Faithful Reader

Dear Faithful: An expensive ring like that shows a fel low's serious interest in her and should go back.

She could do this, tactfully, by parcelling up the ring and sending it to him with a letter. The message would express appreciation for his generosity and thoughtfulness, and explain that she does not feel she can accept such a valuable gift, since she is now engaged to another boy.

The letter closes with the hope that he will understand this, that she'll appreciated his friendship and hopes they will always be friends.

Dear Doris: I have been corresponding with a pen pal for two months. Up until this fourth letter, there was nothing to make me think that this lady was not a sincere person.

She wrote that her grandson was visiting with her and that she was so busy she had hardly any time to answer letters. But in another part of her letter she claimed that she gets very lonesome.

Do you think she is trying to let me know that she loves me, but wants me to declare my love first? I get lonesome myself here amongst 80 people, when I have no real friends that I can confide in. A seniors' residence is not like your own home. — Lonely Too

Dear Lonely: Don't jump the gun! You ought to be the first one to understand that a woman can long for a friendly contemporary even while she devotes her working hours to the interests of a teen-ager.

But you don't develop a lasting love out of four letters. She's a pen pal. What she friendship, and that's all. Personal acquaintance simply has to develop before feelings can be trusted to deepen.

Ann Landers

'Friendly Chauffeur' Fears Involvement

DEAR ANN LANDERS: While waiting for a bus on a morning in November, 1967 an attractive man asked me if I wanted a ride. I said yes, because it a was raining very hard and I was late for work. He turned out to be a respectable family man and I was grateful for the lift.

ANN LANDERS

Since that time he has picked me up on the same corner almost every morning. I figure he has saved me over $100 in bus fare.

Yesterday I was just about to get in his car when he handed me a note slammed the door shut and left me standing there, literally dumb-founded. The note read: "Dear Passenger: I have enjoyed your conversation for a long time. I am afraid, however, that the animal in me is beginning to grow upon the man. Lest I find myself weakening in the manner of others who have hit the foolish forties, I respectfully suggest that you get back on the bus." It was signed, "Your friendly chauffeur."

I was flabbergasted and still am. Do you think he was trying to tell me something? If so what was his message? — DONNABELLE.

* * *

DEAR D.: I don't think we need to page Marshall Lunan for this one. The message was — "You're beginning to look good to me, Kid, and I don't want to get involved, so please avail yourself of public transportation."

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I married a man who comes from a closely knit family. By that I mean they tell each other everything. At first I thought the family closeness was beautiful, but now I see it is a neurotic dependence and largely infantile. My husband is the worst of the bunch.

Two weeks ago we were told the tragic news that my father-in-law has a terminal illness. My mother-in-law has already made it clear that she cannot live alone. Her oldest son's wife does not get along with her so she is safe. My other sister-in-law has a three-bedroom home and four children, so she is also safe. My husband and I have an extra bedroom.

Twice I have heard my husband say to his mother, "Don't worry, mamma, you won't have to live alone." If this means what I think it means it is the end of our marriage. I love my husband and we have two darling children but I could never tolerate his mother under this roof. Any suggestions? — TROUBLE BREWING.

* * *

DEAR T.B.: Your mother-in-law needs kindness and emotional support. It is your husband's responsibility to help her through this difficult period in her life. His professional responsibility, however, is to his wife and children. Remind him that it is unfair to make promises that he will be unable to live up to later. And I urge you to be specific so there is no misunderstanding.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: If a man is divorced and remarried, is it in good taste for his ex-wife to come to his father's funeral, sit in the front row, cry louder than anybody, go to the cemetery, stand at the graveside with the family, then show up at her ex-sister-in-law's house and drink coffee and eat cake? Or should she go to the funeral parlor very early or very late to avoid the crowd and stay in the background, out of the limelight? — V.G.

DEAR V.G.: It depends on whether or not she wants an audience.

Worst Ship Fire in Great Lakes History

Cruise Aboard Noronic Became Funeral Inferno for 119

TORONTO (CP) — The slgry red glow in the darkness of a C-deck linen closet became a sheet of flame when the door opened.

The first flickers swiftly became tongues of searing fire as an immature youth sought to handle the situation himself. The delay of 10 minutes in reporting was fatal.

Twenty years ago today fire destroyed the proud cruise ship Noronic, snugly moored to Pier 8, the Queen's Quay, in the seeming safety of Toronto harbor. One hundred and nineteen men, women and children died in the worst ship fire on the Great Lakes in a century.

In newspaper headlines it was a story of death, of horror never before experienced in a Canadian city, of swiftly changing casualty figures. In the laboratory it was a story of quiet, patient persistence, an engrossing study of what fire can do to the human body.

The 6,900-ton Noronic, 36-year veteran, of the lakes, $5,000,000 pride of the Canada Steamship Lines cruise fleet, put into Toronto at 7 p.m. EDT Friday, Sept. 16, 1949.

Aboard were 524 passengers bound for the Thousand Islands from Detroit and Cleveland on the last trip of the season. There were parents with families, young men and young women. Some were on a clandestine outing and that led to difficulties in identification later.

A 12-mile-an-hour breeze that was to become a wind of death in the fierce spread of the fire cooled the partying couples on A deck and those in the cabins below.

The master, Capt. William Taylor of Sarnia, Ont., went ashore. So did most of the 171-man crew.

Two decks below, in a locked closet, a small fire smouldered among the linens. How it started was never determined —perhaps a discarded cigarette butt, for a subsequent inquiry disclosed no evidence of spontaneous combustion.

But about 3:15 a.m., the parties over, Capt. Taylor back aboard and in bed and most of the passengers asleep, J. D. Church of Akron, Ohio, noticed a puzzling haze in the corridor. He met a bellboy, a 18-year-old Montrealer, who cautiously opened the closet door.

At that moment, the youth was the most important person on the ship.

Instead of sounding the alarm, he and Church tried to douse the flames coming out of the closet with a fire extinguisher. Then they ran to a hose on a wall. It produced no water.

The alarm was not sounded until 3:38 a.m. By then it was too late. Flames were racing along C-deck corridor walls and finding their way through cabin doorway transoms. Literally within minutes, the Noronic was engulfed in fire except for the bow and stern where hysterical passengers, some with hair and clothing afire, grouped in scream for help.

Safety was only inches away but many did not make it. Some escaped by leaping to the pier, by swarming down guy ropes or by jumping into the slip on the port side of the ship.

The first excited official casualty figures issued by police and fire department authorities placed the death toll as high as 250. Incomplete passenger lists hindered the check and it was days before a Canadian Press compilation, based on a revised CSL passenger list and a check of independent sources, placed the toll at 119. All but one were Americans.

None of the crew was injured. Criticism was voiced later that some got off the ship fully clothed and carrying their luggage.

A commission of inquiry was critical of the steamship line for poor crew training and insufficient safety precautions. Capt. Taylor was censured and his license suspended for a year. He was criticized for fighting the fire below decks "like an ordinary seaman" and for lack of leadership. He died in Sarnia in 1962.

Afterwards began the long, slow process of identification of the charred remains. At least 10 x-ray pictures were taken of every body. A box containing 41 pieces of skin representing 18 fingers was sent to Washington for fingerprint identification. Dental and medical records in many cities were consulted.

Low-Income Families Won't Get Subsidies

TORONTO (CP) — High rents and federal fiscal policies have caused the provincial government to drop plans to subsidize low-income families to allow them to live in high-rise apartments in Metropolitan Toronto, says Trade Minister Stanley Randall.

The government had decided instead to concentrate on building more public housing units, Mr. Randall, provincial minister in charge of housing, said Tuesday.

"No landlords have offered us a deal on prices," Mr. Randall told an interviewer. "If we were to rent existing apartments at the going prices, we would be a party to keeping the existing rent structure high."

He said when he first proposed the scheme there were 10,000 vacant apartments in this area. Now the number of apartments available had declined because of the federal government's tight money policy.

"Disarm is removing money from the market," said Mr. Randall. "They say they are fighting inflation, but interest rates are going away up. . . . We will be looking at 12-per-cent mortgages by the end of the year."

Student Hopes To Whip Campus Housing Shortage

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — David Hoover is one University of Michigan student who is not worried about the campus housing shortage.

He is planning to camp out in the woods near Ann Arbor all winter.

The 18-year-old freshman told university housing officials he finds "more security in the woods than in an apartment," adding, "I really like to live with the weather."

Hoover, a lean 5-foot-10, has four tents with an overbeed tarpaulin connecting them. The tents are clustered around a fire pit. He may experiment with various types of mechanical heaters when the winter snows arrive.

The youth, who wants to do professional conservation work, rides a bicycle round trip each day between his campsite and the central campus—a 20-mile jaunt.

Mishaps Nearly Destroy 'Fatality-Free' Platoon

LAI KHE, South Vietnam (AP) — A veteran United States Army reconnaissance platoon that hadn't suffered a combat fatality this year has been virtually wiped out by accidents that left 13 dead.

The latest mishap—an accidental discharge of plastic explosives that killed eight soldiers—left only three survivors in the platoon and one of these was a recent replacement.

Field reports at the U.S. 1st Infantry Division gave this chronology of the platoon's misfortunes:

Two months ago, three men drowned when they were swept away by the current while crossing a river.

Four days ago, the platoon was on a mission a mile from the Landing Zone Geia when a 155-millimetre artillery shell, apparently fired by a U.S. battery, burst in its midst. Two soldiers were killed and four wounded. Most of the others suffered some ear damage and returned to Geia, about 25 miles northwest of Saigon.

Two days ago, a sergeant and seven others were rigging explosive devices, including a 40-pound plastic charge, around the landing zone's perimeter.

As a blasting cap was being set, the charge accidentally exploded, killing six of the men instantly. The other two died Tuesday in hospital.

The two latest accidents are under investigation.

The platoon has received replacements in recent days and three were among those killed in the plastic charge blast.

The division sources said the platoon, ambushing Viet Cong units and calling in artillery on Viet Cong patrols, had been credited with killing 130 Viet Cong since January. During June and July, they said, it was credited with killing more Viet Cong soldiers than any company in the division.

'Bonnie' Could Become Floating Fishing Factory

HALIFAX (CP) — Donald Halliburton, a Halifax insurance executive, says the aircraft carrier Bonaventure could become a factory ship for the fishing industry when the vessel is retired.

He said Tuesday that other countries such as Russia and Norway have introduced factory ships and Canada will eventually have to move in that direction.

As fishing grounds off the coast became depleted, Canadian fishermen would have to seek out the fish.

There was sufficient space below the Bonaventure's decks to set up a fish processing plant. The only question is to determine if it is economically feasible to convert the ship, Mr. Halliburton said.

Mayor Tom Campbell of Vancouver last week offered to buy the carrier from the defence department for $1. He said it would make a floating hotel on the West Coast.

Cadillac presents the Spirit of the Seventies!

The elegantly spirited 1970 Cadillac

The brilliant new 1970 Cadillac is styled to reflect both the quality and the mood of life in the spirited seventies. Its striking new beauty suggests the tempo of people on the move. Richly tailored appointments and refinements welcome you to a new era of Cadillac taste and elegance. Sparkling performance invites you to experience an entirely new dimension of motoring pleasure. All told, it sets new standards of excellence for a great decade. In all eleven Cadillac models for 1970, you'll discover new ideas attuned to the spirited seventies. You may, for example, choose a new radio system that will seek out your favorite AM, FM or stereo-only station. The aerial is neatly concealed in the windshield, out of sight and out of the way. This year, Cadillac engineers have again made sure that the Cadillac ride continues to be the smoothest, the quietest, the most enjoyable in motoring history. Cadillac . . . Standard of the World.

The newly spirited 8.2 litre Eldorado

The Spirit of the Seventies is nowhere more evident than in the handsome 1970 Eldorado. Behind its smartly recessed grille is a great new V-8 engine with a displacement of 8.2 litres (500 cubic inches), the largest V-8 ever offered in a production passenger car. Created specifically and exclusively for the front-wheel-drive Eldorado, this new power plant harbors an ample reserve to operate the power assists one usually associates with a luxury car, while yielding a new kind of performance that will set the pace for personal cars for many years to come. The instant you feel the new 8.2 litre V-8 in action, you'll know that the Fleetwood Eldorado is, more than ever, the world's finest personal car. The moment you drive it, you'll know that Cadillac has left the sixties far behind!

See the spirited new 1970 Cadillacs at your authorized dealer's—they herald a decade of motoring excitement!

MONTREAL — Funny, the sugar-plum notions that pass through one's head while watching a baseball team like the Montreal Expos.

Maybe it's because watching them is like some sort of bad dream in itself or perhaps it's just the thin air up there in the sudsy foothills of the Jarry Park light banks.

Anyhow, while the tri-colored tramps of the National League were busying themselves losing 5-4 in Los Cubs, thoughts of Saturday's big walkathon back in Canada kept interrupting the Gene Mauch Follies.

It could have started with either of two items in the press crib sheet dispersed by Expo public relations.

Item 1: "Canada's longest surviving heart transplant recipient — John Parkinson of Montreal — is in attendance at today's . . ."

Walkathon, walkathon, walkathon.

Item 2: "The Expos have now won four straight — their longest winning streak ever . . ."

This was the clincher — if these people could find something amusing about shaking millions of dollars into a baseball team that was 42 games and an Act of God away from the National League Pennant surely I couldn't complain about making a fool of myself in a walkathon?

There is, admittedly, some fiscal difference between my marathon and the Expo Agonies — they can afford to be funny at thirty grand a year — but in the long run, I reasoned, you'd get more for your entertainment dollar by watching me hobble 30 miles than by buying an Expo ticket.

That being the case, it would seem only proper that walkathon pledges be forwarded to this corner forthwith, not less than $5.50 — price of a Jarry Park box seat.

Just to keep our figures on a nice round basis, I am in the market for any per-mile pledges of 70 cents and up.

Fifty pence - per will entitle the pledges to four whistled bars of Bach's Funeral Fugue in D Major (sorry, no minors allowed).

A buck a mile brings the donor an authentic interpretation of the Seminole Rain Dance, as performed by Rudolph Nureyev in Annie Get Your Gun.

For $2 for every 5,280 feet covered, I will personally mow the contributor's lawn for the months of December and January.

Pledges of $7 and more per mile? Cash in advance please, in front of the train station Saturday morning.

This opportunity is also taken to extend a challenge to the librarian at King George School, the Golden Greek, and the entire Hastings - Prince Edward Regiment to match my time in covering the distance between the finish line and Chez Johnny.

Hopefully, everyone will overcome the slings and arrows of outrageous asphalt Saturday to put a dent in the estimated $190,000 price tag of a community arena.

With each blister, walkers share the satisfaction that they might be giving 1,200 young hockey players in the city more than a minimal amount of ice time.

It's difficult to squeeze 1,200 kids into 30 hours a week, just as it is impossible to develop sound junior or senior hockey clubs on an hour or two of weekly practice.

Dedication is one thing, but playing hockey at 6 a.m. or 11 p.m. is something else.

Ironically, the ice in the Memorial Arena was to have gone in this walkathon week, but the well - weathered brine pipes sprung leaks like a high - quality sieve, and required the emergency services of the Toronto manufacturer's trouble - shooter.

What more eloquent spokesman than the old Market St.-Forum herself to remind us that Belleville's winter recreational eggs can't be put in one basket forever.

Rookie Tops Camp Scoring

Would Leafs Trim Hottest Shooter?

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

One of the hottest shooters around the Toronto Maple Leafs training camp is an unheralded rookie from Montreal with a yen for mod hair styles.

Jean Fauteu says management keeps telling him he has a chance to catch on with the National Hockey League club's farm team at Tulsa in the Central League "if I get a haircut."

Since arriving at the Peterborough camp, the 20-year-old has trimmed himself three times, but apparently not to the satisfaction of Leafs management which this year agreed too let players wear sideburns.

Fauteu, who had a goal and two assists Tuesday and is top scorer at the camp, tallied 45 goals and 52 assists in the Quebec Junior A League last season.

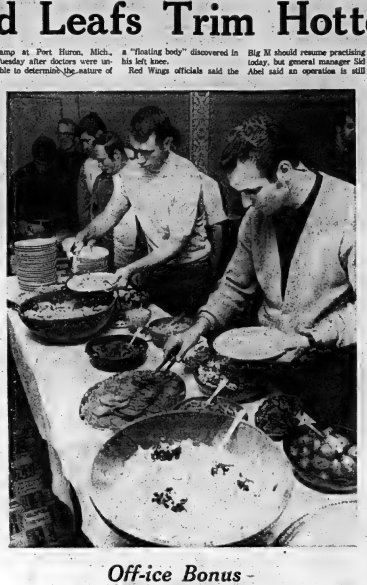
Fauteu said Tuesday he'd probably see a barber. But he plans on leaving the team this weekend to return to Montreal to complete his studies for a BA degree at Brebeuf College.

Other NHL camps were preparing for the start this week of exhibition games beginning with the Toronto-St. Louis Blues encounter at Ottawa Thursday.

Montreal Canadiens reported the signing of Marc Tardif, high-scoring left-winger with Montreal Junior Canadiens of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series, last year's Canadian junior champions.

Rod Gilbert came to terms with New York, bringing to eight the number of players Rangers have signed for the 1969-70 season.

Los Angeles Kings, however, are experiencing contract troubles with Eddie Shack. The 12-year veteran, picked up from Boston Bruins during the off season, reported late to camp and, according to Larry Regan, the Kings' general manager, they're far apart in negotiations.



Shack continues to practice with Los Angeles although he is listed officially as a holdout.

Left winger Frank Mahovlich returned to Detroit Red Wings camp at Port Huron, Mich., Tuesday after doctors were unable to determine the nature of a "floating body" discovered in his left knee.

Red Wings officials said the Big M should resume practising today, but general manager Sid Abel said an operation is still possible.

Ken Hodge was lost to the Bruins Tuesday for at least six weeks after he underwent an emergency appendectomy. A 45-goal scorer with Boston last year, Hodge was a member of the Bruins' HEM line that scored a record 203 points last season. Other members of the line were Phil Esposito, the NHL scoring champion, and veteran Ron Murphy.

Chicago's Ken Wharram was taken to hospital Tuesday with peritonitis after the Black Hawks' morning drill. Physicians said he suffered from an infection in a sac under the heart. Wharram earlier was treated for a foot infection which has been slow in healing.

Pulford Key To Leafs' Luck

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — Stafford Smythe thinks Bob Pulford is the key to the fortunes of Toronto Maple Leafs in the 1969-70 National Hockey League season.

Smythe, Leafs' former president and now on the club's executive committee, took a look at the Leafs' training camp Tuesday and said:

"If Pulford fits into the line of (Norm) Ullman and (Paul) Henderson, we'll be back where we once were."

Smythe said that if Pulford fits in on wing then the Leafs will have "three big lines."

He said that John Bower is still Toronto's best goalie, despite the presence of Marv Edwards and Bruce Gamble.

Smythe said the Maple Leafs' young defence poses a problem and suggested that the club may have to pay Tim Horton "what he wants" to come out of retirement.

Ducks Better Duck

TORONTO (CP) — The opening date for duck and waterfowl hunting is Sept. 27 in central areas of Ontario, the department of lands and forests announced Tuesday.

The department said in a statement the waterfowl season will not begin in southern areas of Ontario until Oct. 4.

The open season on waterfowl began Monday in areas of the province north of Highway 17, but was being delayed south of this line because local black duck populations have been over-hunted.

Yesterday's Stars

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Batting—Harmon Killebrew, Twins, slammed a three-run homer, his 44th of the season, and raised his major league-leading RBI total to 134 in powering Minnesota past Oakland Athletics 11-3.

Pitching—Juan Marichal, Giants, pitched a four-hitter for his 19th victory, beating Atlanta Braves 2-0 and moving San Francisco into first place in the National League's West Division.

Rebel Referees Claim Campbell Figures Wrong

TORONTO (CP) — Twenty National Hockey League referees and linesmen who walked out of their training camp in Brantford Monday night have set up their own base here.

The dissenters, all members of the National Hockey League Officials Association, said Tuesday they will not handle any games until the NHL recognizes their association.

"We're paying our own way here too," one official said. "We lost our per diem when we left Brantford. We wouldn't be here if Campbell's figures about salaries were correct."

Earlier NHL president Clarence Campbell said referees earn $11,000 to $25,000 a season plus fringe benefits.

"There were linesmen who worked in the NHL last year who received a basic salary of $5,000," another official said. "One referee who worked in the NHL got a basic salary of about $6,000 and he has been around for six years or so."

The officials refused to let their names be publicized, saying one restriction placed on them by the league is that they refrain from discussing their jobs or league policy.

The NHL has five holdovers from last year's officiating staff who did not leave the camp in Brantford. They are referees John Ashley and Art Skov and linesmen Neil Armstrong, Matt Pavelich and Claude Bechard.

NHL teams begin their pre-season schedule tonight with Toronto Maple Leafs playing an intra-squad game in Peterborough. The Leafs play St. Louis Blues in Ottawa Thursday.

Scotty Morrison, referee-in-chief, said in Brantford Monday he has enough officials—19—in camp to supervise exhibition games.

Everybody Picked Red Grange

NEW YORK (AP) — Harold (Red) Grange is the only unanimous choice on the modern all-time college football team named today by the Football Writers of America.

Grange ran to college football immortality from 1923 through 1925 as Illinois Galloping Ghost.

Just one vote shy of unanimous selection was Brumbaer (Bronko) Nagurski who starred at tackle for Minnesota from 1927-29.

Registers 8th Shutout

Marichal Kicks Giants to First

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

High-kicking Juan Marichal continued his mastery at Candlestick Park Tuesday night, blanking the visiting Atlanta Braves to four hits and leading San Francisco to a 2-0 win and into first place in the National League's West Division.

The victory brought the right-hander's record to 19-10 on the season, but he's virtually unbeatable at home with 13 victories and one defeat. The shutout was his eighth of the year, tops in the National League.

Elsewhere Tuesday, Chicago Cubs tripped Montreal Expos 5-4, San Diego Padres drubbed Houston Astros 8-1, Pittsburgh Pirates downed Philadelphia Phillies 9-5 and Los Angeles Dodgers swept a doubleheader from Cincinnati Reds, winning the opener 3-2 and taking the nightcap 3-2 in 13 innings. New York Mets' game at St. Louis was postponed by rain.

Willie Mays drilled three hits and doubled home one of the two San Francisco runs.

The other came on consecutive second inning singles by Ken Henderson, Jack Hiatt and Hal Lanier.

It was the eighth consecutive complete game for Marichal and his 25th route-going effort in the last 33 starts.

LA's sweep moved the Dodgers into second place, one-half game behind the Giants and one percentage point ahead of the Braves.

Wes Parker drove in all three Dodger runs in the nightcap victory. The Dodgers rallied for two runs in the ninth inning to take the opener, the second on Johnny Bench's throwing error as the Cincinnati catcher attempted an inning-ending double play.

San Diego dealt a jolt to Houston's pennant hopes, tagging the Astros with their sixth consecutive loss. The loss left the fifth place Astros six games behind the Giants.

Chicago used home runs by rookie Oscar Gamble and veteran Billy Williams to beat Montreal. The victory combined with the Mets' rainout at St. Louis, moved the Cubs back to within four games of New York. The Mets' magic number remained at 11.

Pittsburgh used a 13-hit attack including homers by Jose Pagan and Al Oliver to whip Philadelphia.

McNally's Timely Single Boon to .071 Average

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Dave McNally's run-scoring single in the sixth inning Tuesday night gave Baltimore Orioles a 1-0 victory over Washington Senators and gave the big left-hander his 19th American League victory of the season.

McNally had just six hits and a .071 batting average entering the game and the win was his second in a row, the first time he's been able to put two consecutive victories together since his two-season, 17-game tear beaten string was snapped Aug. 3.

Meanwhile Harmon Killebrew continued to set his sights on the AL's home run title when he smashed his 44th of the season—a three-run blast—in leading Minnesota's Twins 11-3 past Oakland Athletics.

The Twins victory stretched their lead over Oakland to 10 games in the AL West Division and Killebrew's homer moved him to within two of the junior circuit's co-leaders—Oakland's Reggie Jackson and Frank Howard of Washington.

In other games, Cleveland Indians whipped Boston Red Sox 5-2, Kansas City Royals nipped Seattle Pilots 2-1, New York Yankees topped Detroit Tigers 7-6 in 13 innings and Chicago White Sox won a doubleheader from California Angels, 7-4 and 3-2.

McNally, who won his first 15 games this season, needed Ed Watt to get the last Senator out.

Killebrew, who was 6-for-8 with four homers and 12 RBI in the three games with the Athletics before his sixth inning strikeout, lofted his homer into the left field pavilion in the first inning.

It also raised his major league-leading RBI total to 134.

The Twins put thegame out of reach with six runs in the fifth, when Rod Carew drove in two runs with a triple, Cesar Tovar two with a single and winner Jim Perry, 19-8, and Leo Cardenas one each with singles.

Wally Bunker checked Seattle for four hits and drove in the winning run with a double in the eighth.

Ken Harrelson's three - run homer, his 20th, in the eighth snapped a 2-2 tie and gave Cleveland its victory over the Red Sox. Jose Cardenal, No. 18, also homered for the Indians, while Rico Petrocelli hit his 30th for Boston.

Bobby Cox sacrifice fly in the 13th inning produced the Yankees' winning run. The Tigers had tied it with three runs in the ninth, including two on Jim Northrup's homer.

Catcher Duane Josephson, in the starting lineup for the first time since June 21, hit the first pitch tossed to him and also scored a pair of runs in leading the White Sox to victory in the nightcap. Rookie right-hander Bart Johnson earned his first major league triumph in the opener.

Our Equestrian Gold Medal Story Began with Racing Reject

TORONTO (CP) — Jumping a narrow water ditch may not be much of a feat for a tall, rangy thoroughbred, but that was the test that eventually led Big D to a gold medal in the 1968 Mexico Olympics.

It all started six years ago at the race track in Fort Erie, Ont., when Gordon Gayford took a look at the mare, then a four-year-old reject from the racing circuit.

"I led her out of the stable to a ditch and she jumped it," Gayford said in an interview in Gayland Stable's tack room at the Canadian National Exhibition.

He said he picked Big D because she jumped the ditch and because of her "kindly eye," her strength and her good eyesight.

"I put a rail down and she just looked down at it and walked over," he said. "Some horses with bad eyesight would kick it."

Gayford bought Big D for $400 that day. He has since turned down offers of $18,000.

"Dad has a fantastic eye for assessing a horse," son Tom Gayford added.

He said he once doubted his father's assessment that Big D would become international class because she took so long to catch on, but now admits he was wrong.

Turning a race track reject into an Olympic gold medal winner is a long process often taking up to four years, he said.

It begins with letting a horse jump riderless until it gets the feel of the jumps. Next the horse is entered in hunter events and later in minor jumping competitions to acquaint it with crowds and their noises.

"Like an athlete, a horse could flunk out at any stage," Tom Gayford said.

"About one in four or five makes the grade."

"A kindly eye," is very important, the younger Gayford added, because a bad-tempered horse will fight a rider in the ring.

"Obedience is very important. You have to be able to control a horse to guide him over the jump.

"Obedience is more important to me than dad. He likes to let a horse run freer."

Because of a rider's style, no two riders can handle the same horse equally well.

"Dad had a horse he won everything with and I couldn't do anything with because our styles are different.

"A horse and rider must mesh. You have to be able to give the horse confidence, and then believe he can jump."

The Gayfords now have two good prospects for the 1972 Olympics in Munich, Germany: Phantom, a four-year-old mare, and Dressy Joe, a five-year-old gelding.

"Dressy Joe looks particularly promising," Tom Gayford said, "because he is progressing so rapidly."

With five or six years of competitive jumping left, will Big D be jumping for a gold medal in Munich?

"We hope so," Tom Gayford said, as his father nodded knowingly.

Thanksgiving Cheap For Accurate Ones

A Thanksgiving Dinner is yours for the taking if you can hold your own in this Sunday's Turkey Shoot staged by the Belleville and District Fish and Game Club.

Beginning at 10 a.m. on the Third Concession of Sidney (directional signs will be placed at the Highway 401 - Wallbridge Road junction) the shoot will offer 10 - pound turkeys to the sportsmen most adept with open-sighted .22 rifles, or 12-gauge shotguns.

Entrants will be charged three shots for 25 the .22 events, and $1 a try with the shotguns.

Chances to win a turkey are not restricted to those skilful with firearms.

Horshoe pitchers will also vie for gobblers during the day-long program running from 10 a.m. Sunday to 4 p.m.

In the event of rain, the Turkey Shoot will be postponed a week to Sunday, Oct. 5.

SACO Rehearsal Proves Success

Belleville's SACO bantams hope the real thing has the same results as the substitute.

The Eastern Ontario Bantam A softball champions beat Marmora B Bantams 5-4 in a Tuesday night exhibition game at the Alemite.

John Sprackett and Ken Johnson combined to pitch the nine - hit win for SACO, getting best backup support from Gerry Muscleo's three singles. The game was a warmup for SACO, who play North Bendale in a 4 p.m. Alemite game Saturday in the second - game of a best-of-three Ontario semi - final game. North Bendale won last Saturday's opener.

Ron Andrews, Don Campbell and G. Doyle pitched for Marmora, who are advancing into the all - Ontario bantam B playoff finals.

Andrews led his mates at the plate with a pair of singles and a double.

City Game Club Hears Duck Talk

Everybody's talking about ducks these days, with the Sept. 27 duck-hunting opening fast-approaching.

Members of the Belleville and District Fish and Game Club joined the crowd last night, as some 220 attended the monthly meeting.

Tweed Lads and Forests officer Bill Bittle and RCMP officer G. Vandergraaf from Toronto illustrated their talks on migratory birds with films.

Bob Blaind offered a change-of-pace film on African big-game hunting.

Winner of the club's major prize for the month was Sam Gibson, of 8 Ritchie Ave., in the city.

'Pops' Avid Racer On Go-Kart Circuit

GALT, Ont. (CP) — When Frederick (Pops) Sebatine begins to feel the weariness of his 70 years, he injects himself with an imaginary shot of high-power racing fuel and adrenalin starts to flow.

And after a few laps, Pops sets his shoulders, tightens his grip on the wheel and leadfoots his hurtling Go-Kart into the thick of a new battle.

"Sure, you feel leggy and soggy at my age, but take a couple of laps and your blood starts running again," says Sebatine.

There's a bit more to Go-Kart racing than meets the eye of the casual observer. The racers are capable of developing as much as 30 horsepower and can reach speeds of 145 miles an hour on long stretches, although the average racing speed is usually about 90.

But there's more to the sport than the mere thrill of whizzing four inches above the track for the Go-Karting septuagenarian from Galt.

Satisfaction means placing in the top three positions. This winner's complex gave Sebatine six consecutive victories recently in races all over Ontario and as far afield as Batavia, N.Y.

Billy Casper Says:
Golf's Winner of the Year
WIDENED STANCE PRODUCES HEIGHT

One certain way to produce height on a shot is to widen the stance, no matter what club you are using.

Position the ball as you normally would; then move your right foot farther away from the target, as illustrated. The wider stance shortens the swing arc and also enables you to swing so that the clubhead reaches the bottom of its arc sooner. This will automatically increase the height of the shot.

If you want extra height, position your hands slightly behind the ball at address. This increases the effective loft of the clubface.

Frid Peewees Get Close

H. G. Frid is a game away from the city's minor baseball peewee championship after downing Mel Barrage 10-3 last night in the first game of a best-of-three final playoff.

J. Minnee and G. Cumingham struck out eight and walked two in throwing a combined four-hitter for the win.

Terry Ray's homer and pair of singles, and R. Lapp's double accounted for all the Barrage hitting.

Meanwhile Mark Coates' homer and single, B. Sullivan's two-bagger and single, D. Holland's brace of safeties, and P. Kruger's single were all the Frid hits off losing pitchers K. Kerik and B. Balyx, who fanned three and walked eight between them.

Booster Walks

A Belleville Mo-Hawk Booster Club member realizes a new arena will benefit all hockey in the city.

Edna Miller, 57, prominent in booster work for the city's senior hockey team, has already obtained pledges worth $5.50 a mile for Saturday's round-the-bay hike to help raise funds for the Quinte Community Recreation Centre.

Tweed Skaters to Benefit From McCutcheon Experience

TWEED — Jane and Peggy McCutcheon, well - known figure skaters from Belleville have been contracted by the Tweed Kiwanis Club to teach skating this season in Tweed. The highly talented pair performed as one of the star attractions with the "Holiday On Ice" for the past four years. Before joining this ice revue they earned their double gold medals (Canadian and American) in figures, dances and free skating.

Entering their fifth season since its establishment in 1965, the Tweed skating club executives consulted Jane and Peggy and asked them to work out a skating program which promises to be most rewarding for everyone. Skating time will be Thursdays from 6.30 p.m. and Saturdays from 2.30 p.m.

The Thursday session will begin with fundamentals of skating for all, followed by a practice class for National Skating Tests and free skating. The last class will be devoted to dances. Skaters may attend any of the classes or all of these classes.

Following the dance class, Peggy and Jane will introduce classes of power skating for boys who wish to improve their skating abilities in hockey. Hockey players wishing to join the Thursday sessions must also register with the skating club.

Saturday will begin with a special class from 2.30 to 3.30 for those skaters practising figures on patches.

Preference to buy a patch will be given to those skaters working on figure tests. The following hours will be divided into classes similar to those on Thursdays.

Tots, any beginners or advanced skaters may arrange for private lessons in any aspect of skating.

Information regarding the procedures and fee for such lessons may be obtained at the time of registration, Sept. 20 from 2 to 4 p.m. at the Municipal Building on Spring Street. The fee will be as last year.

Boys attending power skating classes may register for a fee of 50c at the same time. Gate fees will be 50c for figure skaters, 25c for power skaters.

Family rates may be arranged on request. Additional registration will be accepted by Mrs. Audrey Jones, (Esso Service Station, Tweed) on Victoria Street.

Legion Girls Crown Queens

The Legion girls of the Belleville and District Ladies' Softball Association have no respect for winning streaks — except their own.

Last night, the Branch 99 girls got a 1-0 lead in the best-of-seven league championship playoff series with a 6-4 win over Dairy Queen.

The Dairy Queens had won their semi-final set in three straight games over Dixie Lee while the Legion lasses performed the same feat in tripping Black Diamond.

Winning pitcher Sandra Claus struck out 11 for the Legion last night, and scored two runs in her own cause.

Sharon Lammin, Nancy McCracken accounted for the other Legion runs.

Sandra Brouwers struck out seven in absorbing the loss on the Dairy Queen slab.

Sharon Hannah, Joyce Seniuk, Donna Rolland, and Doria Lockwood scored for the losers.

Second game in the best-of-seven set is scheduled for the Belleville Downers' Field at 6 p.m. Thursday.

Deb's New Show Just Old Comedy

NEW YORK (AP) — There is nothing dreadfully wrong with NBC's new Debbie Reynolds Show except that we have seen it all before—even the comedy reins were held tightly by an expert.

Miss Reynolds, sad to report, has chosen to make her television debut in a series that is a faint carbon of I Love Lucy.

Instead of old Fred and Ethel, Debbie has her sister Charlotte and husband. They wrangle a lot. Instead of Rickey, Debbie has a tall, handsome sports-writer husband. Debbie yearns to get a newspaper job, which is the excuse for the broad comedy and mugging.

In the first episode Tuesday, Debbie learned that the governor of her state was going to play golf locally and her scheme was to find out his political plans by disguising herself as his caddy.

You can imagine the hilarity when Debbie was caught in her facial disguise—moustache and sideburns—while still wearing a pink chiffon peignoir around the house. Then, of course, were the mad sequences when she was caddying and did not know a driver from a spoon. Debbie Reynolds is a talented and hard-working actress, but Lucille Ball she is not.

Debbie's premiere show was followed by the return of Julia for its second season. Diahann Carroll's show arrived with a new character, Dr. Chegley—a 60-year-old uncle who is filling in while Julia's boss is on vacation, the senior Dr. Chegley—Lloyd Nolan in a white wig—added a slapstick note to the series. Back at Julia's apartment, children and, in a subplot, a little there were the same appealing the lesson in human relations.

Stratas Hailed At Vienna Debut, Show Rapped

VIENNA (AP) — Reviewers today were unanimous in extolling Toronto-born soprano Teresa Stratas of the Metropolitan Opera, who made her Vienna debut singing the role of Mimi Tuesday night but were split over the repertory production of Puccini's La Boheme.

Hans Loebl, one of Vienna's top opera critics, condemned in The Express what he called "a badly rehearsed repertory performance" and a "formerly outstanding production now being realized half-heartedly and without much care."

In praising Miss Stratas' performance, he said:

"Thus it was Miss Stratas alone, after all—alone with her magnificently intensive voice, confly leaning to the Puccini phrasing, which she filled with life expression and best—alone in her natural acting which emanates from sensing the moment, not from a premeditated pose."

Loebl added: "What she performs comes so genuine, so moving, so simple in what she wants to convey. All she sings is so much prompted by the very heart-throb of this small person, by the strong feeling . . . and at the end one is inclined to believe that one has not only watched but lived through Mimi's fate."

The Vienna Kurier praised Miss Stratas as soprano "not loath to engaging sharpness and tends toward dramatic vigor."

She's Charlie's Daughter But Her Own Woman

LIHUE, Hawaii (AP) — You use the evidence of her father in the eyes, especially when they squint into a smile. But when she speaks it's certain that Geraldine Chaplin is her own woman.

She is the eldest of the eight children of Charlie Chaplin and Oona O'Neill Chaplin and so far the most famous. As yet her acting fame has been based on her role of Omar Sharif's wife in Dr. Zhivago, which she did when she was only 21. She seemed out of her depth amid a cast of skilled performers.

Now she is acting in her second major movie, co-starring with Charlton Heston in The Hawaiians. She plays plantation magnate Heston's wife, actually a composite of about six different Island ladies in the James Michener novel, Hawaii. This time Geraldine Chaplin feels prepared, thanks to her experience in European films, most of them bad.

"The first picture I did was On a Beautiful Summer Morning, with Jean Paul Belmondo, and it was pretty awful," she recalled.

"Then came Zhivago, which I loved. I thought I would be getting lots of offers for American pictures after that, but I didn't."

Next came such dismal films as I Killed Rasputin (French), We Shall Go to the Zoo (Italian) and Cop Out (British). Her last three movies were Spanish-made—Peppermint Frappe, Stress and Honeycomb—and she liked them all. No wonder. They were directed by one of Spain's brightest young directors, Carlos Saura, with whom she shares a Madrid apartment she bought with her Zhivago earnings.

Saura and his two young sons are living with Geraldine near the Kauai Island location in a handsome house nestled in the crater of an extinct volcano. He is married, but being a Spaniard, the chances of a divorce are virtually nil.

"It doesn't matter to either of us," said Miss Chaplin. "We are perfectly happy the way we are."

SCHOOL CLOSES

STELLARTON, N.S. (CP) — St. Brigid's Roman Catholic parochial school has closed its doors here after 50 years. High cost and a shortage of teachers are blamed. Former pupils of the elementary school will attend public schools this fall.

THEATRE FEATURE TIMES

AT THE BELLE — Anthony Quinn, Oskar Werner and an outstanding cast are seen in "Shoes of the Fisherman", one of the 10 best films in 1968. One performance nightly at 8:00 p.m. Doors open 7:15. Matinees Saturday and Sunday at 2:00 p.m.

AT THE PARK — In Color — Starts Today: "Can Heironymus Merkin Ever Forget Mercy Humppe and Find True Happiness?" starring Antony Newley, Joan Collins, Milton Berle. This movie is for everyone who likes it like it is. Restricted to persons 18 years and over. Show times 7:00 and 9:00.

Keeble Leaving CTV, Contract Not Suitable

TORONTO (CP) — The CTV television network announced today that Gordon F. Keeble, chairman and chief executive officer since 1963, will leave the company Oct. 1.

In a brief statement, the network said Mr. Keeble has decided not to accept a new "long-term contract." No successor was named.

Mr. Keeble, president of CTV from 1966 to 1968, said in a statement:

"The board's offer was a generous one, and one which, after eight years with the network, I found most difficult to turn down. However, the terms of the contract contained certain requirements which were not satisfactory to me, and I have therefore decided to strike out on my own."

He did not elaborate.

Travel Questions, Answers

BY THE ONTARIO MOTOR LEAGUE

QUESTION: Could you tell me through your interesting column if there is a booklet listing factory and plant tours in the United States, and if so where one can be obtained?

ANSWER: Write to Guide Book of Plant Tours, P.O. Box 8838, Washington, D.C. This guide book which lists free plant tours for many of the country's top industrial firms may be had by sending $1 to the above address.

Some of the things visitors can see at the firms include skilled craftsmen fashioning molten glass into beautiful objects, sugar refining and toy manufacturing. Visitors can also sip cool champagne after seeing how it is made.

QUESTION: We are going to Rochester shortly and would like to visit the Kodak Co. Is this possible, and if so, when do they allow visitors?

ANSWER: Eastman Kodak Co. camera works plant, 400 Plymouth Ave., N., still and motion cameras and projectors, Monday through Friday 9.30 a.m. and 1.30 p.m. Hawk-Eye Works Plant, 20 Ave. E., photographic lenses, filters, and optical mechanical products, Monday through Friday 10 a.m. and 2 p.m.

QUESTION: I read your interesting travel column in the Intelligencer and wondered if you could give me some advice on the Trans-Canada Highway. Where can I obtain a map of this highway? Are there service stations and restaurants en route, and what are the conditions of the roads?

ANSWER: Maps of the Trans-Canada Highway are obtainable at the OML office or the Chamber of Commerce. These maps are free. The high way itself is good except for the odd strip which is under repair or improved. As to service stations and restaurants, there are not too many, but enough to keep a traveller from worrying and to supply service if needed. This is a well-travelled route of vast and varied scenery, and is considered the world's longest national highway — from Victoria, British Columbia, to St. John's Newfoundland — a 5,000 mile wonder.

The frustration of not being quite sure where he is or where he will end up still is the number one plight of motorists driving U.S. highways.

This was the consensus of a recently completed American Automobile Association membership survey being analyzed at AAA national headquarters.

As in other years, a clear majority in the nation-wide poll listed "confusing or inadequate direction signs" as annoying them most when travelling by automobile.

Sixty - five percent of those surveyed repeated pleas for better techniques to be used in the designing and placing of signs, signals and markings.

Unclean restrooms, long in the runner - up position in the complaints category of AAA surveys, again finished second as 53 per cent expressed distaste at the maintenance of many of the roadside conveniences they have used.

Two other major highway annoyances include traffic congestion in urban areas, cited by 36 per cent of the respondents, and large trucks and buses, pinpointed by 31 per cent of the highway travelers surveyed.

Foxboro

FOXBORO — Miss Darlene Armstrong, Belleville and Miss Cindy Reid, Ivanhoe returned to their homes on Monday after holidaying at the Chappelle home.

Russian Wheat Deal Would Lift Prairie Economy

OTTAWA (CP) — Officials are still hoping Russia will buy a huge quantity of Canadian wheat outstanding under a three-year sales agreement signed by Russia and Canada in mid-1966.

Final implementation of the deal would give a much-needed shot in the arm to the western Canada farm economy, hard hit by price cutting and shrinking sales in the world wheat market.

Trade department sources are guarded in their comments about the deal, which at the time of signing was billed as the largest international wheat transaction in history, estimated to be worth $800,000,000.

Despite the fact that more than three years have gone by since the agreement was concluded in Moscow June 18, 1966, they insist there is hope the Soviet Union will take the remaining 135,000,000 bushels it signed for.

This amount represents 40 per cent of the 336,000,000 bushels the Soviets agreed to purchase in the three crop years beginning Aug. 1, 1966.

One official said the Canadian wheat board is communicating with the Soviet grain-purchasing agency, Exportkhleb, to arrange further discussions.

As to whether at some point Russia will be judged by Canada to have defaulted on its commitments if an agreement is not reached, the trade department source said such a judgment would have to be made by the wheat board.

It was up to the responsible Canadian and Soviet government agencies to work the matter out.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Times says the Soviet Union has defaulted on a large wheat agreement with Canada that could cost Canada up to $300,000,000 in wheat sales.

The Times' Moscow correspondent, Richard Reston, writes that Canadian and Soviet officials met last in December, aside from a long-distance meeting early this summer, and don't plan another meeting until later in the year.

Neither nation is offeceding default. The troubles are couched in diplomatic language about continuing talks and the recognition by both sides of existing financial obligations.

The Times says informed sources attributed the default on three good agricultural years which have enabled Russia to export more wheat than it imports and sharp competing pressures for limited hard currency.

Conference Delegates Hope to Salvage Tattered International Grains Agreement

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — Senior officials from major world wheat-exporting countries will meet in London next month in an attempt to salvage the tattered International Grains Arrangement, officials said Tuesday.

Although plans call for a meeting in the week beginning Oct. 6, officials were unable to confirm Brussels reports that it is set to start Oct. 8.

Officials from Canada, the United States, Australia, Argentina, and the European Economic Community will take part. It is expected that proposals will be made for revamping the 14-month-old international wheat pact in an effort to restore it to a workable agreement on world wheat trading.

NATO Pact Detail Secret

OTTAWA (CP) — The shape of Canada's future commitment to the NATO alliance has been worked out but details of the plan are being kept secret.

An announcement is expected before the end of next week.

Officials said Tuesday only a few minor points remain to be settled before the plan—involving the reduction and restructuring of Canadian forces in Europe—achieves final form.

They refused to confirm or deny a Canadian Press report from Germany last week that Canadian forces on the continent would be chopped to 7,500 from the present 10,000 and that Canada's four nuclear strike squadrons would be disbanded.

Speculation has persisted for some time that Canada will get out of the nuclear attack role.

Prime Minister Trudeau announced in April that the government had decided to cut Canada's commitment in Europe by an unspecified amount.

Later, Defence Minister Leo Cadieux said the mechanized brigade group now in Europe would be replaced by an air-transportable combat group with helicopter support.

Proposed size of the combat group has never been disclosed. Some reports placed it as low as 2,000 men. The present mechanized brigade group has a strength of just under 6,000 men and holds a fixed position in the NATO front line in Germany.

Mr. Cadieux has said Canada will also maintain a separate air element in Europe, equipped initially with CF-104 Starfighters like those being flown by the Canadian NATO air division.

The changes were to take place over a three-year period.

Stewart Runs Gauntlet, Arms Sales Protested

TORONTO (CP) — Michael Stewart, British foreign secretary, Tuesday ran a gauntlet of shouting, sign-toting demonstrators, some not yet in their teens, protesting Britain's sale of arms to Nigeria.

Mr. Stewart was confronted as he arrived at a downtown hotel to address an Empire Club luncheon. A squad of uniformed police and detectives escorted him to a limousine as he left.

Seven demonstrators carrying large pictures of starving children followed him to City Hall where he paid a courtesy visit to a meeting of Metropolitan Toronto council. They were barred at the door, but startled council with a shout from outside as Mr. Stewart began his short speech.

Leader of the seven was Barry Fleming, 27, who said he was a staff member of the Oxford Committee for Famine Relief, but was protesting on behalf of Citizens Outraged by Starvation Tactics.

Arriving at the hotel earlier, Mr. Stewart tried briefly to talk to the demonstrators, criticizing them for bringing "children who are too young to understand what is involved."

They shouted as he entered the dining hall: "That's the issue, Mr. Stewart—children. Enjoy your lunch."

At the luncheon the foreign secretary was confronted by head-table guest Stanley Burke, who gave up his job as chief CBC newscaster to campaign for peace in Biafra. He appealed for pressure on Nigerian military leaders to "let the food go through."

Mr. Stewart was scheduled to end his three-day visit to Canada today, flying to New York to attend the United Nations general assembly.

Purge of Reformist Leaders Believed Subject of Meeting

PRAGUE (Reuters) — Premier Oldrich Cernik returned to Prague today after a hurried meeting with Soviet leaders, believed to have centred on a dispute within the Czechoslovak Communist party over a final purge of reformist leaders.

Cernik went to Moscow Tuesday for a 12-hour visit and talks with Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin and party chief Leonid Brezhnev amid rumors of another postponement of the Communist central committee session at which conservatives will try to remove former party leader Alexander Dubcek and his strong liberal supporter, Josef Smrkovsky, from political life.

The meeting was originally scheduled for Sept. 4. Since then it has been reported the meeting would be Sept. 18 or 19.

But a dispute has arisen between hard-line conservatives and a more moderate group thought to be led by party First Secretary Gustav Husak. The latter group is believed to be worried about public reaction to a complete purge of the still highly popular Dubcek.

The 47-year-old Dubcek probably will lose his seat on the party's ruling presidium but the dispute apparently is over whether he should be ousted from the central committee or even from the ranks of the party as some ultra-conservatives have urged.

Homeless Totem Pole Wasn't Stolen After All

DARTMOUTH, N.S. (CP) — The final resting place of a totem pole given to the Canada Games still hasn't been decided, and for a time Monday it was feared the totem had been stolen.

The 20-foot totem was a gift to the Games, held here Aug. 16-24, from British Columbia. It had been on display in front of the Dartmouth Heritage Museum since the Games ended, but Monday morning it was missing.

Alderman Allen Stockall of Dartmouth, N.S., vice-president of the Games society, said he had no idea where the totem had been taken. Alderman Stockall earlier suggested that it be placed midway across a new bridge being constructed across the harbor between Halifax and Dartmouth.

Museum director Robert Frame said he hadn't been informed that the totem was to be moved.

But Police Chief Roger Smith cleared up the matter soon after he had been informed that the totem was missing. It had been taken to the city's public works department for safekeeping until a permanent resting place is chosen.

Zwick's Island Festival

Fiddlers Make It Difficult for United Appeal Judges

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

The city's first-known, fully-organized fiddlers contest played on the heart strings of hundreds of happy Bellevillians last night.

A succession of old time musicmakers set the shadows tapping around Zwick's Island as they reeled off more than two good old hours of jigs, waltzes, and breakdowns.

The event itself came with strings attached — to a priority community cause.

It was part of the 1969 United Appeal campaign which this week is gingering up the city scene with a series of showbiz like presentations as a prelude to its funds drive.

Curtain raisers continue through the week with a jamboree tonight, a beauty contest tomorrow, teenage events Friday and a down town square dance Saturday.

While the emphasis is on dash and gaiety, the program has a serious goal—as YMCA director Harry Fast told the fiddling fans at Zwick's.

It hopefully is aimed at getting as many people involved in the Appeal and the work of agencies relying on its support.

And involvement was a key element in last night's production that drew a nightime crowd around the Island bandshell and surrounding parkland.

Ostensibly it was a contest —to select a champion fiddler from among 19 challengers who arrived from various Eastern Ontario points.

As such a three-man panel of judges was on hand to select winners.

King of the fiddlers — and winner of a $100 cheque — was 28-year-old Dawren Gardwood of Perth.

Tina Ervine, a Belleville girl now living in Oshawa, came second to take a $50 cash prize while Lorne Wilson of Carleton Place won the $25 third place spot.

But the winning accomplishment of the event was the environment of the evening.

Both performers and fans were caught up in infectious joviality, swept along by the old-time rhythms and tunes.

Despite the long line - up of contestants rivalry was out, conviviality in.

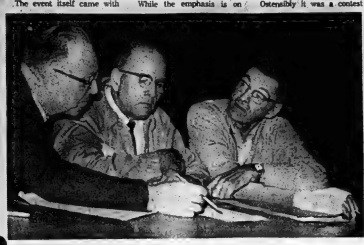
And, symbolic of the contest's spirit, after the winners were announced, all the challengers returned onstage to climax the program by playing as a single unit.

The contestants were as varied as their repertoire.

For Patricia Lang, now living near Stirling, who comes from a family of musicians, it was her first performance on a public platform.

Then there were veterans like Herb Mullins, now a Bellevillian, but a fiddler whose public experience dates from depression days in the Ottawa Valley, when he believes he was the first musician to broadcast a country - music show.

Spontaneity was a key element in the program, emceed by Radio Station CJBQ broadcaster Dick Lovering.



It held up even during the lull while judges Garney Reid, Rollie Winstanley and Art Sweet conferred on selecting the winners.

Drummer Curley Hoskin dropped his drumsticks and did a lively step dance. Then his son, Darwin, hitched up his accordion and started in with some polkas. From the wings veteran banjo player Harold Pile of Norwood dashed out to join the impromptu presentations.

Even after the contest ended the music still rolled on as the players got together in the equivalent of an old-time fiddlers' jam session.

They were still playing when park attendants turned the lights out at 11 p.m.

Appeal publicity chairman J. K. Fleming said he believed the contest was the first of its kind ever held in Belleville.

The Talent Testers

For these three men, last night's United Appeal fiddler's contest was sell-out event. As judges, Garney Reid, Art Sweet and Rollie Winstanley had to select three winners from lineup of musicmakers.

A Fiddling Finale

Fiddlers' contest comes to climax as contestants mass onstage for grand finale at Zwick's Island bandshell last night. Event, part of United Appeal week-long program of public presentations, drew hundreds to hear musicians from around Eastern Ontario.

The Trend Is Apparent

Farming in Future Will Be A Far Different Story

If present trends remain, food production and population in Canada will increase by 30 per cent by 1980 and Canadians will be spending 18 per cent of their dollar on food, compared to the present 20 per cent.

These are among the predictions of three federal economists who have projected current Canadian agriculture and trends into the future to find out what the industry might look like in another 11 years.

"It's rather risky to merely push these trends into the future without being able to take into account possible changes in a number of areas such as the world economy, research developments, changes in government programs and policies and in the international supply, demand and trade situation," says Dr. G. R. Furnell, Director General of CDA's Economics Branch and co-author of the prediction.

"Yet, by projecting current trends we can obtain some valuable impressions that may help the Canadian agricultural industry," says A. B. Andrawawas, another of the authors. The third economist who helped formulate the predictions is E. A. Stuhl.

Here's what some of their trend projections show:

- Canada's population and food production will increase by about 30 per cent.
- Canadians will be spending less of their dollar on food — about 18 per cent instead of the current 20 per cent. They'll be buying more convenience foods that require more packaging, processing and freezing. There will also be a shift to higher value foods such as meats, fruits and vegetables.
- Agriculture will decline in relative importance in the Canadian economy. In 1966, about 10 per cent of the population lived on farms; by 1980, this will drop to six per cent. In 1967, about five per cent of Canada's gross national product came from the agriculture industry; in 1980 this will be about three per cent. The agriculture labor force will decline from 550,000 (7.8 per cent) in 1967 to about 386,000 (four per cent).
- Physical volume of agriculture exports will increase about 40 per cent with oilseeds, fruit and vegetables, tobacco, feeder cattle, high quality dairy cattle and meat capturing a bigger share of Canada's export trade. Grain, grain products and dairy products will drop in relative importance.
- There will be about 315,000 farms and there will be a trend to bigger and more specialized operations. This trend towards specialization will also apply to regions in Canada as well as to individual farms.
- There will be about 30 per cent more feed grains grown and half of these feed grains will be corn and barley.
- The number of dairy cattle will decline, milk production per cow will increase and the dairy industry will concentrate close to the larger cities. Quebec will continue to develop as Canada's largest milk - producing area.
- Farmers will put about 61 per cent of their money into capital investment, (it's currently about 54 per cent); the average farm will have a capital investment of around $50,000, in real estate, machinery and livestock.
- The percentage of part-time farmers will continue to increase.
- The family farm will continue to be the dominant farm organization, but more things will be rented, including land, custom work and services such as spraying, dusting and fertilizing.
- The industry will need 52 per cent more beef cattle, 40 per cent more hogs, 69 per cent more poultry for meat, five per cent fewer laying hens and 17 per cent fewer milking cows.

By 1980, farmers will be using more complex machinery, purchasing a larger proportion of farm inputs from non-farm sources and in general be running a fairly complicated business organization.

These developments will require that farmers have a knowledge of financial analysis, law, programming and budgeting in addition to technical know-how.

Efforts have to be directed towards increasing the managerial abilities of farmers. Extension, education and training of farmers will receive increased attention, the economists say.

Computer analysis of farm business will be available to farmers and should enhance their managerial abilities.

Home and School Groups Re-Align on County Basis

Home and School Councils throughout Ontario have been re-organized to conform with the new boundaries of the county boards of education.

The councils are liaison groups between the Home and School Associations in each county and the Ontario Federation, with headquarters in Toronto.

Formerly, the council for the Quinte area included association representatives from Northumberland - Durham, Hastings and Prince Edward counties. Now, the Hastings council will represent only the associations of Hastings county.

Mrs. E. S. March of Belleville is president of the newly formed council.

Of Hastings county's 58 elementary schools, 21 have Home and School Associations. There are no associations in any of the eight secondary schools.

The retarded children's school has an active parents' group, responsible for starting the school some years ago. Although it co-operates closely with Home and School, it is not part of the province wide organization.

Council meetings are held on the third Tuesday of each month in the board room of the Hastings county board of education offices at 208 Bridge St., East. They are open to the public.

Bomb Scare At School

PICTON — Prince Edward Collegiate Institute was evacuated yesterday afternoon following an anonymous telephone call warning of a bomb in the school set to explode at 3 p.m.

The panic call was received in the school office at approximately 1.15 and principal E. Brown immediately called the Prince Edward County Board of Education. The Picton Fire Department was summoned to the school to stand by.

Evacuated from the school by a routine fire drill the 1,400 students were unaware of the real reason for leaving their classrooms until the incident was over.

Members of the Picton Police force and the Picton O.P.P. detachment were called to the school to investigate. A search of the building by police and the maintenance staff of the collegiate failed to reveal the bomb.

Fire Hall Construction Under Way

Amellasburg's volunteer fire department is ready to take emergency calls as soon as the building opens early in October. Work has begun in earnest on the site on the Rednersville Road.

Safety at Traffic Peak Worries H and S Executive

A safety hazard for school children in the east hill has become a concern of Hastings County Home and School Council executive.

Mrs. Bette Fort raised the matter at Tuesday night's meeting of the council at the board of education offices.

She said heavy traffic at the intersection of Herchimer and Victoria Avenues was a serious hazard to children attending the separate schools in the area, Harry J. Clarke and Moira secondary. She claimed the situation is particularly bad in the morning and at noon, when both streets are in heavy use by workers going to industrial plants.

"There is no crossing guard at the intersection, or even crosswalk lines painted on the road," she said. "A four-way stop has been under consideration for two years, but nothing has been done. Must we wait for a child to be killed before we get action?"

The council's executive decided to arrange a meeting with the police department's safety officer to discuss the problem.

Convention to Draw 500 Here

An attendance of 500 delegates and wives is expected at the 10th annual convention of the Association of Ontario Counties and Reeves scheduled to be held in Belleville next month.

Dates for the convention are Oct. 4 to Oct. 8 with sessions to be held at the Sun Valley Motor Inn.

Hastings county is the host municipality for the convention. County clerk treasurer administrator Carl E. Bateman is the immediate past president of the association.

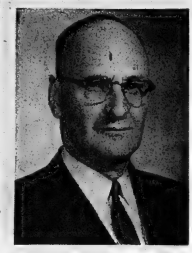
The theme of the convention will be Where Are We Going?

Association officers and directors and members of the Hastings county convention committee will get together Saturday for a pre-convention meeting with registration to get under way on Sunday afternoon.

The keynote address Where Are We Going? will be delivered Monday by F. W. Hurst, vice-president and treasurer of Consumers Gas Co., Toronto.

Later program sessions will include discussions on where the province is going in regional government and whether the needs of rural municipalities are being met.

Tuesday the future of county administration will be discussed when Hon. Darcy McKeough, minister of municipal affairs will be in the "hear pit" to answer questions.



Wednesday, Oct. 8, will see discussions on where we are going in municipal education.

A separate program is being arranged for the wives of convention delegates.

Pocketbook Pains? Well, Friends, You Are Not Alone

NEW YORK (AP) — If you're suffering from inflation, you can take consolation in the fact that you're not suffering alone.

The statistician's way of describing the pain you've been feeling in your pocketbook is to say that the consumer price index increased 4.75 per cent in Canada between May, 1968, and May, 1969.

This is according to United Nations figures for all countries, starting from a base of 100 in 1963.

In the United States the increase in the consumer price index was 6.1 per cent in that period.

Now consider these one-year increases, from the same statistics: Brazil 22.9 per cent; Chile 35.7; South Vietnam 15.2; India 8.2.

In Brazil, the cost-of-living index in May stood at an astounding 865 and in Argentina 325, starting from 100 in 1963. In Britain it was 127, France 123, Canada 121.3, the U.S. 119.6.

The UN figures are quoted for comparison purposes. The official Canadian cost-of-living index is based on 1961 equalling 100, and in August this year it stood at 126.8, up 5.1 per cent from August, 1968.

Inflation and the economic problems it spawns have left half-finished buildings in Brazil, helped bring devaluation in France and led Japanese housewives to demand that the government do something about rising prices.

The language and the locales vary but the stories have a similar ring.

In Argentina, Antonio Giordano has not taken his wife to a movie and dinner since 1967 when his wages were frozen.

In England, only the top 25 per cent of executives are keeping up with rising prices which have sent the cost of tobacco up 12 per cent and the cost of ale up eight per cent in a year.

A Frenchman has been putting off buying new carpeting and adding a second bathroom to his home for two years. Next year, his wife will have to go back to work as a school teacher to help pay the family's bills.

In Brazil, sure that their currency would fail rapidly, builders started buildings whether or not they had the cash to finish them. They figured half a building was better than none.

A young Chilean said of his country's inflation: "It's as contagious as breathing, smoking and sin."

The shrinking value of currency has become a matter of increasing concern to world leaders and make its goods more competitive abroad.

Inflation has been blamed as a cause of violence and revolution. It has been blamed for sapping the government loyalty of civil servants who have seen their pay buy less and less. It has slashed the purchasing power of retired persons living on fixed incomes.

Inflation has caused deep concern in the U.S. for many months. Government figures put current U.S. inflation at about an annual rate of 6.4 per cent, despite attempts to control it. However, Federal Reserve Board Chairman William McChesney Martin in September told the Senate banking committee that he believes a levelling-off period may be at hand.

Finance Minister Benson in his June 3 budget speech said he assumed Canada's price increases this year would be "about the same as last year." That was 3.5 per cent.

Inflationary pressures were cited by Prime Minister Trudeau in announcing a 10 per-cent cut in the civil service.

France, which had a 5.3-per-cent rise in consumer prices last year, turned to devaluation to slow its inflationary trend and make its goods more competitive abroad.

Inflation recently appeared in West Germany; the cost of living is up 3.5 per cent in 1969 and a survey found West Germans more concerned about inflation than they were two years ago.

Japan, Asia's most industrialized country, has seen rising prosperity bring rising prices. Japanese housewives have organized to demand stronger government action in the wake of recent price increases. The women complain that the price of rice has gone up 40 per cent since 1965 and beef prices are up 57.7 per cent.

Inflation that would destroy a sophisticated economy is sustained in less-developed countries because many peasants and laborers are outside the money economy, generally bartering goods instead of using money. The rich stay ahead of rising prices through investments in stocks and real estate.

The United States has helped keep inflation in South Vietnam in manageable proportions by helping the country import goods it needs with hard currency. Recent limitations on that aid have led to higher prices for food and luxury goods. A one-bedroom apartment in Saigon now rents for about $600 a month.

Inflation rates of 20 per cent are considered progress in Brazil, where constant price increases are commonplace.

"Whenever there's a salary increase there is an even higher increase in prices," said the father of one family in Rio de Janeiro.

Whether or not some inflation is desirable is a matter of debate among economists.

"Inflation is a means of redistributing wealth," says one international economist. Expended business activity under inflation gives the ghetto resident his first job, but is also angers the middle-class worker whose salary rises slowly compared with prices, he said.

Since the dollar is the basic currency of world trade, inflation in the United States causes an increase in the world currency base which tends to be inflationary elsewhere, says Martin Gainsbrugh of the National Industrial Conference Board.

And high profits produced by inflation lead to heavy U.S. investments abroad where extra demand for plant and equipment creates inflationary pressures.

"Worldwide problems are created when the U.S. economy does not work properly, said Richard W. Everett of Chase Manhattan Bank. Among the problems are upsets in the international monetary system" and spreading high interest rates to slow inflation.

"Inflation is simply not an acceptable condition for a nation that occupies a dominant economic position in an increasingly interdependent world," Everett said.

THE LITTLE WOMAN

"Everything's higher, lady. Look at skirts."

Centennial Year

Manitoba Busily Prepares For Big Convention Flood

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba's centennial year, 1970, may be the province's biggest ever for convention visitors.

Norm E. Coston, executive director of the Manitoba Travel and Convention Association's convention bureau, said the centennial year is helping to attract more conventions to Winnipeg than might normally be expected.

Mr. Coston said that to the end of August the bureau had compiled a list of 39 national, nine regional and 13 international conventions to be held in Winnipeg next year, compared with 29 national, 11 regional, 19 international and 42 provincial conventions in 1968.

His 1970 list included four provincial conventions but he said many provincial events are not reported through the bureau too far in advance.

"The convention business is big business," Mr. Coston said. "It's not just a matter of bringing people into town. Figures prove that the convention delegate spends more money in a town than the tourist does and we want to attract more and more of these convention delegates."

Mr. Coston noted a survey by the International Association of Convention Bureaus on spending habits of more than 1,000,000 delegates attending 734 conventions in 43 member cities.

The survey concluded the average delegate spends $34.27 a day during his average 3.93 day stay.

The survey provided a breakdown of spending, noting major expenses for hotels, restaurants, retail stores, automobile service and entertainment.

By this measure, delegates spent more than $4,800,000 in 1968, and on the same basis, convention business in 1970 should amount to well over $5,000,000.

Two major sporting events scheduled for next year will attract visitors to Manitoba.

Hotel bookings already are heavy for the periods of the Canadian curling championship, Feb. 27 to March 7, and the world hockey championship, March 21 to 30, Mr. Coston said.

But there is another benefit for the province besides the monetary value of a convention.

"The delegate who is impressed with the facilities and service of a community during a convention, becomes a prime prospect for the future, either as a visitor, or a business venture," Mr. Coston said.

TWEED — The department of lands and forests has opened a five man department in Strathroy, Ont., to serve Middlesex and Lambton counties. Strathroy is 22 miles west of London.

Mrs. Catherine Miller of Napanee is spending a few weeks with her sister, Mrs. Edward Morley of Northbrook.

Mr. Ellery Thompson of Northbrook has recently disposed of his telephone system to the Bell Telephone Company.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Watkins of Ardoch spent a few days in Russell, N.Y. visiting his brother Stanley before his departure for Florida where he will reside permanently.

Rev. and Mrs. John Lombard and son of Plevna are away on their vacation for the month of September. In his absence from the pulpits of Holy Trinity the services are being taken over by Captain Coleman, who is holidaying at his cottage at Rock Lake, and Mr. William Ransom of the Church Army at Cloyne.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Sherris and family of Napanee and Mr. and Mrs. William Bell also of Napanee visited recently with Mr. and Mrs. James Forbes at Arlindale.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks at Life"

Nosebleed Could Indicate An Unsuspected Disease

Like pain, hemorrhage is one of the common symptoms indicating that something is wrong. A kid or adult who suffers a punch in the nose has no doubt about the cause of a nosebleed. But sometimes the apparently harmless nosebleeds are due to unsuspected disease.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: We've had a recent epidemic of nosebleeds in our family. Our 12-year-old came home with one. Reason: boxing. Next, my mother had one. Reason: high blood pressure and failing kidneys.

Two days ago our 8-year-old daughter had a nosebleed. It stopped. She had another nosebleed for no apparent reason yesterday. In the doctor again. We learned to our surprise and consternation that she has rheumatic fever. Now she is in bed to prevent heart damage.

I don't suppose there's any real reason for my writing except as a warning to readers that repeated nosebleeds should be investigated. I hope you print this. — Mrs. D.

COMMENT: Most nosebleed are harmless. In some people the nasal lining is delicate and small blood vessels may rupture occasionally — sometimes after a sneeze or after violent exertion or picking at the nose. Epistaxis (nosebleed) is especially common in children.

Try not to panic. Do not have a child lie on his back, as the blood will flow back in his throat and tend to strangle him. Either have him sit forward in a chair or lie on his side, face near a basin or large towel.

Apply cold towels or an ice bag to the back of the neck. Pinch the nose tightly for about 10 minutes while the child breathes through his mouth. If the small, ruptured blood vessel is in the front part of the nose, this procedure will usually control the bleeding. Sometimes packing with cotton or gauze helps.

If it persists, better call in the doctor. The bleeding may come from far back and require packing. It can be a bear in mind is that frequent reason, requires medical investigation.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: My problem is that I always feel bloated. After I eat I always feel uneasy, and my stomach gives off growls and grumbles. This is quite embarrassing. I don't know what to do about it. I don't know whether it's the foods I eat or not.

Can you give me a diet? I am 17 years old and in the usual indigestion that comes with old age. — Miss P.

COMMENT: I can give you some advice but not a diet. Is your indigestion keeps on, better ask your family to call in a doctor. Very often, young people can have similar indigestion that "comes on" when they are upset.

I'm not trying to frighten you into having an examination. Just saying to you, and to other teenagers, that youngsters can have similar trouble as oldsters. One's age should never be allowed to becloud the true diagnosis.

* * *

For Mr. U.: My first guess? Enlarged prostate gland. In elderly men this is the most common reason for difficulty in frequent urination. But better not guess.

* * *

For Mrs. L.: The cause and varies. This is why there is so much confusion about this peptic condition. Shall you keep on with grapefruit? One woman says she'll dare to eat canker sores after grapefruit. Another swears that grapefruit are a "sure cure."

Strictly Personal

We Must Not Lose Perspective

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

When Santayana defined a "fanatic" as a man "who redoubles his efforts after he has forgotten his aim," he was making more than a pretty epigram. He was uttering the doleful truth about the human animal.

Late yesterday afternoon I decided to run down to the store to buy some lemons. Because I had a cold, and was lounging at home in slacks and a sport shirt, I thought I'd wrap an old Ascot tie around my neck instead of donning a conventional necktie.

I looked in the proper drawer, and the ascot was missing. Then I looked in all the drawers of my dresser, with equally unsuccessful results. By this time, my blood was up.

With an utterly fanatical gleam in my eye, I ransacked the apartment from stem to stern. I opened all the suitcases, as well as the big boxes on the top shelf of the guest closet, where our summer things are stored.

I burrowed through the laundry hamper. I delved into (may the Lord forgive me) my wife's "intimate" garments.

I leafed through all the papers in my desk. I searched in the most improbable places — including, ultimately, the garbage can on the back porch.

After the first quarter hour of this concentrated hunt, I had wholly forgotten the trip to the store, the lemons, my cold, and my original reason for preferring the ascot to a four-in-hand.

I was transformed into a crusader for a Cause, a knight charging after dragons — and a fool in hot pursuit of a piece of cloth I really didn't want at all.

In commenting on the bitter religious wars in the 16th century, Montaigne makes the same point on a grander scale. The frenzied search for heretics and nonconformists totally obliterated the moral ends of religion, and even of common decency.

Whether we are in avid pursuit of a tie, a Huguenot or a Communist, it is dangerous and self-defeating to become so emotionally involved in the quest that we lose our perspective, our humor is to subhumanity. To do this is to subvert our goals more fatally than our enemies could ever accomplish.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For September 18

Your birthday today: Your basic trend now is toward discovery and the development of your own special way of life — perhaps learning to do everything for yourself without help. If you are to keep and deepen emotional ties, you must make definite consistent efforts. No relationship in the coming year can be taken for granted. Today's natives nearly always manage to drift into a life of service, generally on a group or public scale.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Be alert today. Consult with financial, credit people; and other specialists. Do not let a missed connection put you off-field! Some way to reach your party.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Advice comes easily and should be just as easily filed away rather than used early. Your spending ought to be restricted to necessity. Machinery tends to malfunction and must be used only with great care.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Your share of the peace today consists of being aware that you may be overly critical; make allowances for others. Take time to think over your recent progress as you retire for the night.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Wear new clothing and go after a better spot in your career. Do something for your friends in the process. It's a very lucky day, according to your performance.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): There is more respect and help from important fellow workers, local connections. Save money on some new device in housekeeping. Pursue romantic interests this evening.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Intensely personal strivings begin now, and will continue for many months. Changes are not to be forced at this time. Plan for travel if you have reason to go. Make it business if it it at all possible.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): The morning opens with pleasant surprises from neighbors and associates. Read technical bulletins carefully, as there is something of special interest in you today. Take your best friend with you visiting.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): This is one of those difficult days; you are ready for action, but nobody else has his mind made up or else is determined to disagree. Be patient un til things turn around to favor you more. Harsh words spoil everything.

SAGGITARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Your intuition is going strong as you awaken. Follow it, whatever it says. Loose ends are easily tied up on the way toward new ventures, but don't waste time along the way.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Your plans should not be announced — do whatever you planned, and let people react to your arrival. Chance meetings provide clues. Things done today pay out in about a month's time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): The schemes of friends are great for others to invest in — while you stay clear altogether. Influential people are quite likely to be busy elsewhere if you are expecting anything of them.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Give your associates just a little encouragement and they are apt to open up somewhat and tell you more of their story. Correspondence is strongly favored. Plan a quiet evening.

Health Crisis Looms

OTTAWA (CP) — Several million Ontario residents may find they have no medical care insurance coverage beyond the provincial plan covering doctor's fees after Oct. 1, reliable sources said today.

The provincial medical care insurance plan comes into force on that date but applies only to the services of doctors. It does not cover such things as drugs, corrective appliances and other medical services included in many existing private and group medical care insurance contracts.

Unless existing medical insurance contracts are rewritten or renegotiated between now and Oct. 1, insured persons may find their medical insurance coverage reduced to the basic Ontario plan, the Ontario Health Services Insurance Plan.

The problem has arisen partly because provincial advertising has stressed that persons with existing insurance need take no action to carry on their present coverage.

However, no agreement was reached between the provincial government and 31 private insurance firms until Aug. 27 to enable these companies to act as agents for the provincial government plan.

When other provinces joined the federal medical care program, as Ontario will do Oct. 1, their enabling legislation usually spelled out specifically that existing private health insurance contracts were void.

This was not done in Ontario. The province and the insurance companies apparently expected they would have reached agreement at an early enough stage to advise policy holders of the changes that would be necessary to supplement the basic coverage of the provincial plan and bring it up to the equivalent of their pre-medicare coverage.

The Ontario medical care legislation provided that where employees and employers shared the cost of insurance plans the employees would be not worse off after the Oct. 1 start of the provincial plan.

However, this provision applied only to the doctors' fee parts of medical care plans. Coverage beyond that would either lapse or become the subject of negotiation between employer and employee and the insurance companies.

One Good Turn

Prime Minister Trudeau turns the tables on Monique Arsenault, 18-year-old University of Ottawa student, as he shines her shoes outside his parliamentary office Wednesday. THE WEATHER

Synopsis: A large high pressure area over northern Ontario will dominate Ontario's weather for the next two days. The weather will continue fair and cool. Friday will not be quite as cool as today since the eastward movement of the high will allow southerly winds to develop in the upper lakes and northern Ontario.

ROSARIO (Reuters) — Army troops today had orders to open fire without warning if rioting resumes in Rosario, the scene of rioting by thousands of Argentine workers that prompted the army to take over Wednesday night. About 50,000 striking railway employees walked off the job last week. Only about half the country's trains were operating today, most of them carrying strong police guards.

BRANTFORD, Ont. (CP) — Urban renewal projects must not be discontinued because cities need to be maintained, Robert Stanfield, national Conservative leader, said Wednesday. He told reporters at city hall: "We must push ahead with urban renewal by means of consultation with the people concerned."

New Savings Bonds To Double Money

OTTAWA (CP) — The 25th series of Canada Savings Bonds to go on sale next month will double the investor's money in nine years," Finance Minister Benson said today in announcing details.

Mr. Benson said "the most attractive series to date" will offer an average annual yield of eight per cent to maturity Nov. 1, 1978.

He said buyers again will be able to leave matured coupons uncashed "and earn interest on interest."

A buyer of a $100 bond who holds it to maturity will earn $72.50 in annual interest coupons and a further $37.50 in extra interest from three compound interest certificates, bringing the amount he receives in 1978 to $200.

Two different forms of fully registered bonds are available in denominations of $500, $1,000, $5,000 and $25,000.

In one form, interest will be paid annually by cheque but the bond will not provide compound interest.

In the other, the bond will offer the compound interest feature and interest will be paid only when the bond is redeemed.

Besides the nine regular annual interest coupons which appear on the coupon bonds, there are three compound interest certificates.

Hanoi Held At Fault

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — President Nixon, making his first appearance before a global forum, urgently appealed to all members of the United Nations today to "take an active hand" in promoting a Vietnam peace.

In an address for the UN General Assembly, and for live television-radio broadcast, Nixon held Hanoi wholly responsible for the long stalemate in Paris negotiations.

The president urged all 126 member countries of the United Nations to "use your best diplomatic efforts" to break down what he pictured as the intransigence of Hanoi.

"Once there is a genuine willingness by the other side to reach an agreement, the practical solutions can readily be found," Nixon said in the 11th appearance of a U.S. president before the General Assembly.

He also proposed to the member nations an international agreement to limit arms shipments to the Middle East if that was the only way to keep Arabs and Israelis from each other's throats. Nixon said the U.S. already has suggested this to the Soviet Union but without result.

But Nixon's main preoccupation was with Vietnam and he emphasized it by saying: "Since I took office as president no single question has occupied so much of my time and energy as the search for an end to the war in Vietnam."

"We in the United States want an end to the war, and we are ready to take every reasonable step to achieve it."

"In good conscience, we cannot—in the long-term interest of peace, we will not—accept a settlement that would arbitrarily dictate the political future of South Vietnam and deny to the people of South Vietnam the basic right to determine their own future free of outside interference," he said.

"The missing ingredient so far has been the willingness of the other side to talk on any terms other than those that would predetermine the result and deny the right of self-determination to the people of South Vietnam," he said.

Nixon made a strong effort for international approval of U.S. efforts to end the war.

He reminded delegates: "Many years ago I only was halted our bombing of the North, peace would follow." Almost a year had gone by since serial bombardment of the North stopped, he said.

In a crucial passage, Nixon said:

"I repeat here today that we are prepared to withdraw all our forces. The replacement of 60,000 troops is a significant step. That time has come for the other side to respond to these initiatives. The time has come for peace.

Three Die, 12 Hurt In B.C. Plane Crash

CAMPBELL RIVER, B.C. (CP) — Three persons died and 12 suffered minor injuries Wednesday night when a Pacific Western Airlines plane crashed and burned in fog and rain near this Vancouver Island community.

The survivors credited the pilot, who was killed, with saving their lives by pulling up the nose of twin-engined Convair 640 as the aircraft smashed into trees in Elk Lake Park.

"There was no warning at all," said one of the passengers, Al Lasertz, a Campbell River lawyer. "We came down out of the clouds and there were trees all around us.

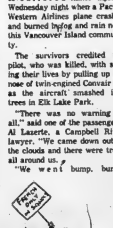
"We went bump, bump, bump, like a man going down stairs, then spun around and a sheet of flame came down the aisle. . . . Once we were out there was a small explosion and the plane just burned up."

RCMP said the fuselage remained generally intact.

The Convair, carrying 11 passengers and a crew of four, crashed about two miles north of Campbell River. It had flown from Vancouver, 125 miles southeast of Campbell River.

Killed were the captain, Brian Bourne, 23, of Richmond, B.C.; the first officer, Val H. Hennell, 57, of Vancouver, and Janet Jones of Gillow Springs, Ohio. All were at the front of the plane.

The aircraft went down at about 7 p.m. PDT, about 500 yards from a forest lookout tower. The lookout, Lawrie Lawrenson, said fog was so thick that he neither saw nor heard the plane go down.



Cause of the crash, which came during what one passenger described as a 180-degree bank in the fog, was under investigation by PWA and the federal transport department.

"It's a miracle we're alive at all," said Wray Compton, a millworker here. "We would all be dead if the pilot hadn't pulled the nose up when the plane hit the tree. That's what saved us."

"Once we were out," said Mr. Lasertz, "there was a small explosion and the plane just burned up in front of our eyes . . . with those flames no one in front had a chance."

Mr. Compton said the male survivors wanted to return to the aircraft and attempt to bring out the pilot, first officer and Mrs. Jones. "But we were terrified it would explode."

Mr. Compton and Mr. Young walked through dense bush to the access road and then walked four miles in the rain.

"Excuse-me. May I go to school, please?"

Troop Cutback Not Key

PARIS (Reuters) — North Vietnam today attacked President Nixon's "manoeuvre of piecemeal troop withdrawals" and insisted that the key question in the Paris peace talks lay in the total and unconditional withdrawal of American troops.

Col. Ha Van-Lau, Hanoi's acting chief negotiator, said at the 34th session of the Vietnam conference that the withdrawals "by batches and in trifling numbers" had been criticized in the United States and the world as meaningless in proportion to the 500,000 U.S. troops in South and in trifling numbers" had been criticized in the United States and the world as meaningless in proportion to the 500,000 U.S. troops in South Vietnam, Lau said.

Lau said the Paris conference was at a standstill because the Nixon administration did not really want to settle the Vietnam problem peacefully.

Barricades Gone

Irish Debate Stalled Off at UN

BELFAST (CP) — The British army said today it expects the last of the Roman Catholic barricades in Belfast to come down tonight.

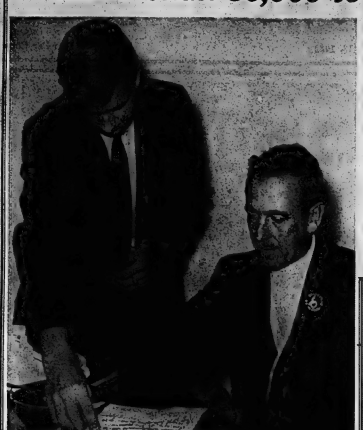
The barriers of burned out vehicles, paving slabs and assorted furnishing thrown up during the religious warfare of the past weeks began falling right and left Wednesday after a slow start.

The army, which has driven its own "peace wall" of barbed wire and steel between Protestant and Catholic sections, announced the removal was going so rapidly it should be completed 18 hours ahead of the Friday noon deadline.

A spokesman for the local Catholic Citizens' Defence Committee, Hugh Kennedy, said he was "more than happy" with the protection given by the army.

In Londonderry, starting point of the street fighting last month which left nine dead, the barricades remained. But Paddy Doherty, chairman of the Citizens' Defence Association of Catholic Bogside, said he believed it was time for them to come down, too.

He said the military had given assurance that no soldiers or police would enter Bogside if the barriers were removed.



At the United Nations in New York, a full-scale debate on Northern Ireland, as requested by the Irish Republic, seemed unlikely today after the General Assembly's steering committee postponed a decision on placing the issue on the agenda.

The 25-member committee adjourned Wednesday until this afternoon after External Affairs Minister Patrick Hillery promised to weigh a British appeal for withdrawal of his request for UN intervention in Ulster.

In presenting the British appeal, Lord Caradon, the chief British delegate to the UN, said debate could inflame passions in Northern Ireland and make it more difficult to implement reforms about to begin.

The Irish minister replied that he would need some time to reflect on the consequences of withdrawal and he would be happier if Britain gave firmer assurances that the reforms in the North would be put into effect soon. He said Britain had ignored Irish warnings of trouble before the outbreaks this summer in Londonderry and Belfast.

More Than 30,000 to Play Role in Belleville Week

Planning A Parade

Lou De Jong, parade chairman for the Belleville Week Parade, on behalf of the Belleville Jaycees, points out some aspects of the event to Albert Horlock, president of the Quinte Homebuilders' Association. The homebuilders are underwriting the cost of parade while the Jaycees perform the mechanics of it.

"We are still 10 days away from the start of Belleville Week but it looks now that more than 30,000 people will be involved one way or another," committee chairman Donald Soutter said last night.

Mr. Soutter was speaking to the Quinte Home Builders at their monthly meeting at the Sun Luck Gardens.

"It was the inspiration given by groups such as yours in the early stages which kept the committee's spirits up. This has paid off now, with a week of activities which will involve thousands of city residents and visitors."

The Quinte Home Builders were the first civic organization to pledge funds for Belleville Week, allocating over $600. The builders' contribution will be earmarked for the parade Saturday, Sept. 27, and is underwrite the costs of a reception at Bleecker Hall prior to the civic dinner Sept. 29.

"You should know what you are getting for your money," said Mr. Soutter, "and I think it is fair to say the parade could be the biggest and best ever held in Belleville."

Undertaking the mechanics of putting the parade together is the Junior Chamber of Commerce, with Lou DeJong as parade chairman, Angus Duffy, EMO co-ordinator and an expert on parade marshalling is acting as consultant.

Mr. Soutter said that the opening Saturday will be one of the highlights of the week, starting with a giant paint-in at the east end plaza in the morning.

"Teams of art students will decorate the store windows with murals tied in with the theme 'Tomorrow is Here' said Mr. Soutter. "This will be followed by the formation of the parade at East Hill playground in the early forenoon and then a march along Bridge Street to the fairgrounds. Here the parade will pass in front of the grandstand. After it is over, the students body at Loyalist will provide a three-ring circus of college hi-jinks. Centre ring will be a grease pole climb.

"We expect 15,000 people will line the parade route and be on hand at the fairgrounds."

One of the prime reasons for the week-long promotion is to point out to potential industrialists and business interests that Belleville has the right climate for locating here.

"However, we want everyone to have fun at the same time," Mr. Soutter said, "With this in mind, and through the co-operation of the musicians union we will have free dances at Bleecker Hall on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday starting at nine o'clock and on the Market Square on Wednesday night. The Wednesday night dance is being produced by the Belleville Trades and Labor Council and will also include a corn roast."

Mr. Soutter pointed out to the builders that the spirit of the week was built around voluntary participation rather than the Belleville Week Committee assigning projects.

"It is the fact of involvement which will make the promotion a success," he said. "This is being done in many ways, such as the participation of, the Ontario Business College, the women's auxiliaries, the Registered Music Teachers, the Kinsmen and Kinettes, the Belleville Women's Liberal Association, the Theatre Guild, and others.

"The only people who can make this a success are the people who live here."

BIRTHS

ANDREWS — Mr. and Mrs. Fred Andrews, R. R. 4, Belleville, are happy to announce the arrival of their son, Frederick Charles, on Saturday, September 13, 1969 at Belleville General Hospital. A brother for Donna and Pat.

MACMILLAN — Mr. and Mrs. David Doris (nee Chaties) R. R. 1, Foxboro are pleased to announce the arrival of their son, Dale Robert, on Saturday, September 13th, 1969 at Belleville General Hospital. Weight 8 lb. 13½ ozs.

IN MEMORIAM

DEGENOVA — In loving memory of our dear son John DeGenova, who passed away September 18, 1967.

A light is from our household gone,
A voice we loved is stilled,
A place is vacant in our home,
Which never can be filled.
God in His wisdom has recalled
The boon His love has given,
Though on earth your son no more,
But in memory he lives with us,
As you always were before.
And though the years may roll
Remembered by another friend.

DEGENOVA — In loving memory of our dear brother John, who passed away September 18th, 1967.

He little thought when leaving home
He would no more return,
He left us in the midst of sleep,
And here we have to mourn.
We did not know when death he
Or what we have to bear.
We only know he has departed
And left us sorrowing here.
—Never forgotten by sister Kay, Ray and family.

Changes Sought by Vatican Said Important, Necessary

Monsignor J. A. Carley, pastor of St. Joseph's Church, Belleville, addressed the Holy Name Society of Sacred Heart Church, Marmora at their annual banquet on Monday evening. "The changes in the outlook and practice of the Church asked for by the Second Vatican Council are extremely important and necessary for the pastoral renewal of the whole church, but these changes are not changes in what is to be believed by the faithful.

He brought to the attention of his listeners that a change of heart is, not a change of mind; a change in outlook is not a change in conviction; a change in way and means is not a change in objective; a change from Latin to English is not a change in what is believed; more love does not mean less faith. Monsignor Carley noted that our essential beliefs are now what they have always been, and the authority of the teaching church is what it had ever been, no more and no less, even though, through healthy speculation, our insights into what we believe may be deeper, and the manner of the use by the church, of its authority, may be psychologically more adroit, adjusting itself, as it does, to the needs of our own age.

The speaker added "It is unrealistic to believe that the good old Roman Catholic Church will continue to carry on business at the same old stand in a world caught up in dimensions of change which are beyond our comprehension no institution, nor any mortal man is unaffected by the forces of social and cultural change that make up the history of our time. The changes taking place in the church today have been strongly influenced by the social, cultural and intellectual forces of our day. The 16 documents issued by the Council point the way to what the church in our time ought to be. Now it is up to the millions of Catholics of this and following generations to make it what it ought to be. We welcome the fresh insights of theologians as they confront the mystery of the church — we

Area Man 'Critical' After Crash

A Stirling electrical contractor, Mr. Feike Oosting, 43, is in critical condition in Belleville General Hospital following a one-car accident on Highway 14 at the Oak Hills late yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Oosting suffered head injuries when his late model car crashed into a highway sign, resulting in $2,000 damages.

In another accident on Highway 14, just north of Springbrook, a small foreign car went out of control and rolled over several times. The driver, Patrick John Sagerlis, 22, of RR3, Picton, and his passenger Michael Murray, 21, of Read, were taken to Belleville hospital for treatment then released. The accident occurred at 4.45 a.m. today.

Mrs. Lawson Way of RR 1 Carrying Place has quite a problem finding an egg cup to fit a large egg laid by one of her hens. However, Stroud's Gift Shop came up with the answer — a two-way egg cup.

Thieves Grab Trailer, Clothes

Belleville city police are investigating a pair of minor thefts that occurred yesterday.

A home - made, box - type trailer was taken from the home of Mrs. Thomas Hutchinson at 32 Boswell St.

Some articles of clothing, including five perma-press shirts were taken from the coin wash on North Front St.

The clothing, belonging to Mr. and Mrs. Peter Stevens son of Holloway was valued at approximately $35.

Rev. Stanley Gentle, who represented the ministerial association on last spring's Flight to Flint, renewed acquaintances with Gerald Zerbe, superintendent of administrative services for the Mott program, and guest speaker at last night's banquet and exploratory discussion at Centennial Secondary School.

Impossible Dream Possible Mott Program Is Blueprint

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

An "impossible dream" for community betterment was presented to 300 interested people from the Quinte district last night as exploratory discussions were held on the Mott program in Flint, Michigan.

Gerald Zerbe, superintendent of administrative services with the Mott Program, outlined its method of co-ordinating existing facilities for community involvement at a banquet at Centennial Secondary School sponsored by the Quinte District Community Program Committee and its chairman Ald. Donald Williams.

"Without a visual image of what you want you'll never accomplish anything." Mr. Zerbe told his listeners. "In your schools you have a good tool to achieve the impossible dream — they are non-sectarian, belong to all and are spotted in the right places."

He explained how adult education and recreation programs for all ages are organized on a neighborhood basis in Flint, with the elementary schools as the centres of social activity.

"The whole secret of the program is the community school director," he said.

"Each director is a teacher, usually a physical education or recreation specialist, who spends his afternoons in the classroom and his evenings directing the community activities held at the school.

The Mott program is the outgrowth of the concern of a Flint industrialist for his city.

"Flint is the birthplace of General Motors." Mr. Zerbe said. "Buggy manufacturers came around 1900 because of the white pine forests, and the automobile manufacturers followed. Between 1900 and 1935 the town's population increased 700 per cent. Most industrialists came to take money from the community and most left little behind. By 1935, a national magazine claimed Flint typified all the ills for a metropolitan area."

In that year, C. S. Mott, one of the founders of GM, began putting money into existing recreational programs in an effort to upgrade his community.

Not until 1947 was a survey of parents taken and the community school program instituted.

"We found we had to work with the parents in order to help the youngsters," Mr. Zerbe said. "Most parents had had unhappy school experiences and to reach them we had to provide non-academic interest programs. Once people came back to school and found something at which they were successful they sought a new level of aspiration."

As a result, for every one in Flint, from toddler to senior citizen, "whatever their interest, there is an outlet."

Although the delinquency rate has increased as much as 15 to 30 per cent yearly in comparable American cities, Flint's rate has remained the same.

The Mott program's "impossible dream" of community betterment has become a reality in Flint, and has extended to 283 other American communities. Winnipeg is the only Canadian city with a similar program in effect, but if enough community interest can be generated, Quinte municipalities may soon follow suit.

United Appeal Youth Night Real Groove

Plans are in full swing for the Belleville United Appeal's pre-campaign youth night to be held at the Belleville Family YMCA Friday night.

As part of the festivities sponsored by the United Appeal this week, Belleville's young people will get their turn in a good time as well.

In charge of arrangements are new YMCA program directors Maureen Kelly and David Hahn. They are being assisted by young people involved with the "Y", directors and other staff members.

The fun will begin at 4 p.m. Friday with free swimming at the YMCA until 6 p.m. and from 7 p.m. until 10 p.m.

A free dance featuring the Wendigs will also be part of the activities from 9 p.m. until midnight on the YMCA parking lot.

And inside the "Y" young people will be able to relax in a coffee house in the auditorium or if more athletically inclined may use the "Y" exercise room for weight training or informal games.

Mott Program

Community School Plan Discussed

Co-ordination of existing facilities could be the key to implementation of a community school program in Belleville.

A panel of four local people joined Gerald Zerbe of the Flint, Michigan, Mott program to discuss practical applications of the program in the Quinte district, and came to the conclusion expressed by panelist Mrs. Les Leonard: "We have the facilities, all we lack is co-ordination."

The panelists were selected from among the community leaders who took the Quinte Arts Council sponsored Flight to Flint six months ago.

Last night's banquet and panel discussion was a further step in bringing some of the Mott program policies to district municipalities.

Mr. Zerbe advised his listeners to start the program by designating one school for a pilot project.

"We are talking in terms of putting one community school director in one school at a salary of $8,500 to $8,000 annually," he said.

Cost o the Mott program in Flint amounts to four per cent of the total school budget, Mr. Zerbe said. Four per cent of the total school budget for Hastings County would be about $600,000 this year.

Newly built schools in Flint all include community rooms — a lounge and kitchen arrangement — used during the school day by mothers and their pre-school children.

All separate schools built in the Quinte district during recent years include a similar room with separate entrance for community use.

Murray Irwin, Centennial Secondary vice - principal and Quinte Arts Council representative, noted Flint's "recognition that the education of an individual is the total environment of the individual".

Felix Walker of Trenton remarked that he found Flint had "no significant hippie sub - culture." This he attributed to the number of cultural and recreational activities available to young people.

He told the audience the Mott program could not be implemented by enthusiastic amateurs.

Should every story in Flint were quality people, professional people," he asserted.

However, Rev. Stanley Gentle of St. Columba's Church, Belleville, voiced some criticism of what he found in Flint.

He noted that the city churches had had no effective youth programs for eight years because "the community program takes care of every thing."

"I would like to see the churches included in the total program,' he remarked.

Mr. Gentle also commented that he found the Mott program worked well in economically and racially safe neighborhoods, but was less successful in the economically deprived racially troubled neighborhoods, for which it was designed.

In reply, Mr. Zerbe said middle-class people were more easily motivated to take advantage of the activities offered, but the lower classes were not as ready to become involved.

"Togetherness is the secret," summed up James Clarke, chairman of the Hastings County Board of Education who presided over the evening's discussions.

"If people can get together, we can accomplish more than if we stick to our own small groups," he said.

He mentioned examples of co-operation in Belleville — the park's board's involvement with the school board in Hillcrest playground, and the waiver of fees for educational, recreational and cultural groups using county schools.

"We've only begun," he said. "The important thing now is not to let it stop."

Theatre Guild Launches Subscription Campaign

The mood was optimistic and the organization businesslike as the Belleville Theatre Guild kicked off its season subscription campaign at a dinner meeting last night.

Theatre guild members gathered at the Pinnacle Playhouse on Pinnacle Street and enjoyed a meal of chili con carne and some information about the subscription sales campaign.

Emphasizing this season's theatre activities are the "inception of Belleville's first "youtheatre" and the construction of the only revolving stage in Eastern Ontario.

Season subscriptions are priced at $10 per person for adults and $5 per person for students.

A season subscription enables the patron to see all six plays and, in effect, enables the ticket holder to see one for free — something he would not be able to do if he bought tickets for each show separately.

This year the guild will perform Blithe Spirit, by Noel Coward, on Oct. 15 beginning its season on that date.

Other plays slated for this season include Wait Until Dark by Frederick Knott, Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf by Edward Albee and two other plays yet to be announced.

Youtheatre will perform Cloak and Dagger by Howard Richardson and William Berney. This show opens on Nov. 28.

Busy Days

It has been a long time since Belleville has seen such activities and activity as are being evidenced these days.

United Appeal Week is well under way with a variety of activities ranging from a steam engine trip to Anson Junction and old time fiddling and culminating with the official opening of the campaign on Saturday.

A key event of the week is tonight's beauty contest at Zwick's Island (or Centennial school in the event of rain) when Miss United Appeal will be chosen.

While these events are designed to entertain, the underlying significance of this week of course is the contribution the public can make to the 14 agencies served by the United Appeal.

They are the Red Cross, Victorian Order of Nurses, Retarded Youth, Boy Scouts, Blind persons, Minor Sports, Ontario Welfare Council, Canadian Welfare Council, YMCA, United Community Services, Arthritis and Rheumatism Society, Sea Cadets, Civic Action Committee and St. John's Ambulance.

The work of these agencies is known to most people, or evident from their titles. Behind the title United Community Services, however, it may not be generally realized there is a variety of activities aimed at community betterment.

The UCS supports volunteer programs with pre-school and handicapped children, an immigrant families program, a clothing depot and furniture exchange as well as a Christmas Bureau and program for the elderly. It also supplies volunteers for all non-profit organizations. Also under way under UCS auspices are a number of rehabilitation programs.

The Civic Action committee provides special material services to low income families and sponsors the meals-on-wheels service.

The end of the month of course will witness the opening of Belleville Week. It begins with the Masquerade Ball in Bleecker Hall and continues all the following week, culminating October 4 with Industrial Commission night and the official closing dinner.

All this activity is a measure of Belleville's growing public awareness as well as its material growth. The prospects for the future are encouraging. Meanwhile citizens are afforded the opportunity to do their part by making this another bumper year for the United Appeal.

'Coming Out'

Just as Canadians reached a new peak of nationhood during Centennial Year in 1967 so are they continuing to discover much in the wealth of earlier times in the life of this country.

Even in the gentler arts like the Debutantes' Ball at CFB Trenton recently, we have customs that are no longer preserved to the same extent even in tradition-conscious Britain.

Private parties and dances there still are in Britain, from hunt balls to "coming out" occasions. However, since the demise of the Queen Charlotte's Ball at the end of top debutante gatherings of the London season, some years ago, things have not been quite the same.

More people with the "wrong" accent are entering universities for example — and emerging in many cases with the "right" accent, although perhaps with overtones of the original which those born "right" can immediately recognize. But right or wrong, the process of democratization extends more widely throughout British society today.

It might be said to have begun with the rise to fame about 1963 of the Beatles, four lads with indubitably "wrong" accents but with gifts of poetic and musical expression which won world renown and even recognition by the Queen.

Thus, when they speak the Beatles have the flat accents of Liverpool, but when they sing, harmonize and compose timeless lyrics, they are in the world of art. And others, less celebrated but talented in many spheres, are also among the new elite in Britain today.

Meanwhile it is nice to know a girl can "come out" in style in Canada today, like the young ladies who were presented to Lt. Governor Ross MacDonald in Trenton recently.

Inflation Marches On

Is Prime Minister Trudeau Fighting A Losing Battle?

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau is having a little difficulty convincing people that he really can roll back the ever-rising tide of civil service costs. He is the fifth prime minister to try out for the part of a federal King Canute.

Not only were precious few, if any new civil servants to be added to the payroll, there would be 25,000 jobs fewer when all the culling and trimming and slashing and hacking of costs were done.

It did not mean, he was careful to add, that 25,000 would be losing their government jobs.

It was just, in that profession, when they were vacated by resignation, retirement or death, would not be filled.

That way, with luck, the government staff within the year would end up in a minus 25,000 job position, with few if any civil servants hurting.

That way, too, the bloated civil service salary increases could be financed by spreading more and better pay over fewer people.

And that way, he sort of half-promised, the taxpayers might escape any increases in rates in the next budget which Finance Minister Benson already is pledged to balance.

At that point, the prime minister's chairman of his new prices and incomes commission announced publicly that the government-approved average 18 percent over three years formula for civil service salary increases was "clearly inflationary."

And what kind of example is that to be setting by a government leading the fight against inflation?

What made it all the more confusing was that Treasury Board President Charles "Bud" Drury, the federal cabinet's money-man, had just finished saying that 18 percent was just dandy and clearly non-inflationary.

There are other things, too, accounting for the prime minister's widening credibility gap between promise and performance in the King Canute caper.

There was that $55,000-a-year raise for Bank of Canada Governor Louis Rasminsky.

There were those $12,000 increases for the five top deputy ministers.

There were those near-$5,000 boosts for senior foreign service officers, with some simply splendid fringe benefits, in external affairs.

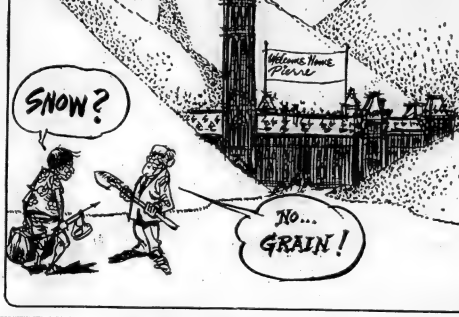
But most of all there is the simple arithmetic of continuing civil service proliferation.

Arithmetic calculated and confirmed by the Dominion bureau of statistics — and what more unimpeachable authority than DBS?

In the last 20 years, reports DBS, the federal civil service has tripled from 123,934 to 369,-254, and is still going up. The total includes federal crown corporations.

(So is the payroll, despite roll-backs, up from last year's $2,197,958,369 to a currently budgeted $2,383,715,096. And that is a very considerable increase of $185,756,718. That is exclusive of the crown corporations, too.)

DBS has figured it another way: the number of people employed by the federal government as a percentage of the total Canadian population has increased by almost 400.



Where not so long ago there was just a fraction of a federal civil servant, — point 37 — for every 100 Canadians, currently there are almost two, — one point eight, to be as precise as DBS.

Finally, as of last year — current totals still are being calculated — there were 7,051 federal employees being doing better than $13,000. (Add that 18 percent.)

And 1,238 being paid in excess of $18,000. (Plus 18 percent.)

Every year, through cut-back, roll-back, phase-out, crack-down weed-out, chop, lop and trim — as succeeding prime ministers and finance ministers have phrased the futile process — the civil service has rolled onward and upward.

Under former Prime Minister Pearson it hit a fast clip of 1,000 new jobs a month. And if Pierre Elliott Trudeau thinks he can reverse momentum like that, he will be a better man than Canute, Gunga Din.

Politics Affect A City's Fortunes

Brockville Recorder and Times

As silently as it slipped into Brockville, a branch of the federal government has folded its tent and silently slipped away. And it has been done without a satisfactory explanation.

About two years ago a great deal of wishful and dealing was done to bring a federal department of health water testing station to Brockville. It seems the branch office had been originally intended for Brockville and somehow or other it was sidetracked and became an item of federal government pride for Kingston. Brockville people, getting wind of the change made a strong play for fair play with the minister of health, through the then — federal member, John Matheson. The water testing station matter then became a highly charged political hot potato.

With two cities involved, Brockville first and then Kingston, both with Liberal members at the time, the federal government did the safe political thing in making a decision. It was decided to split the plum with the most of the fruit going to Kingston, with a bit for Brockville. This assures the federal government even took that bit away from us.

The loss of a water testing centre may not seem important to many people since it didn't employ too "many people. But every job in a community the size of Brockville is important. We cannot afford to lose one job.

But in a case such as this, where does a community turn for help? The Liberals, defeated in the 1968 election, shortly after lost their candidate, Mr. Matheson, when he was appointed a federal judge in Carleton county. The sitting member, Desmond Code, of Smiths Falls, is an opposition member and of little use in scoring a point with a government whose candidate he had defeated.

Hence the original hard work in securing the testing station has gone down the drain. Not only were the jobs lost to Brockville but the space rented in the city is still vacant. It's just one more vacant store as far as department of health officials are concerned. They now have their "show" in Kingston.

Had Brockville played its political cards right would the entire operation have been entrenched here rather than in Kingston? It's not likely. The location of the centre in Brockville for a year appears to have been but a sop that was quickly withdrawn when the city's political clout failed to impress.

Now, with Kingston's very prime minister and Kingston's were riding high . . . . with a cabinet minister to look after the city's needs.

George V of England signed the Irish Home Rule Act 55 years ago today—in 1914—but its implementation was suspended during hostilities of the First World War. By the time of the armistice, the Easter Rising of 1916 had hardened opinion on both sides and orderly progression to dominion status for Ireland was impossible. There followed repudiation of British proposals and civil war, first between Irish and English and then between Irish moderates and Irish extremists.

St. Leonard Affair

English and French at Odds

Ottawa Journal

One might have hoped that after more than a year the St. Leonard school dispute would have been quietly settled by reason of moderation on both sides when the initial passions had quieted.

How much easier it would have been to have worked out a solution a few months ago than it will now be after it by flying chairs of Wednesday night. How much better it would have been to have reached an agreement before the opening of another school year and thus have avoided invoking children in tension which they have not created.

The Ligue pour l'Integration Scolaire has adopted a, prehistoric and utterly unreasonable stand in trying to eliminate English-language education in St. Leonard. Old (or present) wrongs against French Canadians are no justification for perpetrating them against a minority seeking English education.

Quebec has a good record in protecting English language rights, a fact that makes Education Minister Cardinal's manoeuvrings and equivocations in the dispute all the more unsavory. Had Bill 85, giving the province the power to set aside certain decisions of local school-boards not been shelved at Cardinal's initiative during Premier Bertrand's illness last year, there would now exist a legal, orderly way to end the St. Leonard impasse.

Peterborough Examiner

The English-speaking parents in the Montreal suburb of St. Leonard have been denied any further political recourse since the community's school board decreed that English language instruction would be phased out, one year at a time, until the children now in Grade 3 are finished school.

Last year English language instruction was removed from Grade 1 so English - speaking families conducted their own classes in residence basements. This year it moves up to Grade 2.

But what about the French-speaking parents of St. Leonard? These parents also see English as the dominant language in a world that is quickly bearing down upon them. But their response is not to accept it and try to live within it.

They, rightly, see English as the language of imperialism. They see it as a language which comes with the backing of vast economic interests which seek to undermine their own unique culture and identity. These parents also seek to provide what is the very best for their children. But to them the very best means a rich heritage of the French culture, a heritage which soon becomes undermined when exposed to English imperialism.

Liberals Plan Future

Prince Edward - Hastings Liberal Association members last night decided to choose a candidate for the next federal election at an Oct. 15 meeting. Reeve George Cunningham of Ameliasburg (centre) announced his candidacy at the annual meeting. Association treasurer Anthony Diacar (left) and president Donald G. Joss of Belleville looked over the financial report.

Hees in Parade

Hi-Ho! They Loved Milford Fair

PICTON — Picton Junior Band led the big opening parade yesterday at Milford Fair, a miniature showcase of Prince Edward County.

Adding to the color of the parade were more than 30 horses and ponies, several floats and many decorated bicycles.

Forming part of the procession were the pupils of South Marysburg Centre School. Everybody loves a parade and the Hon. George Hees is no exception. Riding in the bucket of a front-end loader, he joined students and village residents marching from the town hall.

County Warden George Foster officially opened the Fair, assisted by Mr. Hees, Norris Whitney, MPP, and South Marysburg reeve Allan Ralley. President of this outstanding county fair is Herbert Moran.

A something-for-everyone-event, Milford Fair featured a wide range of displays. South Marysburg Centre School pupils contributed a fine art exhibit while villagers displayed fruits, vegetables and grain.

In the ladies' section, sewing and cooking exhibits pointed up the homemakers' enthusiasm for the country fair.

Sports events for all age groups filled the afternoon's entertainment bill. A log sawing contest won by Merton Bentley and Ken Minaker brought back pioneer days. The ladies competed in a rolling pin throw. Running races were also part of the day's program.

A baby contest judged by Phil Dodds saw year-old Allison Miller toddle off with the Sweepstakes Winner title.

Members of South Marysburg 4H Calf Club competed during the afternoon with Peggy Miller and Jim Whiteford winning the showmanship award. Winners in the A group for junior calves were Peggy Miller and Marilyn Walker. Senior calf group winners were Jim Whiteford and Jeff Vader.

A variety show in the former Milford Church Hall closed out the one-day rural fair.

Liberals Will Choose Candidate Oct. 15--3 Years Before Vote

BATAWA — The Liberal candidate for the federal riding of Prince Edward - Hastings will be chosen Oct. 15 at a meeting at Batawa recreation hall.

The decision to choose the candidate, three years in advance of the probable election date, was made last night at the annual meeting of the Prince Edward - Hastings Liberal Association.

Reeve George Cunningham of Ameliasburg has announced he will be in the running for election as a candidate. Mr. Cunningham was defeated as Liberal candidate for the riding at the last federal election by Conservative George Hees.

Donald G. Joss of Belleville was elected president of the riding Liberal Association for a second term.

Serving on the executive with him will be William Lane, vice president; Anthony Diacar, treasurer; Mel Doulton, secretary and William Mennies, Jerry Daca and Jim Forrestell directors.

Members turned down a resolution urging the government at Ottawa to implement the Carter report on taxation in its entirety. Also defeated was a resolution calling for the riding association to participate in municipal elections.

Members adopted a resolution calling for an increase in the $1,000 personal exemption from federal income tax, and another protesting the high costs of education and salaries paid top education al administrators.

Guest speaker Robin Russell, executive assistant to Ontario Liberal leader Robert Nixon, criticized the Robarts government's stand on medicare, education and regional government.

A financial report for the fiscal year showed September 1968 to September 1969 showed a total expenditure of $1,062. Of this, $1,000 is a fund held in reserve. Income of $3,177 was derived from memberships ($280), donations ($55), profit from the annual meeting ($21.50), an auction sale ($150), income from the presidents' club ($2,686) and interest ($812).

The balance on hand at the present time is $1,114. The association has a membership of about 350.

New Health Care Plan Described to PC Women

The Progressive Conservative Women's Association of Belleville held their first fall meeting in the form of a dinner at the Riverside Centre recently. Mrs. Clifford Rendell presided. At the conclusion of the dinner, Dr. R. T. (Dick) Potter, Quinte MPP conducted a discussion group and encouraged members to pass along their ideas and suggestions to him and assured them he welcomed their comments. In this way he could keep abreast of the views of the constituents, he said.

Dr. Potter is chairman of the health committee and the ladies took the opportunity of asking many questions regarding the new medical program.

Dr. Potter said that, in his opinion, a total health program would be developed, which would ensure individual proper medical care from the start of illness until complete recovery or transfer to a hospital for the chronically ill or nursing home. It would also include professional care in the home.

The current medical insurance program, OMSIP, now covers a person with no taxable income — they receive free medical care — those who have taxable income of less than $500 — the premiums are half — and those over the $500 taxable income pay full premiums.

The money which will be paid over by the federal government will assist with extended services —i. e. nursing schools, rehabilitation wings and other services on a priority basis.

One of the difficulties involved with being forced into Medicare by the federal government is the lack of trained personnel to go to the Northern points of the province, he said. However, he thought incentives may be offered to doctors and nurses to go to these outlying posts to service the residents there.

Dr. Potter was questioned about the Ontario Development Corporation program established two years ago by the province to encourage industry in slow growth areas. On behalf of this area Dr. Potter made representation to the province to have the program extended to Quinte, because no assistance was coming from Ottawa. Proof of the success of this program is in the many industries which have come to Quinte area or have extended their existing plants.

Dr. Potter stated that most people know the area is a wonderful place to live, and work and raise families. Industry just couldn't see the feasibility of locating here until the Ontario government gave financial assistance to encourage them.

Although the civic officials and Industrial Commission could help by extending many courtesies, the results came when financial assistance was made available, said Dr. Potter. Ten percent of all the money granted to Ontario communities has been given to Quinte riding.

Lee Grills, Hastings MP, also spoke and answered questions regarding federal matters.

The 1970 DATSUN 1000

$1845 from

SUGGESTED RETAIL PRICE F.O.B. VANCOUVER, TORONTO, MONTREAL, HALIFAX

You think maybe we left something out?

Check the list. Datsun 1000 has everything — and then some. It runs like a sports car, rides like a big car, sips gas like a cigarette lighter and wears like a tank.

You can get 100,000 miles between major overhauls, 12,000 between grease jobs, 84 mph. and up to 40 miles to the gallon. The whole neat little package moves out like a jackrabbit, corners on rails and stops on a nickel. And all this goodness comes in a choice of two or four doors, with room for four big people or five skinny ones.

With Datsun reliability, you won't see the inside of many service departments, but there are nearly 200, coast-to-coast. With over one million dollars' worth of parts.

The only thing Datsun 1000 needs is someone to love it. Someone like you.

Datsun 1000. There are plenty of cars in its price range. But nothing in its class.

Datsun 1000 is called the more-for-your-money car. And now you know why.

Only the radio is extra. Go ahead, spend a little.

Arctic Route Open To All, Says Sharp

TORONTO (CP) — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp says Canada welcomes the use of Arctic waters by all nations as a transportation route but only for peaceful purposes.

"This is not a time for wide-ranging assertions of Canadian sovereignty in the Arctic made without regard to the International political and legal considerations," he writes in an article in The Globe and Mail.

Mr. Sharp was invited by the newspaper to give his views of the significance to Canadians of the recent trip by the United States vessel Manhattan through the Northwest Passage.

"The world should know that canada welcomes the use of the Arctic waters as a transportation route for vessels o fall flags alid will endeavor to assure only that they are used for peaceful purposes and by suitable vessels operating in accordance with minimum standards of safety."

He stressed that the voyage of the Manhattan was not a test of Canada's sovereignty in the Arctic.

"Heretofore no one . . . could allege that the Northwest Passage is already an international strait under international law. If that were the case, we would not require now the massive effort which we are witnessing for the purpose of forcing one ship and two icebreakers through the passage.

"In other words we are not talking about established sea lanes or straits. . . .

Mr. Sharp adds that the general principles of international law may have to be applied in a special way in the case of frozen waters, "just as special rules are required in respect to the seabed and outer space, the two other environments comparable in the sense that the law is not yet fully developed."

"What is clear is that Canada's sovereignty over. Arctic waters is being steadily strengthened by developing concepts of international law and by our own activities.

"No one is directly challenging us—certainly not the voyage of the Manhattan—and there is no necessity for us to make sweeping assertions to reinforce our position. That might satisfy our ego but would not add a whit to the international acceptability of our position."

Byelection Issues Many

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The new Ontario government medical insurance plan, the recently established county school board system and the takeover of regional assessment by the government are all issues expected to influence voters when they go to the polls today in the Middlesex South byelection.

The riding has been held by the Conservatives for the last 25 years, largely with the help of the rural vote which accounts for about 60 per cent of the 32,613 eligible voters.

But increased costs through the new county school board system, no decrease in the cost of medical insurance and the removal of assessment power from the local level, could affect that rural support.

Candidates Weldon Allen (Progressive Conservative), David McDonald (Liberal) and Archdeacon Kenneth Bolton (New Democratic Party) all placed newspaper advertisements Wednesday focussing on the Ontario Health Services Insurance Plan to come into effect Oct. 1.

During the last week, NDP and Liberal candidates have charged the government has failed to use some of the $1 6,000,000 it will get from the federal government for the plan to reduce Ontario's premiums.

Premier John Robarts and Treasurer Charles MacNaughton denounced the criticisms at a rally for candidate Allen Saturday.

Harry Allen, Walden's father, held the seat from 1943 to 1963 when he retired. His son Weldon, whose death in February made the seat available, held the seat from 1963.

In the 1967 general election Mr. Olde took 9,423 votes. Liberal Leo Gent was second with 8,365 and NDP'er Kenneth C. Bolton, son of the Archdeacon Bolton, got 4,654 votes.

The riding is tucked into a pocket next to London North the premier's home riding and London South, seat of Revenue Minister John White.

The legislative standing shows PCs have 68 seats going into the byelection, Liberals 28 and the NDP 20. There are 117 seats in the house.

Quebec Problem

Shining Tarnished Image Not Easy

MONTREAL (CP) — Diligent efforts to restore a shine to Quebec's tarnished investment image are being hampered by a cross-fire from various elements both inside and outside the provincial government.

The battle by guvernment and industrial leaders to improves the investment climate in the province is made even more difficult by outbursts of physical violence and rash statements.

The latest in a long series of image-shattering outbursts came in the Montreal suburb of St. Leonard where a French-language group is attempting to eliminate English-language classes in Catholic elementary schools.

Incidents such as these bring shudders to responsible people given the task of improving Quebec's images in the eyes of outside investors and industrialists.

Spearheading this image-improving assignment are men such as Jean-Paul Beaudry, provincial minister of industry and commerce, and Paul Gobeil, an industrialist-lawyer directing the 16-member government-sponsored general council of industry.

Their task is made difficult not only by separatist and nationalist factions outside the government but also by some cabinet ministers whose statements arouse concern that they may have separatist or nationalist sympathies.

They are apprehensive each time say cabinet minister does not speak clearly on the question of language or education rights of Quebec's minority groups.

Recently, Labor Minister Maurice Bellemare said certain Anglo-Saxon activists were among those planting bombs.

Mr. Bellemare later watered down his statement by blaming bombings and other disturbances on immigrants from Algeria and elsewhere.

But his original reference to Anglo-Saxons, which aroused indignation among English-speaking people, appeared to have done its damage.

Paul Allard, Quebec natural resources minister, has said that to attract producing capital it is essential for "Quebec's social climate to undergo some radical changes, and the government must definitely put an end to the harmful and disastrous activities of a handful of terrorists and fomenters of public disorder."

Louis Hebert, president of the Banque Canadienne Nationale, has said there is a danger of a fresh flight of capital from Quebec and of new capital going elsewhere.

He said that controversy such as that in St. Leonard made investors nervous.

Another cabinet minister, Marcel Masse, had gained a reputation for what some considered to be economically-harmful statements, but since his appointment as minister of inter-governmental affairs his public comments have been moderate.

Mr. Masse's job includes the running of Quebec government offices abroad, and perhaps the feedbacks from these offices have impressed on him the extent of damage caused by terrorist or pro-separatist activities in the province.

Both Mr. Beaudry and Mr. Guimet have worked hard since the formation, by order-in-council, of the General council of industry early this year.

Mr. Guimet grouped together some of the most illustrious industrial and financial leaders in Quebec to help him direct a program to improve the province's image and thus increase capital investment.

Course Choice Goes Awry

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — An experiment allowing senior students at the University of Western Ontario to shop around before committing themselves to courses has gone awry with the result that some classes have no standing room.

According to the plan established by the registrar's department, the scheme would have worked out had it not been for the unexpected crowd of freshmen who flooded courses normally open to only senior students.

Under the plan, upperclassmen are attending classes at random during the first two weeks of courses. All are supposed to be enrolled by Sept. 30.

In former years, students were assigned courses on the day of registration. When the courses were filled they chose alternatives.

Nasser Ill But Thwarts Replacement

From AP-Reuters

President Gamal Abdel Nasser is reported out of action indefinitely due to illness, but it isn't clear who is running Egypt.

Meanwhile, a Lebanese newspaper said the Egyptian president has begun a purge of pro-Moscow elements in his Arab Socialist Union, a move seen by observers as an attempt to thwart Soviet efforts to replace him.

The semi-official Cairo newspaper Al Ahram reported today that the 51-year-old president came down with an "acute influenza infection" following the Arab summit meeting in Cairo two weeks ago and is under the care of three doctors.

Al Ahram said Nasser's illness became more serious as he "persisted in his work because of the importance of the summit and the military revolution in Libya." The newspaper said the doctors had ordered complete rest and cancellation of all official appointments for an indefinite period.

Nasser is also said to have a circulatory ailment.

Nasser is known to suffer from diabetes and was reported in 1966 to have given up smoking on advice from Soviet doctors.

Last year he spent three weeks being treated in a Soviet Black Sea spa for a leg ailment.

Jordanian Prime Minister Bahjat Talhouni had reported Wednesday that he had been unable to meet with Nasser during an official visit to Cairo this week because the president was ill and "under constant medical care."

Talhouni said Nasser had delegate Anwar Sadat, chairman of the National Assembly, receive a letter King Hussein had written to Nasser. But there was no other indication that Sadat was taking over the reins.

The Beirut newspaper Al Jarida said Nasser had postponed a trip to the Soviet Union that was scheduled for Sept. 23 because he feared that a Soviet-engineered plot to overthrow him was being planned.

The report said Nasser had purged several of his top pro-Russian colleagues, headed by former prime minister Ali Sabry, for many years one of Nasser's closest aides.

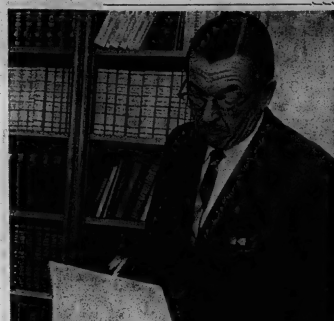
Al Jarida reported "informed Egyptians" said the Russians intended to replace Nasser with Sabry during Nasser's stay in the Soviet Union. The report said the Kremlin wanted a change because of a disagreement over Nasser's demand for more arms "and on the Middle East question as a whole."

Al Jarida said relations between Nasser and Sabry always have been tense and that the situation became further inflamed recently when Sabry returned from a visit to Moscow with a load of expensive furniture.

There was no official confirmation that purge had taken place. But Cairo announced Tuesday that there had been changes in the top echelon of the newspaper Al Akhbar, and the paper's top men were known to be close to Sabry.

Elsewhere in the Middle East:

The Moslem Council of Jerusalem said Wednesday that the Al Aksah Mosque, damaged by fire Aug. 21, probably will open again for prayers and the start of repair work by the weekend.



The joint Arab-Israeli committee which investigated the fire said it will present its findings to the government next week. Israel is holding Michael Roban, an Australian, on charges of setting the fire.

Arab saboteurs touched off explosive charges on the Gaza Strip railway line during the night, the Israelis reported today.

A Tel Aviv military court sentenced an Arab carpenter to life imprisonment Wednesday on his conviction of assembling a bomb that exploded in the Hebrew University cafeteria last March, injuring 29 persons.

The court said Mustafa Hasan Ibrahim Samara, 36, of Nablus, prepared the bomb and then gave it to a girl, Marian Apahakshir, 19, who planted it in a corner of the cafeteria of the university in Jerusalem.

The girl already has been sentenced to life imprisonment.

Dief the Chief Says Respect Reward Enough

OTTAWA (CP) — The member of Parliament for Prince Albert turns 74 today and he says he hasn't felt better in years.

"You don't see many days when I am absent from the House of Commons," John Diefenbaker said in a private pre-birthday interview.

Mr. Diefenbaker, even while leaning back with his legs crossed in his swivel chair in his parliamentary office, still seems larger than life. Although less sure of step, there is no image of the frailty of the old.

"I don't know how I look for a man my age," he said. "But I would take on any of these behind for a run—anybody 45 or over."

He still takes a daily 40-minute walk around 6 a.m. "on the double" through treed suburban Rockcliffe, where he lives quietly in a house with his wife, Olive.

It is an ironic footnote that Mr. Diefenbaker lives among the moneyed elite, the kind of people that he was never really at home with.

A Rockcliffe neighbor is his greatest oldtime political rival, former prime minister Lester Pearson, now retired from politics.

Shorn of power, living largely on reputation, he indulges himself in the popular non-partisan feeling for him that has grown up since his rejection by his own party in 1967.

"The affection that is shown to me across this country by those of all political faiths is one of the greatest rewards that anyone can have in life," he said.

He is on the go much of the time delivering speeches. He has time to accept only one of 10 invitations.

Today, he'll be in Winnipeg to deliver a birthday speech to the Canadian Council of Christians and Jews which has given him their 1969 human relations award.

Mr. Diefenbaker says he has had many offers to return to work as a trial lawyer.

"But I've appointed so many of the judges, I feel it would be indiscreet to appear before them." They might be biased in his favor.

Outside the Parliament buildings, Mr. Diefenbaker's tall, straight figure is quickly recognized by tourists, particularly immigrants. His lifelong theme of the importance of an equal break for all-adopteated Canadianism—is still remembered.

His small office staff gave him a birthday cake Wednesday in his office, a day ahead of time because he would be absent today on the Winnipeg trip.

His birthday message was a reflection of his political career in which the call to arms, the pitched battle in the political arenas of the country and the ringing declaration were the mark of the man.

But still the current politician, he said he wanted above all in 1969 a clear and unequivocal declaration that the disputed waters between the islands of the Arctic archipelago belong to Canada.

Test Blast Could Make Tidal Wave

VANCOUVER (CP) — A University of British Columbia seismologist said Wednesday that nuclear test explosions planned by the United States in the Aleutian Islands could trigger earthquakes which could start tidal waves sweeping across the entire Pacific Basin.

"I think there is a definite danger involved here," Dr. Robert M. Ellis, assistant professor of geophysics at UBC, said in an interview. "I think they're taking a chance and there could be actions triggered which could have a disastrous effect."

The test explosions are to be conducted started in October by the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission on the desolate island of Amchitka in the Aleutians.

Dr. Ellis said he understands at least one test explosion will be of 1.2-megaton yield—more than 15 times greater than a U.S. nuclear test in Alaska in 1965, which resulted in small earthquakes.

He said the west coast of Vancouver Island likely would bear the brunt of any tidal waves resulting from an earthquake.

The U.S. government has announced it will begin the series with a blast of about one-megaton yield. It says the full series will be cancelled if the first blast gives any hint of trouble.

Four British Girls Advertise for Male Friends

TORONTO (CP) — Four British girls who declared themselves unhappy with the men they have met in Canada advertised in a newspaper Monday for better ones.

Before they took their telephone receiver off the hook late Monday they had collected more than 40 prospective names.

The women, aged 21 to 24, said they wish to be anonymous.

They have a system to help weed out undesirables. They take turns answering the phone but the name, age and occupation of the caller and tell him to call back later for a luncheon appointment. And they plan to go to the lunches in pairs.

When they sort out their grab-bag they hope to have a steady male friend each.

Their rhyming ad in the personal column read:

Hear Ye! Hear ye!
Four desponded damsels sad
Cry out to knights in armor clad.
Bold and fearless may they be
To fill these woeful hearts with glee.
So Anglo-Saxons—a challenge sets!
Come hither and rescue these maidens fayre!

The four work in offices. Two are secretaries, one is a legal assessor and the fourth works with an architect.

Asked to describe their ideal men, they formed this consensus:

His should be reasonably well-educated, decisive and generous with an adequate supply of money.

Presentation Held For Young Couple

RAWDON — A presentation party was held September 13 in Carmel-Rawdon hall in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Myles McDonald, recently married. Present were members of the Carmel community and the River Valley Women's Institute.

Master of ceremonies was Glen Hubel. Included in the entertainment were songs and the reading of a number of humorous selections.

After being given seats of honor, Myles and Linda were presented with gifts of furniture. Near the end of the evening the committee in charge served refreshments.

ST. COLUMBA WOMEN

"Work in the Everyday World" was under discussion at the September meeting of the Presbyterian Women of St. Columba Church held at the home of Mrs. J. Ballas, Redonnerville Road.

Mrs. G. Devolin led the study period. Mrs. D. Barton told how housewives, office workers, and others can and must find time for God and His purpose in life.

As the offering was received Mrs. D. Taylor spoke on the work the group's money is used for in Canada and the World under the direction of the Women's Missionary Society.

Mrs. B. Hackett, president, presided for the business meeting. Plans were made for an interior home decorating show, the usual St. Columba Christmas cake project and a shower of tea towels at the December meeting.

Refreshments were served by the committee in charge.

U.C.W. Meetings

MOUNT PLEASANT - RAWDON UCW

Twenty-five women attended the September meeting of the UCW at Mount Pleasant - Rawdon Church.

Presiding over the meeting was Mrs. Burton Hayes. Tuesday afternoon, October 7, several groups will be entertained. Mrs. W. C. Orr and Mrs. Kenneth Weever gave a resume of the recent conference held at Albert College and closed with a sing song.

The program was arranged by Mrs. Garth Gaby and Mrs. Frank Spencer. Contributors were Mrs. Mac Sharpe and Mrs. Milton Shaw. Giving the devotional were Mrs. Robert Hoard, Mrs. James Hoard and Mrs. Percy MacMullen.

After the business period refreshments were provided by the president and Mrs. Irwin Potts.

91st. Birthday Held at Home

Robert Hill, a native of the Tyendinaga Reserve, was 91 years old on September 15. He has been a resident of the Belcrest Nursing Home on the Trent Road for several months.

In spite of his handicaps, Mr. Hill knows that the Mohawk Fair is coming up next Saturday and he is hoping to be there in a wheel chair. If he misses this fair it will be the first one he missed since the fairs were first held, as he is a charter member and a constant supporter.

The large white house near All Saints Church which is home to Mr. Hill is one of the best known houses on the reserve. Mrs. Hill began a collection of articles dealing with the history of the reserve and her son, Melville, who now lives there, has continued it on. Among the treasured exhibits is the Queen Anne communion silver of which Mr. Hill and his son are the custodians.

HOLY ROSARY CWL

At the recent meeting of Holy Rosary CWL the question "What do we expect the Catholic Women's League to do for us and what can we do for it?", was put forward by the president, Mrs. Mulvihill.

During the short business period Mrs. D. Clement noted that membership had risen to 202. Mrs. Mulvihill thanked those who worked on summer projects such as the children's picnic, wedding catering and meals on wheels. She also reported on her trip to the diocesan dinner.

After the business meeting, coffee and doughnuts were served as the group made preparations for the annual bazaar.

Hospital Auxiliary Holds Tea, Bake Sale

NAPANEE — Holding its fall tea at the Church of St. Mary Magdalene last Wednesday afternoon, the Auxiliary of the Lennox and Addington County General Hospital was prepared to welcome its guests either in the church garden or in the parish hall. The hall was chosen but it was almost turned into a garden by the profusion of garden flowers of every color.

Mrs. F. N. Burke was in charge of the decorating committee, with Mrs. James Hepburn and Mrs. F. Barrett assisting her in arranging the large baskets which were in the windows. The other arrangements were placed in strategic positions and 24 small ones centred the tables.

Receiving the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Mills, hospital administrator: Col. and Mrs. H. L. Armstrong; Mrs. H. L. Chapman representing the Board of Governors; Mrs. C. D. Quirt, the president and Miss Gladys Gehan, the secretary of the association.

Mrs. C. S. Metcalfe headed the committee. Pouring in turn from the silver tea services were out-of-town guests, officers of hospital auxiliaries in District 8. They were the president, Mrs. Charity Clarke; the past president, Mrs. Beeby; Mrs. B. J. Burley from Belleville General Hospital; Mrs. Harry Slaven from Picton Memorial Hospital and four women from Kingston: Mrs. Blenkinson of the General Hospital; Mrs. D. G. Hooper of the Hotel Dieu Hospital; Mrs. Garfield Platt of Ongwanada Hospital and Mrs. R. J. Allain of St. Mary's-on-the-Lake Hospital.

Members and friends of the auxiliary served the guests and Mrs. Harry Edgar, Mrs. H. L. Babcock and Mrs. Vivian Rich were busy in the kitchen.

Mrs. Malcolm Isbester, convening the cooking tables, had many assistants. Guests flocked to the table to admire the many good things displayed there and make their selections.

For the occasion, Mrs. Denis Rodrigues, Mrs. G. Wynne and Mrs. A. E. T. Thomson practically moved the contents of their hospital gift shop to St. Mary Magdalene's Church hall and did a thriving business. Arrangements of artificial flowers prepared especially for Wednesday's event were popular items. Mrs. Lillian Klonicks, a volunteer in the gift shop, was helpful on this occasion.

During the afternoon, Mr. Dan Hunt became the owner of a beautiful hooked rug, the work and gift of Mrs. R. L. Chapman.

Club Activities

XI BETA ZETA CHAPTER

The XI Beta Zeta Chapter, Beta Sigma Phi, held its first meeting of the coming year in the form of an informal dessert and coffee party, at the home of Mrs. Arthur Brooks.

During the evening, plans for the fashion show on September 30 were discussed. Mrs. Richard Mildmee volunteered to act as the chapter representative to the co-ordinating committee.

As a Ways and Means project last year, the chapter sold Christmas cards designed by a child patient at the Belleville Mental Health Clinic and the proceeds went to the Psychiatric Unit of the Belleville General Hospital. The venture was so successful that it is being continued this year with the present cards featuring a new design drawn by another patient at the Mental Health Clinic. The proceeds will again go to the Psychiatric Unit at the Hospital. Each member of the chapter is working to double the number of cards sold last year.

Everyone present enjoyed the assortment of desserts provided by the social committee, convened by Mrs. James Clarey.

BELLEVILLE JAYCETTES LADIES' AUXILIARY

The Belleville Jaycettes, Ladies' Auxiliary of the Junior Chamber of Commerce held its monthly dinner meeting last evening at the Sun Luck Gardens. It took the form of an inter-unit visit with Jaycettes and visitors from Brockville, Kingston, Napanee and Picton.

Marion Wardell chaired the meeting. Guest speaker for the evening was Zdenek Kvarda, a Jaycee Senator. His address concerned the community and he encouraged everyone to participate in community affairs and to have his voice heard. He was thanked by Fran Moon.

After a short business meeting the girls exchanged ideas and became better acquainted.

A POOR LOSER?

Police are probing the case of the petunia plucker in Philadelphia's prettiest place. For the last 5 years, the 2200 block North Sydenham Street has taken first place in the Pretty Street contest. According to block chairman Naomi Lewis, judges have been swayed by decorative window boxes displaying petunia arrangements in front of the 60 homes on the block. This year, someone took the petunias. She told police she suspects the culprit may be a poor loser because even the roots are missing.

MR. AND MRS. DOUGLAS N. JAMIESON

Jamieson – Stoneburg

On Saturday, August 30, Darlene Esther Stoneburg became the bride of Douglas Norman Jamieson in Holloway St. United Church, Belleville. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Stoneburg, RR 2, Trenton and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Jamieson, Toronto. The double-ring ceremony was performed by Rev. William Lamb. Mrs. E. Hubbs was organist and Miss Susan Rutledge sang two solos.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length wedding gown of white organza. The short sleeved empire bodice was trimmed with rosette appliques carrying through to the A-line skirt. A round neckline added to the bodice. The cathedral length train of organza flowed gracefully from the high waist to the floor. It was also appliqued with rosettes. To complete her bridal outfit the bride wore a four-tier organza veil held in place by rose petals and seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of yellow and white carnations.

Miss Susan Brooks, maid of honor, and bridal attendants Miss Ann Todd and Miss Debra Jones, niece of the bride, wore floor-length gowns of yellow crimpolene and carried bouquets of mauve carnations. The flower girl, Michelle Courour, niece of the bride, was dressed identically to the other girls and carried a basket of mixed flowers.

Ringbearer was Peter Courour, nephew of the bride. Best man was Mr. J. Epping. The ushers were Robert Jamieson, brother of the groom, and John Reider of London.

The dinner was held at the Dolcliff Mill Inn, Trenton. The bride's mother received the guests wearing a pink dress with rose accessories and a white carnation corsage. The groom's mother chose an aqua dress with lace trim, aqua accessories and a pink corsage.

For travelling the bride chose a yellow crepe dress with a sleeveless white lace coat, brown accessories and a bronze corsage.

Mr. and Mrs. Jamieson are residing at 422 Hill St., London.

Marysville CWL Hears Highlights of Meeting

The September meeting of the CWL was held Tuesday evening in Holy Name of Mary School and was well attended.

The president, Mrs. Don McLaren presided and welcomed the members especially those new in the parish. She gave the highlights of the executive meeting which she had attended recently in Kingston.

Members were urged to attend the regional meeting in Trenton, October 5. It is most important that chairmen of the standing committees attend. Members were reminded to send cards and letters to the sick. Mrs. McLaren wished the leaders of the 4-H group much success in their new undertaking and offered some financial assistance if needed.

The program for the coming year, which had been decided upon at the executive meeting was discussed, the meetings should prove to be most interesting and educational.

Mrs. Francis Maloney will convene the October meeting. Mr. Coulon from the Family and Children's Services of Hastings County will be the guest speaker.

The plans for the bazaar which is to be held later in September were discussed. All members are expected to contribute to the various tables, the draw for the cash prizes, quilt and basket of groceries will be held in the evening at the bingo.

Previous to her marriage, Mrs. Douglas Jamieson (nee Darlene Stoneburg) was honored at two showers. The first was at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Stoneburg, Belleville. The second was given by the food supervising staff of the Victoria Hospital, London, where the bride is employed.

MR. AND MRS. DALE WILLIAM VADER

Vader – Young

St. Thomas Anglican Church was the scene of the recent wedding of Mary Elizabeth Young, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Young, Belleville, and Dale William Vader, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Vader, Belleville. Rev. P. Tett officiated at the double-ring ceremony. He was assisted by Rev. J. W. Lamb. Mr. D. Davenport was the organist.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length gown of peau de soie with appliqued floral lace encircling the waist, skirt and elbow-length sleeves. The dress featured a scooped neckline and a flowing train of appliqued lace, caught at the back of the waist with a bow. Her headpiece was a wreath-type design covered with basket weave lace and a circlet of small flowers highlighted by seed pearls. A wrist-length tiered tulle veil completed her headpiece. She carried a sheaf of white mums with pink and yellow roses.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Albert Young, sister-in-law of the bride, wore a sleeveless pale blue floor-length gown of crepe encircled at the waist with lace and rhinestone applique. The train was appliqued as well in dainty designs. Pale blue bows and layers of net completed the headdress. She carried a basket of autumn flowers with ivy.

Bridesmaids were Miss Cheryl Vader, sister of the bridegroom, Mrs. Robert Prevost, Waterloo, and Mrs. Cathy Smith, Peterborough. They were dressed identically to the matron of honor and all carried baskets of autumn flowers with ivy.

Best man was Albert Young, brother of the bride, and ushers were David Pulman, Dennis Lee and Ronald Young, brother of the bride.

At the reception in St. Thomas Parish Hall the mother of the bride greeted the guests wearing a turquoise brocade coat and dress ensemble with matching accessories. A corsage of white mums centred with pink roses completed her attire.

The groom's mother assisted wearing a lime green dress and coat ensemble of shantung enhanced with a beaded rolled collar. She wore a mink-colored feathered hat with matching accessories and a corsage of mums centred with yellow roses.

For the wedding trip to Toronto and to points south the bride chose a pale blue brocade dress and coat ensemble with white accessories and a gardenia corsage.

The couple will reside at 224 Dufferin Ave., Belleville.

Young – Prevost

TWEED — The wedding took place in St. Edmund's Church, Sioco, when Laura May Prevost, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Prevost was united in marriage to Robert Ross Young, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Young, Corbyville, formerly of Sulphide. Rev. J. C. Counsell officiated at the ceremony. Mrs. Lawrence LeSage was organist and Richard Whalen and Ronald LaValee sang several duets.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length sheath-style wedding gown of chiffon over taffeta, featuring a round neckline and long lily point sleeves. Falling from her shoulders was a cathedral train. Holding her shoulder length veil of silk organza in place was a floral headdress. She carried a cascade of red roses.

Mrs. Paul Bosley, sister of the bride was matron of honor. She was gowned in a berry pink dress of silk organza over taffeta,featuring a high neckline trimmed with matching lace and long lace-trimmed sleeves. A matching lace-trimmed train fell from the shoulders.

The bridesmaids were Mrs. Harry Holman, Peterborough, sister of the bride, Miss Sally Carniff, Belleville and Miss Karen Young, sister of the bridegroom. They were identically gowned in dresses of capri blue styled like that of the matron of honor. Their headdresses were floral tulle veils of matching color. They carried bouquets of tinted mums.

The flower girl was Miss Lori Prevost, niece of the bride, dressed in a blue dress with net overskirt, she carried a tinted nosegay of mums.

Ringbearer was Ross Young brother of the bridegroom. Ushers were Leonard Kehoe, Gerard Hotts and Wayne Prevost.

For the wedding dinner and reception in St. Edmund's Hall Mrs. Prevost welcomed the guests wearing a pink ensemble, white accessories and a corsage of white mums and red roses. Mrs. Young assisted wearing a princess style blue dress and a corsage of mums and yellow roses.

For the wedding trip to Niagara Falls and other points west, the bride donned a yellow ensemble and wore a Corsage of mums and yellow roses.

The couple is residing in Belleville.

Successful Living

Everyone Should Take A Break

By DORIS CLARK

Breaks are the order of the day. A short coffee break, after two or three hours of concentration, improves efficiency. We know that a long weekend and an annual vacation are invaluable to the way of life of the city worker. We need times to let down taut nerves.

Just how much does the homemaker give herself a break? Ten minutes to sit down with a cup of tea or coffee after everybody is off to school or work can be a life-saver, in the long run.

I made life-saver. Our students need to know this too. Rather than boring over the books hour after hour, there should be a ten-minute break and a return to something different to do. A different subject to study, perhaps.

We'd have fewer heart cases among our male executives in their 40's, if they would simply walk out on the whole caboodle and take a walk around the block, round about 10:30 every morning.

Humans are so constituted that when we get up tight and stay that way too long, something has to crack. Far better to let down before we fall down!

* * *

Dear Doris: I have this dreadful habit of blushing when I get a little excited or nervous and when I blush, my throat's desert me completely. I read somewhere that one is supposed to outgrow blushing at 30 (I'm 20) but I can't afford to wait and see.

Another thing about me is that I only look about 21 and

DORIS CLARK

I'm often embarrassed to admit how old I really am. But apparently most people try and appear younger than they are. — No Confidence

Dear No Confidence: Part of the battle is to stop worrying about blushing. When something excites you, your heart beats a little faster and the blood is inclined to race to the skin, especially in the face.

You are aware of this warm blush, think everyone will see it and worry some more. Then the heart beats faster still and the pink turns red.

The leaflet I am sending you suggests some merely physical things which may help, such as avoiding certain foods and drinks which seem to bring on blushing.

And why on earth worry about looking younger than you are? This is a bonus, not a handicap. But be sure to act your age.

* * *

Confidential to "Teens Leader": I am sending you the leaflet, "What Do I Do Now?" Other suggestions for a teen-age club would be:

1. Run a short course in baby-sitting. A public health nurse, a policeman and a fireman could give talks on handling emergencies when you are in charge of a baby. Have a written test at the end of the course and give certificates to the graduates.

2. Have discussions about pop music versus the classics; pop art versus the Old Masters; modern architecture versus old world buildings that have been standing for centuries.

3. Have a night when everybody in the group brings a report of what his or her father does for a living. This one can start all kinds of questions and answers — and may bring a wrish from Pop himself — at which time the teens might put him on the Hot Seat.

Are you in doubt about the proper etiquette to use for your special occasion? Ask Doris, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for her reply.

Ann Landers

White Wedding Plans Questioned by Father

Dear Ann Landers: Change the name of the city. I would like if anyone knew about this.

Our daughter, Linda, age 21 and a college senior plans to be married when she graduates next June. Linda and Tom, her fiance, were seated around the dinner table last night. Also present was our 18-year-old son and our 16-year-old daughter. We were discussing plans for the wedding. Linda said she had always wanted to be married in the traditional white wedding gown and veil. Her father said, and I quote, "Are you entitled to that privilege?"

ANN LANDERS

Linda turned red and replied, "What do you mean by THAT?" Her dad answered, "Are you a virgin?" Linda shot back, "What is this, the Spanish Inquisition?" Her dad replied, "If I pay for a white wedding gown I want to make sure I am not being short-changed."

Linda became indignant and shouted, "Do you want an affidavit from our family doctor?" Her dad replied, "Yes".

Both Linda and her fiance left the table. I was on the verge of tears. Our two other children were baffled.

What do you think of this? Hurry for your comment.—Wrecksville USA.

Dear Wreck: I think your husband's request is outrageous. Try to persuade him to unbexid his brains and give the girl a white wedding gown with no further discussion.

* * *

Dear Ann Landers: My husband has been pampered, spoiled and catered-to all his life. In the past ten years he has had affairs with four women that I know of. He always says he is sorry and promises to behave himself.

He's at it again. Divorce is out. What shall I do, Ann? Please don't tell me to take up bowling. I did that last time and it didn't help—Anchorage Dilemma.

Dear Anc: Many factors should be considered. Are there children? Is he a good father? Is there enough money for separate maintenance? How serious is his cheating? Does he become emotionally involved with women or is he just flexing his adolescent muscles? Does he cheat openly and parade town with the bimbos or does he have enough sense to keep them out of sight? Each woman must decide for herself if she gains or loses by throwing the bum out. Sometimes the cure is worse than the sickness.

* * *

Dear Ann Landers: Your advice to Nightmare Revisited was excellent. She was the woman who had a severe anxiety problem, connected with a difficult pregnancy. I, too, had a problem. My child was born with a blood disorder. The baby lived but I was told that the same blood problem would probably be present in other children. The fear of getting pregnant again made me hate sex. Even a kiss on the cheek produced nausea. I refused to let my husband near me. It very nearly put an end to our marriage.

Thank God I had a physician who cared and psychiatrist who was patient and wise. Without them I couldn't have made it. Keep urging people to get professional help. It saved me.—N.B.

Dear N.B.: I shall. Thanks for writing.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Bread and Butter Pickles Easy to Make

By MARY MOORE

Some of you have been writing for recipes for those commercial bread and butter type pickles to which the manufacturer has cleverly added some colorful sliced vegetables to contrast with the cucumber slices.

Nonchalantly on my slicing machine I sliced cucumbers and carrots directly into the clean pickle crock, added some cut-up green onions and brined them. The next step on the following morning was so easy I think it will entice many inexperienced pickle makers to the pickling sorority.

VARIETY BREAD AND BUTTER PICKLES (4 pints)

Five 8" washed slender cucumbers
Four 6" scrubbed slender carrots
1 cup cut-up (¼") green onions (no green tops)
½ cup salt
2 cups granulated sugar
2 cups cider vinegar
¼ tsp. turmeric
½ tsp. whole cloves
½ tsp. dill seed
1 tsp. mustard seed

If you do not have a slicing machine use the slicing side of your four-sided shredder to slice the cucumbers and carrots wafer thin into a crock or porcelain bowl. If you have a hand or electric slicing machine this step is a breeze. Add cut-up onions and by hand mix in the salt. Cover with a plate and weight down with a clean rock and let stand overnight.

In the morning drain well through colander.

Bring all remaining ingredients to boil in large pot, reduce heat, simmer five minutes. Add drained brined vegetables and bring just to boil. Remove from heat. Using a small pitcher pour into four sterilized pint jars and seal. I used Mason jars with vacuum pull disc lids. Ready in one month.

(NOTE: I have to admit that out of curiosity I opened one jar after three days and the pickles were great.

Montego & Cyclone '70

Two new lines of cars with all new engineering performance and styling.

Cyclone and Montego: two exciting, totally-new entries from Mercury that are right between the big cars and the compacts. The styling is completely new with bold, sweeping lines. The performance is hot with engines that range from a lively 250 cubic inch Six to a hot 429 4-barrel V8. The choice is exceptional with models to meet every need. Montego offers four sleek hardtops, three elegant sedans and two great station wagons. Cyclone offers three ideas to take performance enthusiasts by storm: Cyclone, Cyclone GT and, the hottest of them all, Cyclone Spoiler.

See Montego and Cyclone. They're young . . . exciting . . . and very new.

Within every new Montego lives the soul of Cyclone.

Marquis '70

The medium price car with the most dramatic styling since Continental Mark III.

Marquis for 1970 is a masterpiece of dramatic lines and rich appointments that speak of automobiles in a far more expensive class. Hidden headlights, 390 CID V8 engine, rich wood-grain interior accents, full deep pile carpeting, incomparable ride and effortless handling, are all standard on Marquis. Choose Marquis or Marquis Brougham in 2 or 4 door hardtop or 4 door sedan. Two wagons: Marquis and Marquis Colony Park, Canada's most luxurious station wagon.

Big Four Lead Way

Nixon's Opening Speech to Be Key to UN Peace Hopes

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — The newly-opened General Assembly gets its first indication today of what success it can hope for in dealing with many of the world's trouble areas.

The indication will come when United States President Nixon speaks at the assembly's plenary session, the first of a long list of dignitaries who will address the assembly in the coming weeks.

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko is scheduled to speak Friday and British Foreign Secretary Michael Stewart Monday.

Little can be achieved in a substantive way at the UN without the co-operation of the big powers. Thus the opening speeches of Big Four leaders are studied closely for hints of things to come. Even the tone of a speech can be indicative of the way things will go.

Nixon in his address is expected to plead for peaceful solutions of international problems ranging from Vietnam to the Middle East.

Administration sources indicated in advance that Nixon's presentation of U.S. foreign policy to the assembly session would not depart in any major way from general themes he already has set forth.

Peace through negotiations, not confrontation, has been advocated by the president since he took office in January. The policy has been applied in such forums as the Paris talks on Vietnam and Big Four discussions on the Middle East.

The assembly's steering committee may come to grips today with the controversial question of whether the Roman Catholic-Protestant battles of Northern Ireland are of concern to the UN.

The Irish Republic has asked that the Northern Ireland situation be placed on the assembly's agenda and Wednesday won support from the Soviet Union in the 25-member committee.

But the committee decided to postpone consideration after Britain's Lord Caradon appealed to Ireland's External Affairs Minister Patric Hillery to withdraw his application.

Caradon said that Britain is taking urgent steps to rectify the situation in Ulster and debate before the UN at this time would do great harm.

Hillery said that Britain has been proposing reforms for 50 years but nothing had come of them. He said he could not give an immediate answer to Caradon's appeal.

Caradon also mentioned that the whole situation was an internal affair of Britain and thus out of the scope of UN debate. But Ireland, which was unsuccessful in an attempt at Security Council debate, has emphasized human rights which is within the scope of the UN.

Jacob Malik of the Soviet Union said Northern Ireland is divided along religious lines with the government in the hands of the Protestants. There was discrimination against the overwhelming majority of the "oppressed."

Exports Suffering

Nickel Strikes Causing Layoffs in Plants of Primary Users

TORONTO (CP) — Some major nickel users say strikes at the Sudbury operations of International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd. and Falconbridge Nickel Mines Ltd. are setting back their production and forcing the layoff of some employees.

"The situation is extremely critical," G. R. Heffernan, president of Lake Ontario Steel Co. Ltd., of Whitby, Ont., said Wednesday. "We are losing export business at the rate of several hundred thousand dollars a week."

He said the company is cutting out nickel where possible from its steel products.

Others interviewed expressed similar dismay at the continuation of the strikes. The Inco strike began in July and Falconbridge in August.

In the Toronto area, Industrial Electro Plating Ltd., says it may have to layoff a third of its current work force of 60.

"We have no stocks of nickel left. . . . We're just scrambling for material," said President John Cowan.

"The general feeling is there is nickel available but at a premium of between 500 and 600 per cent over the producer price ($1.11 a pound). I was offered some Russian nickel from a Montreal source at 95 a pound this week.

"We'll just have to cut back on serving customers."

Pacific Plating Ltd., of Toronto, says it has cut its work force to about 70 from 100 as a result of the nickel shortage.

"We didn't have a pound of nickel on the floor at the time the strike started," a spokesman said.

A mines department official said in Ottawa:

"We know the (nickel) inventory position is very desperate in Canada and in the United States, stainless steel producers had possibly a little more in the way of inventories than had been expected."

He discounted the likelihood of a move toward substitutes for nickel.

Inco estimates its nickel production loss at 1,000,000 pounds a day. In Manitoba, its operating Thompson area mines account for 25 per cent of the company's annual production, which was 480,000,000 pounds in 1968.

Inco also reports a daily loss of about 900,000 pounds of copper since the start of the strike.

The Falconbridge strike is resulting in the loss of an estimated 280,000 pounds of nickel a day based on an annual production rate of 95,000,000 just prior to the strike.

The Atlas Steels division of Rio Algom Mines Ltd., of Toronto says there is talk of an "imminent closedown" of its Tracy, Que., plant.

"The Tracy plant, employing about 400 people, produces stainless steel sheet and relies entirely on the availability of nickel," a spokesman for the company said in Welland, Ont.

Murder Charge Reduced

HAMILTON (CP) — Four of five Hamilton-area men charged with the capital murder of a policeman pleaded guilty Wednesday night to reduced charges of manslaughter.

John McClure, 28, James Major, 27, Douglas Maracle, 26, and Murray Feist, 26, were remanded for sentence to Sept. 26. Also to be sentenced on that date is the fifth man, James MacEwan, 37, who pleaded guilty to a lesser count of assisting a police officer.

The five were charged after the shooting death just Dec. 23 of Acting Sgt. John Cameron McMurrick during a scuffle on a service station lot. Another man, James Brechin, also was killed when another policeman's revolver discharged at point-blank range.

The end of the nine-day trial came suddenly after the Ontario Supreme Court jury of 10 men and two women deliberated only 15 minutes before accepting the guilty pleas on the reduced charges.

The acceptance came after Mr. Justice Campbell Grant told the jury he did not believe there was evidence to support the charge of capital murder. He said in his charge the main difficulty in proving the charge was that there was no evidence as to who fired the fatal shot.

DOUBTS INTENT

He said consumption of alcohol would cause him to have some difficulty in finding the five capable of forming a common intent to murder.

Sgt. Joseph Rallo told the jury earlier he was struggling with Major, MacEwan and Brechin when he heard a shot followed by a moan that he recognized to be the voice of Sgt. McMurrich.

Sgt. Rallo said he saw McClure, Feist and Maracle around McMurrich's body but did not see a gun.

The two plainclothes officers, members of a special breaking and entering squad, had gone to investigate a number of cars outside a house.

As they walked toward a house they were stopped by six men who emerged from it. He testified that Brechin was accidentally shot as he and two others were struggling over his (Rallo's) gun.

HIGH COST OF SAFETY

SEATTLE, Wash. (AP) — Cascade Natural Gas Corp. is spending unpleasant odors to its 62,000 customers to introduce a safety measure. Along with the month's bills is a folder picturing a flame. Scratching the flame releases a smell, which is an odor the company says is released into the gas lines. In case of gas leaks, customers will recognize the smell and be warned of danger, Cascade explained.

July 31, 1969

Mr. Harry Cherney, President
Cherney's Furniture World
377 George Street
Peterborough, Ontario

Dear Mr. Cherney:

Due to ill health, and the sale of my land and buildings, I wish to wind up my furniture and appliance business as soon as possible, and with as few gross as possible, thus I accept your offer to buy our entire inventory at a price far less than factory cost.

It is my understanding that you will conduct the sale on the premises, and that you may be adding other merchandise from your own warehouses. Since we are closing up our business, this gives us an opportunity to sell the balance of our stock to our old friends and customers through a reliable company, and in this way, to be able to provide warranty service if it should be required.

Most of our staff will remain to help with the clear-out, and I know that you will find them courteous and helpful. I believe that the disposal of my entire inventory to you will enable me to clear up my business immediately, and will benefit my old customers as well.

Wishing you every success, I am,

Sincerely yours,
STARR FURNITURE COMPANY

Rebel Referees May Have Uneasy Wait

Keep Cool!

Officials Sought 25 Per Cent Hike

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Twenty National Hockey League officials who have adopted a "wait-and-see-if-they-can-do-without-us" policy in their fight for recognition of their association may have an uncomfortable wait.

The wait-and-see attitude was announced at a news conference in Toronto Wednesday by lawyer Joe Kane, spokesman for the 13 referees and seven linesmen who walked out of a training camp in Brantford Monday.

The group is demanding NHL recognition of their National Hockey League Referees' and Linesmen's Association, Kane said.

But in Montreal Wednesday, NHL president Clarence Campbell quickly blew the whistle on the officials' representative.

"To suggest all they are seeking is recognition of their association is not correct," Campbell said.

He said Kane had an opposite view at a Sept. 2 meeting with referee-in-chief Scotty Morrison.

"At that time he (Kane) said the officials were agreeable that official recognition was not important."

Campbell said the officials at that time wanted only "some kind of representative committee to meet with the referee-in-chief and league supervisors to consider complaints."

He said that at the Sept. 2 meeting with Morrison, the off-ary increase of 25 per cent across the board over last year's earnings, fully-funded pensions for all officials in all leagues to be paid in full by the NHL, similarly-financed group medical and life insurance plans, and "numerous lesser requests."

"The referee-in-chief was authorized to advise them that we would recommend the same financial provision for referees and linesmen as had been provided for the players—pensions, group life and health in-

Hanover No Pushover

DELAWARE, Ohio (AP) — Laverne Hanover was the horse to beat today in the 24th running of the Little Brown Jug, pacing classic for three-year-olds.

Heavy rain wiped out Wednesday's Grand Circuit schedule, including the running of the $22,477 Old Oaken Bucket for three-year-old trotters. That headliner, and seven other races, were combined with today's program, making a 21-race card.

Fifteen top colts were set tajchallenge Laverne Hanover for a share of the record purse of $109,731. The winner can also count on a record share, at least $43,891.

That's Hospitality

CLEVELAND HEIGHTS, Ohio (AP) — Reporters arriving to cover the Davis Cup challenge round between the United States and Romania, starting Friday, receiving a hospitality kit in a brightly colored plastic bag containing the following items:

One ball point pen. One-sixteenth ounce French perfume. One package of needles. One can of household oil. And one package of weed killer — enough to cover 1,000 square feet of lawn.

Pontiacs Break Away

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Rick Birmingham pitched a one-hitter Wednesday to give London Pontiacs a 4-1 win over Stratford Hoods in the opening game of their best-of-seven final playoff for the Senior Intercounty Baseball League championship.

The Pontiacs play Orillia Majors in the Ontario Baseball Association Senior A final series Friday in London. The best-of-seven series is tied at one game each.

Nicklaus Saved

SOUTHPORT, England (AP) — Sam Snead, the United States Ryder Cup team captain, said today: "I'm holding my big boys in reserve."

Snead left out millionaire golfer Jack Nicklaus and Dan Sikes of Jacksonville, Fla., from his team for the first of the foursomes starting today.

Snead said: "I would much rather have Jack in the four balls and the singles than playing alternate shots."

Today's matches in the 18th biennial Ryder Cup matches start with Scotch foursomes — players hitting alternate shots. There were four such foursomes starting at 4 a.m. EDT.

Whites Win First

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — Goals by George Armstrong, Brian Glennie and Dave Keon gave Toronto Maple Leafs' Whites a 3-1 victory over the Blues in an inter-squad hockey game Wednesday night.

It was the first of 12 pre-season games scheduled by the National Hockey League Leafs, training here since last Thursday. Mike Walton scored the Blues' only goal in the second period.

Edmonton: 13-5

Lion's Hopes Trampled Again

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions fans watched Wednesday night as their heroes' hopes for splayoff spot in the Western Football Conference were literally trampled in the mud at Empire Stadium.

A crowd of 22,791 sat through a rain storm as Edmonton Eskimos slogged their way in a 13-5 victory in a game marred by fumbles and pass interceptions on both sides.

The victory moved the Eskimos into the third and last playoff spot with six points, one ahead of Winnipeg Blue Bombers. Saskatchewan Roughriders lead the conference with 12 points, two ahead of Calgary Stampeders.

The Lions have two points on one victory and eight losses with seven games remaining.

But whether the Eskimos make the playoffs depends on quarterback Corey Colehour's ability to hit his receivers. Wednesday night, he completed as many passes to the Lions as he did to his team-mates.

Colehour was two-for-nine in the first half, threw two interceptions and still Edmonton was leading 6-5.

One of his completions was to newcomer Tom Nettles, a split end from San Diego State University—a three-yard flip pass for a touchdown at 1:18 of the second quarter.

Dave Cutler, picked up to strengthen the Eskimos' kicking, missed the convert, but was good for the extra point after Jim Thomas ran 64 yards for the other major.

All the B.C. offence could generate was five points on the kicking of Ted Gerela.

The soccer-style placekicker from Burnaby, B.C., booted a field goal from 17 yards and a single to give the Lions a 4-0 lead in the first quarter. He picked up another single point in the second quarter when his field goal from 37 yards hooked wide and rolled out of bounds on the cinder track.

B.C. quarterback Paul Brothers, harassed continually by Edmonton's defensive line, threw two interceptions and completed nine of 19 pass attempts for 128 yards.

The Lions have two points on one victory and eight losses with seven games remaining.

But the Lions were virtually ground to a halt on the soggy turf, picking up only 87 yards.

Dick Dupuis picked off a Brothers pass to set up the first Edmonton touchdown and Nettles threw a fine block to give Thomas some leg room for his run that clinched the game.

Neill Armstrong, coach of the Eskimos who now are three-and-six for the season, was asked what it is about the Lions and his club that seems to bring out the worst in them.

Edmonton managed only four first downs and had a net offence of 108 yards while B.C. picked up 170 yards and 11 first downs.

"Our offensive team doesn't play with that much confidence and our defensive unit has more than it needs."

Swede Rookie Nets Scrimmage Hat Trick

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Juha Widing was born in Finland, grew up and learned amateur hockey in Sweden, moved to Canada five years ago to improve his hockey ability and now is bidding for a regular spot with New York Rangers of the National Hockey League.

The—22-year-old rookie has been impressive at the Rangers' training camp in Kitchener, Ont. He scored three goals in a scrimmage Monday, the first player in camp to do so, and added another Tuesday.

Trying for an assignment at centre, Widing has to compete with regulars Jean Ratelle, Walt Tkaczuk and Orland Kurtenbach. He may not have much chance displacing Ratelle or Tkaczuk, but Widing says he thinks he has a chance against Kurtenbach who is still getting into shape after back surgery.

Widing has good physical qualifications—six feet tall and 190 pounds—and a good record last season with Oshawa of the Central Hockey League. He scored 41 goals and 39 assists in 72 games with the Knights.

Widing said he quickly learned the difference in checking rules between Canada and Sweden when he started out five years ago with the Wheat Kings, a Junior A team in Brandon, Man.

Under Swedish rules, checking is allowed only in the defending zone, but in Canada players check all over the ice.

"I learned to pick up my head pretty quickly," Widing said. "They didn't have to check me —I skated right into them."

Kane Says Minimum Pay Was $4,800 for Handling 90 Games

surance in respect to their NHL services.

"They were advised the association would not be officially recognized and that there would be no 25-per-cent increase across the board. Our position from that time has not changed.

"So far as the officials are concerned, the league considers they have been misled and we are prepared to employ those who want to carry on along with the improvements offered and recommended."

And at the training camp in Brantford, referee-in-chief Morrison added to the pressure on the holdouts by declaring that if all do refuse to sign 1969-70 contracts, "we'll get along without them."

"We require 17 referees and 10 linesmen in the NHL," Morrison said. "There are five American Hockey League linesmen I would not hesitate to use in an emergency."

Morrison has five of the 25-man officiating staff from last season left in camp along with 14 hopefuls.

The pre - season schedule starts today with Toronto Maple Leafs facing St. Louis Blues in Ottawa and gets heavier as it approaches the regular-season opening Oct. 11.

"They have two referees and three linesmen from last year's staff," said Kane. "They also have 1,296 games to handle this year. We are hoping they can't do without us."

Campbell said the NHL governors decided not to recognize the officials' association for two reasons:

"One, the nature of the job. The employment itself requires the utmost independence and absolute freedom from influence by anyone."

"Secondly, at the same time as request for recognition was received and submitted to the governors, there was a list of 17 topics which might be the subject of discussion between the officials and the league.

Campbell's statement regarding pensions appeared to satisfy one of the officials' main complaints. Kane said Wednesday the referees and linesmen had been pressing for pension plans paid for completely by the NHL as is done for players.

Kane said he believes the minimum salary paid an official last season was $4,800 for handling 80 games.

The officials were also unhappy with salaries and the current system of contracts under which officials are guaranteed only 75 per cent of the previous year's income.

Campbell said salaries last season ranged from "over $24,-000 excluding all fringe benefits," to $11,000, "an increase of 32½ per cent for the same people from the previous season."

Gilles Gets Green Light To Continue at Hab Camp

MONTREAL (CP) — Gilles Tremblay, whose bronchial condition sidelined him halfway through last season with Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League, is back on the ice with a "green light" to continue workouts at the team's training camp here.

Tremblay, who had fears about even coming to training camp, took part in his first scrimmage Wednesday afternoon.

Sam Pollock, the Canadiens general manager, said:

"The doctor examined Gilles around noon and gave him the green light to work out with the rest of the fellows. It was encouraging, especially since he had no after-effects."

The 30-year-old left winger worked on a line with a couple of youngsters, Judes Drouin at centre and Phil Roberts at right wing.

Joints Being Oiled for Saturday's 30-mile - or Yard - - Walk

By GEORGE H. CARVER

A gaggle of golfers bunch-driven on longer were clustered within hailing distance of the main oasis at the Bay of Quinte Country Club Saturday afternoon.

Your correspondent sat in the chairman-of-the-board seat one ear cocked in the direction of the distant side encampment from which the dining salon, the other rearing any local sounds.

Members of the panel included Davey Jones, club championship runner-up this year and an ex-McFarland hockey star; Gordie Bell, who blushes when asked his handicap and another ex-Mac who still holds the American Hockey season shutout record of nine zeros, Bill Folwell and Max Haggarty, two topflight linksmen.

From what my lobster radio picked up from the far end of the board, Davey was wholesomely bemoaning the fact he had picked the wrong day to come up with a par-equalling 71 which would have copped the title a short time ago.

Davey shook his head as Bill recalled Jones' 33 on the back nine. "He had more birdies than a pet shop and his putts were dreem shots."

Then the conversation changed as quickly as when that precocious brat barges into the city council meeting shouting "Dad, dad, just coe," in that toothpaste commercial. Hole in the head is right.

The topic veered around to the Round-the-Bay Bunion Derby which is being toed-and-heeled Saturday to help finance the proposed recreation arena.

"I'm going in for ten cents a mile from one sponsor," said Davey, "and I'm looking for another."

The legation comprises a round distance of 30 miles.

Then the Bell tolled in that low sonorous voice, "I think I'll enter if I can find a sponsor."

Der Maxie, who had been deep in thought up to this point, slipped the handicap off his face and hit the table with a thump that shook the ice shackles from five toddies.

"I'll tell you chaps what I will do," he announced.

Four sets of eyes and ears pinned him down.

"I will sponsor Davey and Gordie in the telethon at one dollar per mile."

"You will!" came the chorus.

"Furthermore," Max added, "if aforesaid Jones and Bell complete the 30-mile distance, I'll double the take and make it two dollars per mile."

Davey Jones tonsils unlocked and again the Bell tolled. "It's a deal."

But don't go away. There's more from Der Maxie.

His eyes swept around the board and a hot glance settled on your correspondent. He stabbed a finger in the direction of this creaking agent.

"As for you, ex of the fourth estate, I will sponsor you for two dollars a mile and if you finish I will double the ante."

"You get all the joints oiled — and I mean only the joints — go into retreat — and see what you can earn for the cause. You can make 120 bucks if you don't fall flat for the Flats."

Somebody did some quick mental arithmetic. "Let me see," came the whisper, "one quarter of two bucks is fifty cents. Oh well, every little bit helps."

Again the finger stabbed in my direction. "Remember, no gimmicks. No dog sled, outboard motors, or sneaky carrides. You must walk on your feet, your hands or your knees as long as you walk."

Maxie meant what he said. So on Saturday he'll be the guy for whom the Bell tolls while Gordie will be doing his damdest to keep up with the Jones.'

And if you see toddling along at the fifty-yard mark a double for Laugh-Ins grandpa don't call the guys in the white jackets, just contact the police. They will recognize the body.

Juniors Lower Boom For Title Stranglehold

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

They walked longer to do it last night, but the Ellis Juniors still had batting finesse to lower their Commercial League boom on City Hotel.

The Juniors broke up a 1-0 game with a seven-run barrage in the seventh and final inning for a 8-0 win and 3-1 stranglehold on the city men's softball title.

For six innings, last night's game looked like anything but Monday night's 17-1 farce won by the Juniors. The Juniors exploded for eight runs in the fifth inning of that one.

Last night City's Bob Ethier and the Juniors' Scott Reid were locked in one of the pitching duels everyone had thought would prevail in the series.

The Juniors were nursing a 1-0 lead going into their last bat, that coming on John Campbell's wrong-field triple and Wayne McTaggart's sacrifice fly in the fifth-inning.

Reid, who struck out 14 over the route, hail held City to a pair of singles by Jerry Genereaux and one by Rod Ridley, and only walked one batter.

Then his mates took over. Singles by Bob Parsons, Scott Reid, Steve Ling, Clint Scott's double, two City errors, a walk, and a couple of fielder's choices were the ingredients that baked Juniors' victory cake and possibly cooked City's playoff goose.

Ethier gave up eight hits — four of them in the seventh inning — while striking out four and issuing one free pass.

The Hotelmen will have their backs to the wall in Monday night's fifth game of the series, an 8 p.m. Alemite fixture.

The Original Knight SOLUNAR TABLES Where To Fish And Or Hunt

The schedule of Solunar periods, as printed below, has been taken from Richard Alden Knight's Solunar Tables. Plan your days so that you will be fishing in good territory or hunting in good cover during these times, if you wish to find the best sport that each day has to offer.

The Major Periods are shown in boldface type. These begin at the times shown and last for an hour and a half or two hours thereafter. The Minor Periods, shown in regular type, are of somewhat shorter duration.

Use Eastern Daylight Saving Time.

DRY WHITE RUM
...that's the spirit!
More and more Canadians love our white rum. The reason is crystal clear. And very good-tasting.

Bing Crosby Says: Golf's Winner of the Year
"EASY" WITH LONG IRONS

The long irons (2, 3, 4) are traditionally the most difficult clubs to master. This is because the combination of the longer shaft, the smaller head and the relatively straight face gives many golfers the idea that the ball needs help to get it flying.

Then, don't try, of course. Here are the most sensible tips for long iron play:

Play the ball off the left heel, with your hands slightly behind or even with it at address. From a normal lie, you want a semi-sweeping action into the ball, so start the clubhead back low and slow. Don't over-extend your backswing for extra power—you don't need it. Make your over-all swing comfortable, as if you're hitting a short iron. The ball will fly.

Parsons Make Cup Final

A sharp-angled first half goal by Bob Rutherford was the vehicle that carried Belleville Parsons into the Belleville Cup final of the Bay of Quinte Soccer Association.

Rutherford's goal represented all the scoring as Parsons downed Belleville Rovers 1-0 at Zwick's Island.

The cup final will pit the Parsons against Trenton's Whitley Travellers, tentatively to be played Sunday, Sept. 28.

See-saw with Dodgers

Aaron Belts Braves Back in Front

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Los Angeles led the National League West Division race for a while Wednesday, but Hank Aaron's homer fouled up the whole thing for the Dodgers.

The veteran outfielder clobbered his 42nd homer of the season leading off the 12th inning Wednesday night to give Atlanta Braves a 6-5 victory over the Dodgers.

That ended Los Angeles' eight-hour tenure as head of the tight divisional chase, and put the Braves back into the leaders role they had lost only the night before.

Actually, the Braves were the third team to lead the hot race at one time or another Wednesday.

San Francisco Giants started off the day in No. 1 spot, they dropped to second behind the Dodgers after losing a 2-1 afternoon decision to Houston.

Then Atlanta's victory shoved the Dodgers from first to third, a half-game back of San Francisco and one game back of the Braves.

Cincinnati, meanwhile, is just a half-game behind the Dodgers after clobbing San Diego 19-5.

All four of the leaders are even in the loss column, with 67 each.

Over in the NL East race New York Mets held on to their four-game lead by blanking Montreal 5-0, while second-place Chicago stopped Philadelphia 9-7.

Pittsburgh nipped St. Louis 4-2 in the other NL game.

The Dodgers, who had been the West leader since the first of the month but never in first until Wednesday, used a two-run triple by Jim Lefebvre in the bottom of the eighth to tie it 5-5.

Lefebvre was thrown out at the plate when he tried to score on an overthrow from the outfield for what would have been the winning run.

The Braves had grabbed a 5-3 lead in the top of the inning on a two-out double by Gil Garrido and pitcher George Stone's run-scoring single.
